Freshmen Come To Campus New Semester Begins

Juniata College opens its doors this weekend to the Freshman Class of 1970. In its 91st year, the college achieves a new high in its student enrollment which stands at 1140. Of this amount, approximately 350 constitute the entering freshman class.

The new class is made up of 205 men and 115 women. In addition there are 10 men and 11 women who enrolled for the summer term. The class was selected from 886 applicants. Admissions director Kimney has described the incoming students as "very well" qualified. Less than 14% are below the second fifth of their graduating class in secondary school, he reported, and the College Board average score is 1100 (535 verbal, 570 mathematics).

The freshman report to the college Saturday for Freshman Days, a three day session of receptions, registration and explanations of the academic program and administrative procedures. (See schedule below) In addition to this program, a final orientation will be held consisting of placement tests and registration for approximately 50 students who were unable to attend one of the similar programs during the summer.

The new students at Juniata come from 12 states and 40 counties in Pennsylvania. Also among the freshmen will be a set of twins and a student from the Netherlands.

The students, both old and new, will find many changes on campus. One, which will affect the undergraduates most directly, will be the new office of Student Affairs.

Dr. Charles Schoenherr, who has just been appointed to the newly established position of Dean of Student Affairs, describes the duties as coordinating the student personnel services into a meaningful program.

"Personnel functions have always existed on campus," Schoenherr said, "but we will attempt to co-ordinate and plan the out-of-class activities so they also will contribute to the goal of a liberally educated person, a goal to which Juniata has committed herself."

Working directly with Dr. Schoenherr will be the following: Paul M. Heberling, dean of men; Frances I. Helms, the new dean of women; Robert W. Holmes, coordinator of student activities; Robert E. Faus, minister to students; Robert A. Doyle, director of financial aid and placement; the director of Student Health Services; and the various residence directors.

Also, fifteen new faculty members will be on hand to greet the students when they arrive at a campus that is growing and humming with construction and remodeling. Campus changes include a large new men's residence, a remodeled athletic field and stage lighting changes in Oller Hall.

The loudest humming and most rapid growth is yet to be heard, however, as classes begin Tuesday and academic wheels begin to turn at a vigorous pace.

Judy Lecture Heads Fall Focus Calendar

Three lectures, two theatrical productions, one recital, and an opera are included on Juniata College's Focus on Art and Life calendar of events for the 1966-67 academic year.

An English-born economist will be the first guest Oct. 19 for the coveted Will Judy Lectureship. Kenneth E. Boulding, professor of economic at the University of Michigan since 1949, fits the description of the Judy Lecturer as a leader in education, business and the arts. Boulding is distinguished as a teacher, writer and lecturer and received the American Council of Learned Societies prize for Distinguished Scholarship in the Humanities in 1952. At Michigan he also serves as research director of the Center for Research on Conflict Resolution. He holds the bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from Oxford.

Other lecturers in the 1966-67 Focus series programs include Godfrey Sperling, Jr., bureau news manager for the Christian Science Monitor in Washington (Feb. 2); and Dr. Roger Hilsman, professor of government at Columbia University (Mar. 1). Sperling handles mostly political coverage but he has been recognized for his contributions to aerospace journalism. Dr. Hilsman is one of the nation's leading authorities on foreign affairs and international politics.

The Circle in the Square group returns to the Juniata campus Nov. 17 to present "The White Devil," an unabashed Elizabethan play of terror by John Webster.

February's performance will be a dramatic portrait of the late poet Robert Frost by a New York cast under the direction of Marcella Cisney of the University of Michigan Professional Theatre Program.

Thomas Richner—pianist, organist, musicologist and educator—will present a piano-organ recital April 18. He is an associate professor at Douglass College, Rutgers.

The Goldovsky Grand Opera Theater will present Verdi's "Rigoletto" Dec. 2, with a company of 50 singers, orchestra and chorus participating.

The Focus series for 1966-67 will offer a festival of American films in three parts during April, depicting outstanding films of the 'teens, 'twenties, and 'thirties.

Three exhibitions also are scheduled. The 14th National Print Exhibition will open Oct. 14 for one month and include graphic work from Brooklyn Museum's National Print competitions. Other exhibitions will be "Maine—50 Artists of the 20th Century" from Nov. 28 to Dec. 18, and "Prints by Great Masters from April 13 to May 4."

WJC Rejuvenated By Grant

WJC's plight is looking up. After a lengthy period of its being inoperative the campus radio station experienced a difficult struggle last semester to return to a normal procedure of broadcast, only to find that a run-down equipment made operation severe lack of funds to replace the almost impossible.

But WJC's struggle has not been in vain. A recent grant from the administration of $2700 made possible the purchase much of the needed equipment.

The rejuvenation of the station is being completed through the efforts of Terry Wickham, station manager, and John Tlusch, assistant manager.

Hopefully broadcasts should begin in time for WJC to extend an early welcome to the incoming freshmen. The station managers wish to invite any freshmen interested in working with radio, experienced or not, to stop by the studio in Brumbaugh basement. Several executive positions are available, technical help is welcomed, and disc jockeys are needed.

JC Choir Arrives Early To Prepare For Busy Season

Among the early arrivals to campus were approximately 50 members of the Juniata Touring Choir last Sunday. The choir is under the direction of Professor Bruce Hirsch, who recently returned from a California vacation.

Had one seen the choir members bright and early the Monday morning after they arrived, one would not have found them singing as would be expected, but rather, in the midst of a calisthenics routine on the athletic field. Singing followed with section rehearsals on later morning and full rehearsals in the evenings. Softball often occupied the afternoons. A picnic was scheduled for the choir Wednesday afternoon.

Plans for the coming season include plans for a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "Trial By Jury", for the annual tour, the traditional Christmas program, and a presentation of the Broadway hit "Brigadoon" in the spring.

Vigorous calisthenics along with diligent rehearsals apparently are what lead the way to an exciting season for the choir.

Ph. D's Awarded To J.C. Grads

A total of 23 doctor of philosophy degrees have been awarded to graduates of Juniata College during 1964 and 1965, according to information received recently from the National Academy of Sciences, National Research Council in Washington.

Juniata has always ranked high among private liberal arts colleges in the production of graduates who obtained doctor's degrees, according to president Ellis. Commenting on the report just received he said that "the number of our students who go on to graduate study is a matter of great pride. It tells us a great deal about the quality of our educational effort on behalf of the students."

In the group of recent doctorates two are in music, four in the humanities, two in social science and fifteen in natural science and mathematics.

Among the recipients from the local area and the subject for which they received doctorates are: Ronald D. Chamberlin, Hollidaysburg, chemistry; William J. Collins, Orbisonia, entomology; Leroy S. Forney, Martinsburg, organic chemistry; Carl A. Lindsay, Lewistown, industrial & personnel psychology; Robert C. Moore, Aitch, topology; Gene E. Sease, Portage, Religion & Theology; and Gordon M. Shedd, R.D., Petersburg, English.

Alumni Tour Is Great Success

The first tour of Europe by Juniata alumni was a huge success according to Harold B. Brumbaugh, vice president for development here, who acted as a host guide. The tour, which extended from July 19 to August 9 was such a success that 2 similar tours are being planned for next summer, one again for alumni, and one for Parents and students. Both future tours will be handled by the Weimer-Oller Travel Agency, the agency which handled this summer's tour, and Mr. Brumbaugh.

The economical, traditional grand tour's itinerary included the cities Rome, Paris, London, Venice, and sightseeing throughout the Riveira, the hill towns and lakes of Italy, the Swiss, and French Alps, and the Netherlands. The trip to and from the European continent was conducted by air, schedules being met despite the airlines strike. Motorcoach and express train carried the alumni within the continent. One of the highlights of the trip was a ride in the crack Rheingold Express from Lucerne to Amsterdam.

Mr. Brumbaugh felt that the reason for such a successful trip was the sincere congeniality developed among the 46 persons in the tour, congeniality which was the result of a common bond, their connection with Juniata. This common bond is a factor usually lacking on most ordinary tours. A great number of classes, from 1915 to 1965, were represented on the tour, which was conducted by 2 couriers and 2 conductors.

The main features of a tour of this type are sightseeing and the opportunity to attend entertainment, programs representative of the various countries.

An exciting 45 degree angle cog rail train ride up Mt. Pilatus above Lucerne ended with a breathtaking view of the Swiss Alps.

Ironically, the Juniations on tour met other Juniations in Europe. Dr. John Baker, chairman of Juniata's Board of Trustees, was in Geneva at the time of Juniata's welcome dinner and was able to attend.

At the Baths of Caracalla, an ancient Roman public bath now converted into an opera theatre, the tour met, by chance, two former Juniata students, Carolyn Ambler and Sally Helms. One of the tour's couriers from Holland had studied at Strasbourg and had become acquainted with several Juniata students on the Junior Year Aboard program.

The entertainment programs offered varied from Roman opera to Tyrolean Dancing to a Shakespeare production in Stratford on Avon in England after which the group returned to New York.

It was the end of a delightful and successful tour, and next summer's plans look just as much so.

Hazing ... A Good Evil

by Sandie Baer

Hazing, that inevitable curse born of tradition continues until next Wednesday when the Class of 1970 can remove their dinks and traverse the campus, unlabeled by name and hometown, without fear of attack by upperclassmen gleefully devilish and ready to pounce upon the unwary. Although interest is already dwindling, the sounds of sporadically but-toning frosh, the "Yea Juniata, . . . Rah, Rah, Rah," jingle starting to jangle the nerves of all those concerned, still ring out as clearly as the bells of Founder's when sophomores order.

The theory of hazing seems to be that by pitting the ingenuity of the sophomores against the bewilderment of the freshmen, some obscure good can be derived. In other words, the frosh are made to feel at home and are introduced to the friendly atmosphere of the campus by the sneaky, almost naughty, tricks of the sophomores. Note how one of the group pictured, who apparently escaped the inherently good punishment, appears to be completely bored and disgusted with the evil of hazing that the other three victims are neither hearing, seeing, nor speaking of.

Though hazing may have its drawbacks (from a freshman point of view), would the freshman still be a freshman all the way, and would the sophomores be sophomores? If hazing were abolished altogether wouldn't something be missing? Therefore we say . . . button, Frosh!

Students named to the Second Honors List are listed by class: Seniors: Jacqueline Morelock, chemistry; Beth Ann Furrer, history; Carolyn Ambler, psychology; Judy Steink, Spanish; Shirley Hoover, chemistry; Harriet Huggins, elementary education; Judith Muir, English; Patricia Furman, Spanish; Annette Del-baugh, home economics; Glenda Wal-lace, biology; Trudy Axsmith, ele-mentary education; John Funk, history; Susan Riddle, Spanish; Elaine Siena, elementary education; Kath-ryn Kenders, biology. Sophomores: Henry Shoenenthal, biology; L. Sue Esch, mathematics; Philip Eatough, biology; Terrie Campbell, English; Nancy Barnhart, economics; Donna Hunter, history; Paul Van Orman, German; Margaret Taylor, biology; Carolyn Biss, home economics; Linda Hartman, mathematics; Frederick Gutshall, history; Judith Heberling, history; Darwin Kenepg, chemistry; Paul Baker, history; Richard Buchan-man, psychology; Paul Leber, biology; Joan Edwards, history; Irmgard Niebuhr, elementary education; Stephanie Speer, elementary education; Charlotte Barnes, elementary educa-tion. Gospel According To Peanuts Becomes New Word In Convo

Is Charlie Brown's "Good Grief!" an exclamation of funda-mental anguish? Does Linus' blanket have a deep symbolic meaning? Such questions may sound like ways to take the fun out of Charles Schultz's famous comic strip Peanuts. But Robert L. Short, Tuesday evening's convocation speaker, argues not only amusingly but convincingly that Peanuts indeed has intentional theological significance.

In his paperback, The Gospel Ac-cording To Peanuts, Short contends that the cartoon is a modern variety of prophetic literature, full of useful parables for the times. Behind the daily wit of Peanuts says Short, lies an essentially Christian view of reality.

In an illustrated lecture Short in-terprets the comic strip's prophetic meaning from a theological perspec-tive and highlights his remarks with selected cartoons. The Gospel Ac-cording To Peanuts was expanded from a series of such lectures which drew many favorable comments from theologians and educators. The lec-ture ideas were printed in articles in various magazines and finally put in book form.

Short received his B.A. degree from the University of Oklahoma and a B.D. from Southern Methodist University. While completing an M.A. degree in English at North Texas State University, Short also

Plans For Old Science Hall Related By Gerald Quigg

Parents of Juniata College students have taken action toward the support of the social sciences and humanities on the growing campus. In a meeting with President Calvert Ellis recently, the executive committee of the Juniata College Parents Association agreed to support the academic classroom modernization program as the parents project for the coming year. Juniata Vice President for Development, Harold Brumbaugh and Director of Development, Gerald Quigg, outlined plans for the enlargement and remodeling of the old Science Building, where the social sciences and the humanities will have new quarters. The 1915 facility will be modernized and two new wings added to the existing structure. Mr. Quigg noted that the new H shape building will provide classroom space for divisions I and II and will include laboratories for psychology and for statistics. Modern offices for faculty members and air conditioning of the entire building are additional fea-tures. The $800,000 cost of the build-ing plans has already been partially met by a $248,000 grant to the col-lege under the Higher Education Col-legialities Act of 1963.

HS Students Teach JC Students How To Teach HS Students

Thirteen seniors are having visions of the incidents in Up the Down Staircase happening to them as they do their student teaching during this, their professional, semester.

Six area high schools are hosting the associate teachers for the eight-week period ending November 4. The students, the field in which they are teaching and the schools follow.

Sandy Andoniades (English), Mary-dy Deane (Latin), and Bob Pascale (Spanish) are working in Huntingdon Area High. At Tyrone Area High are Christine Bailey (Latin) and Sharon Morges (Spanish). Trudy Grose (French), and Carol Heisey (history) travel to Mt. Union High. Bobbie Edwards (Spanish), Carolyn Smiley (German) and Jean Wermuth (Eng-lish) are teaching in the Hollidays-burg Community Area High. Judy Muir (English) is the student teacher in Juniata Valley High School. The only junior high hosting student teachers is Keith Junior High in Altoona where Darla Houseman (English) and Marcia Highthouse (German) are teaching.

Nine Significant Resolutions Derived From Conference

Toby Dills and Jim Donaldson

Senate President, Jim Donaldson, opened the 1966-67 Leadership Con-ference, September 15, with a wel-come to the members of the student body and faculty present. The re-treat at Camp Blue Diamond was organized by Toby Dills, Senate Vice-President, so that leaders in all student activities might define campus issues and initiate action in the student interest. After two days of dis-cussion, the conference published the following resolutions:

1. We of the 1966-67 Leadership Conference hereby resolve to more actively support Student Government in its efforts to represent the Student Body to its campus community. We further recommend that in their con-sideration of issues the Senate itself make an effort to involve more thoroughly those people to whom those issues are directed.

2. We recognize the need of the Senate to incorporate a more repre-sentative legislative body as well as to continue performance of existing administrative functions. We there-fore resolve that the Senate consider reorganization of the Student Gov-ernment on the basis of elected ex-ecutive and legislative branches, with a separate, nonvoting administrative cabinet.

3. We recommend that an investi-gation be made of the Student Judi-cial's function for the purpose of clarification and/or revision of stu-dent regulations and policies, more effective enforcement of these pol-icies, and possible reorganization of the judicial body. We propose that an open meeting of the present Judi-cial and any interested students, faculty, or administrative members be held to make such an investigation.

4. We resolve to develop our con-cern with the academic life of Juniata by following by last year's Memo to the Faculty with continued interest and concrete ideas, and by supporting the Education Committee in the rais-ing of money for the creation of a student sponsored scholarship fund for disadvantaged students.

5. Recognizing that many clubs at Juniata have become inactive and that many are suffering the pains of senility and desiring to rejuvenate club activities, we recommend:

1. That all club charters issued by the Senate be considered for suspension by the Senate for the purpose of re-evaluation of their constitutions and investi-gation of their effectiveness and value.

2. That charters will be re-issued by the Senate to accept-able clubs.

3. That during the suspension period all clubs will be permitted to operate as previously estab-lished until new charters are forthcoming.

6. In order to assess current stu-dent opinion concerning issues such as those involving Totem Inn, WJC, religious functions on campus, we re-quest that the Senate act immediately to formulate and distribute a general questionnaire to all Juniata students.

7. We recognize that the Student Coffee House has the potential to make a valuable contribution to the college community. We resolve that an increased effort be made by the student body and the Senate to realize the potentialities and lend support to this student-sponsored project.

8. We resolve to strengthen the student interests in Totem Inn through renewed student support of the Totem Inn Commission. We further suggest that this commission investigate the subject of smoking in Tote as well as the problem of hours for the building and snack bar.

9. We pledge full support to the program of JWFS recommending that the committee investigate new possi-bilities to which funds may be given. We also request the use of films, posters, and personnel visitations from the recipient organizations to more adequately inform the student ways in which their contributions are used.

MAIL BOX NUMBERS

All students are reminded that they should inform all persons writing to them to use the student's box number. This includes relatives and friends as well as magazine and newspaper subscrip-tions. A student will keep the same mail box number throughout his stay at Juniata. Any mail which does not have a number on it will probably be delayed, but all mail will be delivered. All intra-college mail should also carry mail box numbers. A list of the mailbox numbers will be posted soon.

TALENT NIGHT

All students should be on the look out for the announcement of the tryouts for the talent show to be put on for Parent's Day. The dates of the tryouts will be posted soon. For any additional informa-tion see Norma Jean Edger in 342 Oneida.

Statement of Policy

As an independent element on campus, The Juniatian, apart from and yet encompassing the concerns of administration, faculty and stu-dents, groups related by the com-mon interest of the higher educa-tional experience in its entirety, restates its policy and purpose. The Juniatian functions by re-ported and discussing campus and non-campus events; by con-tributing to the well being of the college; and by providing an un-dergraduate experience in reason-able and effective expression. The new staff will strive throughout the coming year to continue the appearance of progressive trend recent-ly initiated.

Meaningful Leadership

The 1966-67 Leadership Conference stands as one of the finest examples of the significance of student leadership on this campus. (See story; page one.) After considerable meaningful discourse among the participating members of the conference, nine resolutions were passed on issues that are each worthy of their own editorial comment. Naturally this is impossible at the moment.

The number and tenor of the resolutions is indicative of serious concern, not limited just to various trivialities of campus life. Certain of the resolutions do concern limited campus issues; to come out of the proceedings of the conference will be debate on such topics as smoking in Tote and clubs' status. On the other hand, emphasis was placed on broader subjects as the proposal for the Senate Education Committee concerning the scholarship for disadvantaged students, and the pledge of support for the Juniata World Service Fund program were received.

Not only does the draft of resolutions suggested by the conference deserve merit. The manner in which the conference as a whole was conducted is worthy of recognition, as the conference chairman, Senate Vice President Toby Dills, handled the proceedings with skill, and as the participants in the discussion debated in a reasonable and orderly fashion. Only through this kind of effort was the conference able to end as the commendable event that it was, from which, because of the quality of the deliberation, much real action in relation to the issues will be derived.

A Thanks From Support or Abolish Dean Helms

I want to thank so very much all students who served during Freshman Days as guides, expert stevedores, punch pourers, linen keepers and as drivers, hosts and hostesses for the President's Reception for new students. Special mention goes also to the dedicated ones who stood at the front of Founders Porch and knowledgeably as to just helping to make the freshmen feel at what was coming off, and to the unsung hero who showed one of the freshmen women how to get to the infirmary during an emergency on Monday morning.

Many of the parents commented to me how grateful they were that there were students on hand on Saturday to help in so many ways—to show new students where to go for such things as room keys, meal tickets and laundry information. A number of the parents also said that they had had occasion to take older brothers and sisters to other colleges and found that the spirit of helpfulness wasn't as fine elsewhere as we have here at Juniata! The Residence Directors, too, were greatly appreciative of the help and join with me in thanking each of you.

A very special thanks to all of you who have made my new ones feel so at home.

Sincerely,
Frances I. Helms (Miss)

'Round Campus

Delegates to Leadership Conference evidenced a distinct desire to inspire liberal thinking on campus this semester. Led by Deans Helms and Shoenert, the students regrettably abandoned their separate tents to engage in a mixed sleeping party in the camp dining hall. The weather, it seems, was simply too cold. Discussions during the day proved to be more profitable. The following comments are particularly demonstrative of student government's hopes for this year:

Bob Gray, Religious Activities Chairman—I don't hope "to make Christianity a more pleasing thing."

In response to Bob Gray—"Does anyone here know anything about the religious clubs?"

Marty Utts, Social Activities Chairman—"Every weekend will be more than just a dance."

About Tote—"Ten years ago student initiative built Tote. 'Now all students can do is litter the place.'"

Mr. Briggs on participation in campus clubs—"Is there 'more value in a closely knit club without an established purpose than in a loosely structured club with a stated goal?'"

Gary Rowe—"There are too many afraid of controversy on this campus. Students forget that through controversy comes progress."

Dr. Cherry—"Let's not go through The Cause again this year."

Bruce Russell, in regard to Senate reorganization—"The object is to get the best done doing."

President Calvert Ellis represented the college in the Rutgers University Bicentennial Convocation. About 20,000 persons from all over the world are expected to attend the 200th anniversary convocation, which will highlight the year-long celebration of the Rutgers Bicentennial, on the Queen's Campus, New Brunswick, on September 22.

Girls interested in trying out for Majorettes should contact Donna Scott in South or Sandy Boose in Lusher.

The Alma Mater during Wednesday's convocation disintegrated into an embarrassing mumble. After the first verse, only Frosh with Pathfinders in hand sang out clearly.

Juniata's unsung heroes, the maintenance staff, have been busy readying campus for the opening of the fall semester. Norman J. Brumbaugh House received a new white look and the bleachers for the football field have been rebuilt. Dedication of the new dormitory—Tussey and Terrace Complex—will take place on October 22, Parents Day.

School has started and it is time to get the Intramural program rolling. There are four activities planned to start in October. Why not take two hours a week from your study schedule to come out to relax and enjoy yourself.

There will be a handball league for both faculty and students. This will be in the form of a doubles league or tournament. If interest is sufficient, a singles tournament can be held later in the year.

The seventh annual Juniata college tennis tournament will be held from October 1 through October 22. Singles competition is open to all college students. Doubles competition is open to anyone connected with the school; students, faculty, and administration. Anyone interested should see Mr. Post or check the bulletin boards for further information.

For the second time in Juniata's history there will be a duplicate bridge tournament for everyone interested, coeds and faculty included. Faculty members bring your spouse (or friend) and students bring your friend (male or female).

Those interested in participating in the above activities should sign up on the IM bulletin board in Tote. No entries will be accepted after Friday, September 30.

In addition, for the male students there will be the regular touch football league, starting October 3. Each team has six men, with a maximum of twelve men on the roster. Rosters should be turned in to Larry Bieber, Room 233 Tussey, or Box 42 by September 30. They should include the team captain and any time which, due to labs, etc. the team will not be able to play.

Open tryouts for "Tea House of the August Moon" will be held on September 28, 29, and 30 at 7:15 in Oller Hall.

Weiss of Athens. Flanking him at the halfback slots will be 6-0, 183 pound Randy Ralston of East Hartford, Conn., and 6-2, 200 pound John Stultz, an AllStater at Hollidaysburg High. Rounding out the backfield will be senior tri-captain Mario (Bo) Berlanda, three letter winner fullback from Willow Grove. Expected to line up front on offense will be Denny Albright, junior from Ephrata, at right end; Bob Pascale, senior from Bristol, at split end; Terry Burk, junior transfer from Westminster, Md., and Jeff Power, junior from Bryn Mawr, at tackle; Lance Shomo, sophomore from Johnstown, and Ron Shaw, senior tri-captain from Philadelphia, at guard; and Regis Schivley, junior from Elizabethtown, at center.

Both Pascale and Weiss broke several JC records in passing department. Weiss had 75 completions in 126 throws. Pascale set a new record for pass receptions, 36 with 472 yards gained.

The defensive team, led by senior tri-captain Gary Sheppard of Philadelphia at deep back, will include Randy Offner, sophomore from Huntingdon, and Chris Sherk, junior from Mt. Joy, at the safety position; and freshman Pete Straup, from King of Prussia, at the other deep back slot.

On the front wall, averaging 195 pounds, will be Dave Fleck, sophomore from Coraopolis; juniors Nate Mitchell of Mt. Union and Ron Feyer of Pottstown at the end slots; Rick Stouland, junior from Wilmington, Del., and Cliff Berg, sophomore from Doylestown, at tackle; Bob Vanyo, a junior from Johnstown at middle guard; Dave Lauris, freshman from McKeesport, at the linebacker position.

Ready to fill in are Jerry Confer and Terry Turnbaugh at quarterback; Steve Horner, Bob Pouchier, and Regis Beighley at halfback; Jeff Barnes at split end; Dick Feigles at center; Ed Rodgers at guard; Grant Lee at linebacker; and Denny Graham at safety.

Missing from the lineup this season will be senior Jim Sutton of Woodlyn who was a quarterback for three seasons with the Indians. Plagued by knee injuries, Sutton decided to hang up his playing togs. As a sophomore, Sutton was the leading passer with 30 touchdowns in 58 attempts. He is serving as a student coach along with Bill Holland, on the squad the past four seasons, who is completing his academic requirements this semester.

During halftime ceremonies at the football game, JC's cross-country team will be after their eleventh win against no defeats over Albright.

Leading Coach Mike Snider's runners is sophomore Rick Beard of Annville who was the Indians' top pointgetter last season. Five other lettermen head the young squad this year: co-captains Tom Berkley (junior) at Somerset and Tom Creighton (senior) of Altoona; Win Harris (junior) of Strafford, and Jim Massingham (junior) of Oreland. Three upperclassmen who did not run in 1965 but who have been showing well in practice are Brian Conley (Huntingdon), and Mike Mizitti (Bergenfield, N.J.) both juniors; and Phil Sipling (York), a sophomore.

Freshmen prospects include Jeff Johnston (King of Prussia); John Snyder (Lebanon) and Kerry Stanley (Bethlehem). Aubrey Shenk (Cleona) may sit out the first few meets with shin injuries.

Denny Cowher, catcher for the Juniata College Indians last season, hit .234 for the Sturgis (South Dakota) Titans in the Basin League this summer. Playing both the infield and outfield, Cowher had 33 hits, including four two-baggers, three triples, one homer and 21 runs batted in. Last spring, Cowher batted .333 and as a catcher for the Juniata Indians led the triples column in the college division of the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau. He also received honorable mention on the Middle Atlantic Conference team.

Dean Morley Mays

Dean Mays Leaves JC To Be E-Town President

October 1, 1966, Dr. Morley Mays, vice-president for academic affairs and dean of the college, will begin his new post as President of Elizabethtown College in Elizabethtown.

Dean Mays, a Juniata College graduate, has spent 24 years here. Immediately after graduation he taught English for six years at Juniata while spending his summers studying for his A.M. degree in English at the University of Pittsburgh. For five years at Bridgewater College in Virginia he held a teaching position and was assistant to the president. He taught briefly at the University of Chicago and at the University of Virginia, where he received his Ph.D. in philosophy. Here at Juniata he became Dean of the College in 1948. In addition Dean Mays became Vice-President for Academic Affairs in 1963 and taught philosophy until four years ago. His name is listed in Who's Who in America.

Dean Mays also holds a number of positions elsewhere. He is a director of the Union National Bank and Trust Company of Huntingdon. Formerly he held positions as chairman of the Huntingdon County Planning Commission, trustee of the Huntingdon County Public Library, chairman of the United Fund of Huntingdon County. He is American Chairman of the Board of Directors of Bethany Theological Seminary, Oak Brook, Illinois, American Secretary of the Annual Conference of the Church of the Brethren, and American Report Analyst for the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the Middle States Association.

Dean Mays also finds time for his hobbies of stamp collecting and photography. He has traveled quite extensively and has visited Europe, The Soviet Union, The Middle East and The West Indies.

Looking ahead to his new position he said, "I'm going to my new position with great enthusiasm and expectancy. Elizabethtown is a young college, its history being wholly within this century. Ten years ago they started with 461 students; this year they start with 1400. So the growth, you see, has been very rapid and is indicative of a bright future."

Concerning his working experiences with Juniata students Dean Mays said, "The students certainly are very favorable as to their personal qualities and qualities as to the work they do as students."

JCF Tutoring Continues Due To Last Year's Success

The program of tutoring the underprivileged and neglected children of the area which was initiated last year by the Juniata Christian Fellowship working with the Salvation Army in Huntingdon continues this semester as a result of the response and considerable achievement reached in the previous program. The new director of the Salvation Army, Lieutenant Baillie, is looking forward to his first experience with the program as Colonel Von Brunt, previous director was transferred elsewhere.

J. C. students spend one afternoon a week as a tutor with a child, not just teaching him academic skills but becoming a much needed friend. Nancy Pentland, chairman of the tutoring program stressed this fact as she said, "Tutoring is a manpower. These kids have lots of needs. There are concerns about their academic needs, but social and spiritual needs are often more important. It's a big-buddy kind of thing."

She went on to say that the results last year were very favorable; that what the tutors have been doing is truly worthwhile. Academically, all of the children improved as a result of the efforts of the tutors in being both teachers and big buddies.

The children's ages and aptitudes cover such a wide range that in many

The new program, being conducted on a semester basis will begin Monday, October 3. Those persons who are interested in doing this type of work are asked to contact Nancy Pentland.

Conference Resolution Causes Senate Reorganization Discussion

by Prudence Engle

The resolution passed at this year's Leadership Conference concerning the reorganization of the Student Government is the result of two problems existing in the present Senate structure. One problem is a lack of time on the part of the Senate chairmen in which to carry out all the demands of their office. The other is a feeling that there is a lack of total campus representation.

Concerning a lack of time, the 13 Senators, four officers and nine chairmen, feel that the administrative duties of their chairs demand too much of their time. They have little opportunity to investigate the various campus issues and concerns which their legislative duties require. There is a growing concern that the Senate is not doing enough to initiate legislation, but is merely becoming an instrument with which to carry out the various duties of the chairmen.

The feeling that the present Senate is not truly representative arises from the nature of Juniata College and the structure of the Senate. Because of the size of Juniata and the lack of specific groups such as sororities and fraternities, a student's class becomes his basis for identity. However, as it is now organized, the Senate is composed of juniors and seniors only. As stated by Senate President, "Thirteen people can't adequately serve as representatives of the campus." Thus, with the present system, a large portion of the student body is at least theoretically, ~~unrepresented~~.

Although the resolution to consider reorganization received unanimous support at Leadership Conference, many ideas are still being discussed and several major problems must be settled. The proposed reorganization is to be based on elected executive and legislative branches, with a separate, nonvoting administrative cabinet. The Legislature would be composed of elected representatives from each of the four classes. This legislature would deal specifically with the legislative duties of the present Senate which include the making of policies, approving appointments, raising and discussing of campus issues, and issuing charters to various campus organizations. The administrative duties of the present chairmen would be handled by the Cabinet. The executive branch would serve as coordinator for these two bodies.

While the division of the Senate into both legislative and administrative bodies, and a resulting division of duties is an important step, there has been a great deal of discussion as to how the Cabinet should be selected. At least two main methods have been proposed. One is to present a slate of candidates. This method would list a candidate for president of the Senate and candidates for each of the cabinet chairs, together. A vote for the presidential candidate would automatically represent a vote for each of the cabinet candidates associated with him. This method may easily lead to a "party system" on campus. A question is whether Juniata's student body could adequately support a system of two or three parties. Another problem is whether or not there are enough interested students to provide two or more slates of competent candidates. A second means of selecting the Cabinet would be through appointment by the President with the approval of the Legislature. This method also presents some problems. There is the possibility that a clique could develop through presidential appointment. However, the size of the student body would make such a trend recognizable and the needed legislative approval could defeat this. A more serious difficulty is that of appointing dedicated chairmen. Although those students appointed should be competent and interested, a chairman who is simply appointed may not give his office the attention and energy of one who through a desire and belief in his capabilities campaigned for and was elected to his office.

The proposed reorganization carries many benefits and several problems. The discussion concerning Student Government reorganization will take place in open sessions of the Senate. The exact dates for discussion will be announced. All students are urged to attend and contribute their ideas and criticisms. Reorganization is being undertaken for the betterment of the entire campus community. The final decision regarding reorganization will be made through a campus-wide referendum. As a result of this, a new Senate Constitution will be written. It is this Senate's goal to act upon the reorganization proposal and thus insure a more representative and more effective student government for Juniata.

Equipment Purchased With WJC'S Administration Grant

WJC, the college radio station, has recently made vast improvements in the quality and efficiency of their broadcasting equipment, made possible by an appropriation of $2700 from the administration of the college. The need for such a grant was recognized by the college as a result of the interest of the student body, both participating and listening, and also because of the past progress of the station.

With this amount of money the station has bought the equivalent of $8500 worth of equipment. A transistor audio console and two sixteen inch turntables were purchased used from a Philadelphia recording station. A States tape cartridge machine, a Viking tape deck, five new microphones, two strips of patch panel, one Am tuner and other additional accessories were secured with the remaining sum of money.

George Germann from Huntingdon's station WHUN, has spoken to the WJC affiliates and has offered suggestions, advice and material. The WJC staff anticipates the development of several programs this year, such as: a discussion of the art programs by Prof. Barbash, a preview to the Focus series, and discussion programs where students may voice their opinions about campus activities or current news. The weekend of October 8, the play Medea will be broadcasted for those who desire not to read it.

Members of the WJC welcome any serious complaints or suggestions concerning the operation of the station.

Salut co-managers, Don Armstrong and Gary Rowe, plan an open discussion October 5 to follow the October 4 JC movie presentation, The Silence, at the coffee house. Students and profs are encouraged to attend and comment on the controversial Bergman film.

The crowd at the Albright game waited expectantly for the motor-cycles to roar out of the pep club's tepee before triumphant JC fans. Indians war-danced around the track, but, unfortunately, no motor-cycles appeared. Nevertheless, tomorrow's fans are eager to see an Indian victory.

Juniors and sophomores are reminded that class pictures are to be taken this Sunday afternoon/October 2. Check campus bulletin boards for scheduled time listings.

Interested in a break from study and campus activities? Carnegie Art Gallery offers an interesting contrast to ordinary student diversions. At present, the gallery displays colleges and paintings by Art Studio students and a graphic design exhibit of Bernard Taylor. Recently appointed Director of Public Information for Juniata, Mr. Taylor exhibits pamphlets and bulletins he designed for Bucknell, Lycoming, and Juniata. Several of the colorful wall displays include both the rough copy of the design and the published version.

Letter to the Editor . . .

Dear Editor,

The past three years have seen the development of a literary magazine of fairly high quality here at Juniata. This development has been paralleled, and to a great extent caused by, an increasing student interest in creative writing. KVASIR serves as an indication of the range and quality of creative writing at Juniata. As such it provides an opportunity for students to publish their work, and also for editors to gain experience in editing and creating of a literary magazine. Its goal is not merely to be a passive receptacle of student contributions, but to act as a catalyst, and to foster student creativity and activism in a variety of areas.

In view of these objectives the KVASIR staff is organizing a number of KVASIR workshops, open to all, where students who have been writing can come together and discuss and criticize their work. Further, we want to encourage all those who are interested in discussing creative art, in an informal atmosphere, to come and contribute to these workshops. In addition to creative writing, KVASIR is interested in creative art, music composition, and photography. It is hoped that items from these areas can be included in the next KVASIR to be published this fall.

The Pecking Order Fiasco

Perhaps some remarks made in a story that was run last week, Hazing . . . A Good Evil, deserve to be retracted, or at least revised, in the light of the events during the lawn party held Friday, September 23, in honor of the Freshmen. Various circumstances caused the whole campus pecking order to be completely disrupted.

Is hazing a good evil if the tradition degenerates into downright violence? What with the lady wrestlers and clouds of shaving cream and too many shoe-polished fingers, even as an impartial observer, one felt a definite fear of being attacked while watching dinks and tennis shoes flying from the flag pole. The atmosphere prevailing over Oller lawn was not the one of friendliness that the hazing custom is to create. Those who were more or less in charge appeared shocked, while everyone else, depending upon degree of participation, seemed to be rather bewildered or disturbingly beligerent, the beligerence causing such damage as broken glasses and outright physical injury.

Just how everything started is a question that is yet to be answered precisely. The Sophomores made the invitation and the Freshmen arrived—too well prepared, (informed, it has been suggested, by the Juniors) for something other than the simple fun and games had been the party entertainment in years gone by.

The idea of hazing has been misinterpreted and seems to be the source of more and more disenchantment with each entering class. If hazing is to consist of the nice, clean fun that is designed to make the frosh feel at home, and this method achieves its purpose, then hazing cannot meet with anything but whole hearted approval. However, when boredom and embarrassment on the part of the Freshmen; malicious, undirected vengeance for vengeance's sake on the part of everybody; and other obscure factors become the determinants which result in such a shameful fiasco as that witnessed last Friday night, it would indicate that the matter, hazing as a general issue, should be subject to serious review. This is not to say that hazing should necessarily be dispensed with, or to make any other kind of revisional suggestion, but only to state that the problem merits considerable attention from those whose responsibility it is.

The Silence

by Maxine Phillips

"Of course, we have to educate the audience. . . . At first you give the audience a pill that tastes good. And then you give them some more pills with vitamins, but with some poison, too. Very slowly you give them stronger doses."

—Ingmar Bergman
With the showing Tuesday night of Ingmar Bergman's The Silence comes the strongest dose of this controversial film-maker that Juniata students have as yet been exposed to. The process started three years ago when Through A Glass, Darkly played in town. The following year brought Winter Light, a film whose theme is better expressed in the French translation of the title as The Communicants. These two, each dealing with a different facet of man's attempt to communicate with God, culminate and are resolved in The Silence.

The silence, one critic has said, is that which exists "between and within beings when faith has failed." The specific human beings in this case are: Esther, multilingual but dying in a country whose language she will never understand; Anna, tormenting her lesbian sister by sleeping with a pick-up; and Johan, Anna's son, constantly searching the hotel corridors for release from the horror around him.

The three are forced by Esther's illness to stop their journey and remain in a hotel in a nameless town in a country derived totally from Bergman's imagination. Cut off from normal human contact through language, each attempts in his own fashion to break the barrier. Through sign language with the hotel porter Esther begins to learn a few words of the strange tongue. Driven to a purely animal level, Anna makes love to one of the inhabitants of the country. The boy, Johan, experiments through the traditional child's outlet of play, with a performing troupe of dwarfs.

But Esther is dying. Her sole legacy will be a list to Johan entitled, "Words in a Foreign Language." Anna, having rejected and despised the love offered her by her sister, is anxious to leave. The film ends as it began—on a train, in an unknown land, a silent compartment, lacking one person.

In 1963 The Silence shocked many of Bergman's country-men by its untempered frankness in depicting the relationship between the two sisters. The version released for export in this country lacks the shock value of such scenes. The hardest emotional impact comes, rather, from the use of silence, broken only by the sounds of meaningless existence.

J. C. Movie Night

During the past four years, by special arrangement with the Clifton Theater, students at Juniata have been able to see some of the most important films produced in the last decade. The program has been called "J.C. Movie Night." Often in the past, however, there has been a disturbing lack of interest in the films that have been shown. But this trend seems to be more a product of bad promotion than genuine lack of interest on the part of students.

J.C. Movie Night has one major purpose: to offer students the opportunity to see outstanding films. The cinema, in terms of its technology and versatility as a medium of expression, has become one of the most significant and vital art forms of the twentieth century. But few films achieve the stature of art. The movies in this year's series will represent some of the films that have,

September 17 dawned like the report of a pistol crack; and before I knew what happened the needle stuck in the groove and the whole scene stopped rotating. . . . On that cool Saturday afternoon Juniata opened its doors to all the frolicing Freshmen. And as a member of the class of 1970, I have been invited to update some of the heavy myths and present a truly captivating glimpse of the college's "Freshmen Days." I suppose it would take a daydream of lunatic force to relate all the aspects, but then I bet you didn't know the Zuni Indians had bed bugs. . . .

In retrospect, I seem to recall my own plans for leaving home somewhat less elaborate than the preparations for a general European war. And of course my father (all grumbly and grouchy) made a sacred promise to pick up an oversized van sometime in the near future. At any rate, when we finally arrived, unpacked, and got me settled, I noticed that all the neanderthal grunts had given way to gentle dispatches and fatherly advice—punctuated occasionally by weepy sounds from my mother. But I wasn't the only one. As all of us nudged our parents out to the parking lot, every one kept hoping nobody else would be around to hear any of the melodramatic corn. With that polite wave of our hand and the "See ya, Ma!" we tried to keep our voices casual so she wouldn't crack right there in front of the dorm. . . . Then those creatures of purpose and stability were gone and there we were staring at each other, just waiting to bumble our way through every difficulty with ineffable ease.

Without a doubt, torrents, eddies and swirls of adjustment did await us, as we began our quest for permanence. We had come to one of life's stages where phantoms of childhood fear suddenly loom in front of that "aw-shucks" type—you. The business of double-occupancy seems to be first on the list. For most of us, a single room and private bath has been our up bringing. And in one sunset we wind ourselves as two, sharing one room and as twenty-eight sharing two tubs. I realize that no man is an island, but we had all enjoyed a bit of mental penitentiary. It was a very strange feeling to put out a night light and listen to breathing no longer your own. But then if we thought going to sleep was strange—waking up was even more foreign. You've heard the expression, "For Whom the Bell Tolls"? Well, it tolls for you and ya better believe it. At 6 A.M. intricate triple fuses start ringing, so to voice, in your ear, counterpointed from time to time by an up tempo, syncopated pipe. It's not that you mind getting up early, if you had gone to bed at a decent hour. With blithe head and weary metatarsal, those hall meetings have just got to stop.

As I understand it, most of the Frosh girls felt encompassed by a rather large sphere of regimentation. (Depression, insomnia and salty phrases frowned upon by postal authorities.) I noticed a sign outside Brumbaugh dorm reading, "Ti Sissieno lo," which translated rather freely means "I shall curb your rebellious instincts." . . . Then the boys didn't help matters very much either. I bet every Freshman girl knew fifty guys back home who would have crawled fifteen miles over broken beer bottles just to know them. Out of the 340 kids in the class of '70, there wasn't so much as a "hi" exchanged between the two sexes, the first few days. I'd say that's not un-American, it's un-Chinese!

You know, there are times when Hell seems to have the edge over Purgatory. In Hell, at least, things are settled and irrevocable and end to dithering and doubt. But what's a body to do about diagonal walks obscure side steps, complex campuses and cunning courses? . . . Well, as I walked through the dorms I saw everything from 17th Century Egyptian Baroque to Melanesian Bric-a-Brac. (Our own room is Swedish Teak.) While I'm at it, what about the food? For one hour, every evening, I become part of a span of people (that would put Berkeley's picket lines to shame) and wait for a meal of exotic pig knuckles and done-over reindeer meat balls—usually without milk. But this critical assessment comes only from being spoiled at home.

As harmless as a rose breeding and just a tiny bit more titillating we went though the constipated ritual of Hazing. Everytime an upperclassman approached I felt like a giraffe trying to swallow the lump in his throat. It was sing the Colonel Bogey march in Swahili or spend three years in the paprika mines, The Red Hell. Oh, all agreed it was very, very funny, but it was just those Sophomores who used to know the futility of trying to combat tears with logic.

However, with all the gun-toting sophistication and the old edge over West, the upperclassmen have demonstrated an incredible degree of friendliness. All doors were open to any freshman. And it was a good feeling. I must state rather undynamically that man is not an instantaneous creature, not a physical body, and the reaction of the moment. He is more. He is a big bundle of feelings and fossil growths; of congealed memories and mustered emotions. And there comes a time, I've heard it said, that we project ourselves into other lives. And although this sounds a bit aureous—this projection is the lonely magnificent power of humanity. It is the extension of one person's memories into another's feelings. So let's remember Freshmen, when we get to be Upperclassmen, Walk Loudly and Carry a Big Smile.

Administrative Deans Assume Newly Appointed Positions

by Linda Lehman

The new faculty members at Juniata may have gone unnoticed in the crowds of bewildered freshmen students, who have just arrived on campus this year. Among the new faces in the faculty are Miss Frances Helms, Dean of Women, and Dr. Charles Schoenherr, Dean of Student Affairs. Appointed to the position of acting Dean of the College is Dr. Donald Rockwell.

Hailing from the hometown of Orlando, Florida, Miss Helms, as she prefers to be called, has always been interested in student counseling. She has spent most of her life in Florida, where she was director of residence at Florida State University, in Oklahoma, while she held the position of Dean of Women at the University of Tulsa, and in Massachusetts, where Miss Helms was secretary to the Dean of Harvard Law School.

Miss Helms has also taught high school English at Winter Park, Florida, and later was a counselor at Sequoyah High School in Atlanta, Georgia. The new Dean received her M.A. degree in higher education and psychology from Florida State University. She hopes that this year as Dean of Women will be both profitable and challenging for her and the students.

enherr, from Oak Park, Illinois. His responsibilities in the office include developing and administering student service, extra-curricular activities, and other student groups which are concerned with problems of the student body.

In addition, the new Dean will work with the directors of the various activities, including intercollegiate athletics, in planning and programming; and with the Coordinator of Student Activities for calendar and coordination. He will serve as adviser to the Student Senate.

Dr. Schoenherr graduated from Wheaton College in Illinois and has been director of admissions there since 1959. He was also Dean of Men at Wheaton. In 1965, he received his Doctorate of Education from Teachers College, Columbia University, New York. The new Dean is looking forward to working with the students on a personal basis and doing his best to help in his position as head of student affairs.

Dr. Donald Rockwell will assume his duties as acting Dean of Academic Affairs on October 1, when Dr. Morley J. Mays, Dean of the College, leaves to become President of Elizabethtown College.

Dr. Rockwell was selected at a recent meeting of the executive committee of the board of trustees. "Professor Rockwell is holding true to his practice of placing the needs of Juniata ahead of his personal considerations," said Dr. John C. Baker, chairman of the board of trustees. However, Dr. Rockwell will not accept the position permanently, and President Ellis and the board of trustees will select a dean of academic affairs either from within the Juniata faculty or from another institution.

Dr. Rockwell will continue his present responsibilities as chairman of the division of natural sciences and mathematics. He will be relieved of all duties in the department of chemistry, except the lecture in the chemistry of covalent molecules.

Faculty And Administrative Personnel Number 25

Twenty new faculty members have been named for the Fall Term. The appointments were announced this summer by Dr. Morley Mays, vice president for academic affairs.

The three new members of the psychology department are Clifford Adams as a lecturer with the rank of professor, Thomas Entwick as instructor for the fall term, and David Lee as instructor and Director of Residence. Dr. Adams received his A.B. and M.A. from the University of North Carolina and his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Pennsylvania State University where he was a professor of Psychology from 1937 to 1964. As a well-known authority in the field of marriage counselling, he has written many books on marital relations and other inter-personal relationships. Thomas Entwick received his B.S. degree from Pennsylvania State University and his M.A. from Bucknell in experimental psychology. He has served at HRB-Singer as research psychologist since 1961. Mr. Entwick has published a number of papers in Technical journals. Lee is a '64 graduate of Juniata with a masters degree in education in student personnel work and counselling from Penn State in '65. While at State he was a counselor on the Dean of Men's staff.

Dr. Donald Borchert and Rev. William Payne are recent additions to the religion department. Dr. Borchert is a candidate for doctor of theology degree at Princeton Theological Seminary. He graduated from the University of Alberta and has a B.D. from Princeton and a Th.M. from Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary where he graduated magna cum laude. Rev. Payne received his B.A. from Muhlenberg College and his B.D. from Princeton Theological Seminary. Since 1961, he has served as pastor of the Huntingdon Presbyterian Church.

New members of the English department are Ralph Church, William Hofelt, Jr. and Richard Hunter. Prof. Church comes from Muskingum College where he has been since 1962. He received his B.A. from Wake Forest and his masters from Columbia University. He has done Ph.D. work at George Washington University. Previously, Prof. Church held positions at Mitchell College, North Carolina and Shepherd College, West Virginia. He is active in various units of the Modern Language Association. Mr. Hofelt is a magna cum laude '65 graduate of Juniata. He received his masters from the University of Rochester in '66. Professor Hunter is a graduate of Ursinus College. He has his B.D. from Princeton Theological Seminary and his M.A. and his Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania. He has served as chaplain and professor of religion at both Lake Forest College, Illinois and Blair Academy, Blairstown, New Jersey. Professor Hunter was twice on the faculty of Westminster Choir College and he has served as the preacher at three different churches as well as publishing many articles in various magazines.

a Spanish institute at the University of Dayton. Also new to the Spanish Department is Alexander Olynec. Possessing an extensive experience in the Spanish language, having lived in Argentina for nine years, Mr. Olynec was a teaching assistant at the Pennsylvania State University where he received a master of arts degree in June. He earned a B.A. from Upsala College and studied in Austria for two years at the San Florian by Linz.

James O'Donnell, a former member of the German faculty at Kent State University, has taken a position as assistant professor of German. A former member of the Juniata faculty in 1961-62, he earned a B.A. from Indiana University where he is a doctoral candidate.

Crist Dixon is a new assistant professor of mathematics. Previously employed as an applied mathematician for Sylvania Electric Corp., Prof. Dixon earned a B.S. from Iowa State University and an M.A. from Brandeis University where he held a National Science Foundation Cooperative Scholarship. The other addition to the math department is Victor Withstandley, a graduate of Cornell University. He will be teaching full time in the spring.

Floyd Inman has joined the philosophy department. Mr. Inman is currently working for his Ph.D. degree at Boston University where he previously earned his M.A. A graduate of Barrington College Rhode Island, he has taught for three years in public schools.

Margaret Houck has been named to a one-year appointment as instructor in education at Juniata College. On sabbatical leave from the Juniata Valley School System, Miss Houck is filling in for Dr. Miriam A. Schlegel, professor of education, who is on a year's leave.

Dr. Martin Hoover, a new professor of physics received the master of science and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Southern California where he served as a laboratory teaching assistant and lecturer in physics. He did his undergraduate work in agriculture engineering at Purdue University and also attended Goshen College. During the past three summers, Dr. Hoover has been in the National Science Foundation Research Participation Program at the University of Colorado.

The new instructor in physical education is Russell Trimmer, who is also the new head basketball and baseball coach for the Indians. He graduated from the University of Delaware. Trimmer has been the head basketball coach at Middletown since 1960 with a 120-21 record. He has led his team to five Capital Area Conference Championships. Besides coaching he has done graduate work in the education administration at the Pennsylvania State University. As a former All-Stater, Trimmer has served as a clinician at various basketball camps.

William Russey, the new assistant professor of chemistry, is a candidate for his doctorate at Harvard. A B.A. graduate of Kalamazoo College, he received a magna cum laude in chemistry. He was a Fulbright scholar in advanced study at the University of Bonn in Germany in 1961-62. He received his M.A. degree from Harvard where he was a Woodrow Wilson fellow in 1961.

Robert Washburn, an assistant professor in the geology department, is doing doctorate research in stratigraphy and structural geology in central Nevada. A graduate of the University of Nebraska, Washburn was a graduate student at Columbia. He was formerly a lecturer in geology at Brooklyn College.

The science librarian is Russell Powell, an August candidate for a master of library science degree from the University of Pittsburgh. He is a '65 graduate of Juniata where he worked part-time in the L. A. Beeghly Library. While at Pitt, he worked in the reserve book room and technical process division.

Future Fall Projects For JC Buildings

With the dedication of the Brumbaugh Science Center last April the zenith of the current development program at Juniata was attained. The program, initiated in 1961 with a working account of $5,350,000 for building and endowments, has now reached total outlays of $5,010,660 with the probability that it will close by early 1967. It has succeeded in converting dreams of the past such as the Science Center, new athletic field, heating plant addition, L. A. Beeghly Library, and its sequel, the renovation of the old library into the Shoemaker Galleries of Carnegie Hall, into realities for the benefit of present and future Juniataans.

Into the near future fall projects inclusive of the renovation and expansion of the old science building, the installation of a $40,000 air-conditioning system in the L. A. Beeghly Library, and the construction of a proposed College Center. Preliminary plans for the Center, which, according to H. Gerald Quigg, Director of Development, "will be and must be a reality," are in the hands of President Calvert N. Ellis awaiting approval by the trustees at an Oct. 7 board meeting. At this point the outlook is encouraging for the estimated $1 1/2 million structure, to be financed solely from private contributions, as a capital fund-raising campaign, as apart from government aid which only applies in cases of classroom and housing space. The end of Eighteenth St. or the present combined areas now occupied by the Women's Gymnasium, the old infirmary, and the home economics building are the two possible locations for the Center, which, it is stressed, would be used by faculty and administration, as well as students, for cultural, recreational, and dining activities.

Considering once again the more tangible aspects of Juniata's growth, one need not look far to encounter the latest addition: the spanking new member of the men's dormitory row, the Tussey and Terrace Wings of West Halls. Still in the very final stages of construction, the dorm complex is due for total completion prior to its official dedication, Parents Day, Oct. 22.

Besides its 80 rooms, which provide for 176 men, the West Halls Dorm sports a lounge recreation area to be enhanced by game facilities, a television, and other comfortable furnishings, as well as two apartments. Harold Brumbaugh, Vice President for Development, plans to forsake his 30-year residency in the Cloister in favor of one of the apartments. At his disposal will be two bedrooms and a combination living-dining room, all custom-decorated at his own expense. Dorm director David C. Lee and his wife will occupy the other suite.

The $900,000 total cost of the dorm was secured via a Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development loan at 3 1/2% interest. It will be paid over a 30-40 year period on a self-amortization basis, drawing from room and board fees. The $500 cost of furnishing each room will hopefully be paid through a fund-raising effort among alumni and friends. Those who aid in defraying the cost of furnishing a room through private contribution will be recognized by plaques to be placed on the doors.

The West Halls residents acclaim the dorm as a great stride forward in student housing at Juniata. Aside from the fact that it has more facilities closer at hand, it has averted the acoustical complications so evident in North Dorm by separating the two

Dills, Gaylor Lead Pep Club Reorganization

Everyone who attended the football game Saturday should have noticed the endeavors of the newly organized Pep Club on campus. To provide more spirit at the games the organization has initiated quite a few projects. There is a cheering section of 300 seats reserved for students east of the reserved section. The Freshmen, who form a double line for the team as it enters the field at the beginning of each game, have their own reserved section located in the central part of the bleachers. As the team enters the field it proceeds through a painted football displayed on a paper-covered frame. The club members have built a teepee at one end of the football field. After a touchdown an Indian chief and his spirited tribe perform their tribal dance. Providing a bus to every away game is the current goal of the organization, along with an anticipated "Name the Indian Chief" contest.

A charter for the club has been drawn up and will be submitted at the first Senate meeting. The officers have been selected. They are: President, Toby Dills; Vice-President, Bob Gaylor; Treasurer, Kathy Forsht; Secretary, Peggy McLean. Members include all students on campus. Active members who help with the various projects meet with Miss Kogac at 7:00 P.M. Monday evenings. This is a much needed organization on campus and needs the support of all the students.

Senate Officers Claim Titles And Troubles

Despite their concern over the issue of Senate reorganization, the four Senate officers are also busy carrying out their many other responsibilities. By far, one of the busiest students on campus is Jim Donaldson, Senate President. Many of his appointive duties were taken care of last spring as the various councils and committees were established for this year. His time is still occupied by presiding over the weekly Senate meetings and taking care of all matters which his office demands. Donaldson is also an "ex officio" member of all campus committees and a general "errand boy" for the Senate.

Toby Dills, Senate Vice President, presides over the Campus Judiciary, directs Leadership Conference, and takes charge of all campus elections. Dills explained that most of the vice president's major duties occur at the beginning or end of each semester. This allows the officer to take the initiative and seek out and discuss campus issues or student interests and report these to the Senate.

Secretary Judy Hershey is responsible for recording and posting the minutes of all Senate meetings and taking care of Senate correspondence. Because the duties of secretary are not strictly defined, Judy feels that she has more time to devote to her responsibilities as a senator.

Responsible for the Senate budget and all money transactions is Jim

The Senate officers are in general agreement concerning the issue of Student Government reorganization. All feel that the proposed changes will produce a stronger, more representative body. They also acknowledge the power and responsibilities which the Senate has at Juniata. Senate President Jim Donaldson expressed the feelings of the other officers when he noted the lack of sophistication among the student governments on other campuses as compared to Juniata. The officers feel that the communication between the Senate and faculty and administration has generally been good. Says vice president, Toby Dills, "The pathways are open to maintain this cooperation as long as the students are capable and willing to take their responsibilities as well as their privileges."

Faculty Conference Addresses State College Ideals

Ed. note: These addresses were presented by Dr. Doyle, acting chairman of the English department, and Frank Petho, senior psychology major, to the administrative, faculty, and student body members present at the Faculty Conference Dinner held Friday, September 16 at 6:30 p.m. in Oneida Hall. The occasion was to present to the persons attending a student's view of an ideal professor and a professor's view of an ideal student. The Juniatia thanks Dr. Doyle and Frank Petho for permitting their addresses to be printed in this issue.

A Declaration of Interdependence

by Dr. Esther M. Doyle

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for students and teachers to give up the joys and jobs of summer time, and to assume among the responsibilities of being human those that make them learners and seekers after truth, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare their position in relation to each other. As a teacher, I hold these truths to be self-evident—that students are created equal, that is, all are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights—just as all are endowed with certain inalienable responsibilities and among these are honesty, belief, and enthusiasm.

What is an "honest" student? He is first of all an "unlazy" one. This is a term used in an interview by Laurence Olivier when a critic asked him what he required of his actors. First of all, he said, they must be "unlazy." The honest student does an "honest" job of work. That means that he attends classes. He knows that he counts. His presence is important to the learning process. A professor, being human, doesn't do a very good job of lecturing to empty seats. If it is a class where discussion dominates, learning can't occur if the professor has to talk to himself. In doing an honest job of work the honest student goes beyond the minimum requirements of the course. He does more than enough to get by—or to pass a grade. The honest student balances his whole life—keeps all his courses in equilibrium—doesn't live from quiz to quiz—doesn't rob Peter to pay Paul, but gives each of his courses its just due.

Moreover, the honest student does a job of work which is the best quality of which he is capable. No teacher expects more. Any teacher worth his salt comes to know whether a student is faking. He somehow senses whether a student is doing his best. If he is, and that best is C work, the teacher responds to the student because he is doing what he can. The teacher takes pride in such a student—not in a student like the one Dr. Will mentioned to me some years ago, "He works for a grade," he said, "not for the course." Alas, there are too many of these students today.

Lastly, an honest student is one who takes the whole course—who, to use one of Dr. Hartzler's metaphors, is willing to eat the whole rat—not merely the cinnamon sugar and the pecans. Occasionally a student comes into a course out of the field for pleasure—or relief from the concentrated grind. This is a worthwhile enough reason, but he must also be willing to accept the requirements of the new discipline. Last semester a senior pre-med student, who had wandered into a course in literature, wrote on his final examination: "As an alternative to this last question I would like to tell you what I think literature is for. I took literature courses because I felt a need for diversion. I am a science major, staunch and true. But once in a while I get fed up with this guy's theorem and that guy's axiom and I enjoy sitting down and reading a book or a few poems. This is my diversion. I wanted you to make me have enough interest in literature to continue my reading. THIS YOU HAVE DONE. But if I wanted the rest of this systematization and quantization I would have taken another science course. Is there any academic discipline where I can get away from this for a while? I guess I should not have run on like this but this test has shaken my concept of what literature can do for me. I want it as a release, not as a discipline." Where could this student find such a course? My reply was, "Nowhere on a college campus." If you want only the cinnamon sugar and the pecans, join the Book-of-the-Month Club. But if you want the whole rat—the bread itself—the staff of life—you must earn it by the sweat of your brow. The honest student, then, is the "unlazy" one who does an honest job of work which is the best quality of which he is capable and he does it in the whole course.

The second thing that this teacher asks of a student is belief—belief that he will learn something from this course. The honest student believes that knowledge in the first step toward wisdom and that wisdom is a pearl of great price. This summer in Delft, Holland, I saw a performance of a great medieval play. It is known in English as Everyman, the story of one who found that as he neared death, nothing was left to him but his own good deeds. Only they could go with him on that last journey. In the Dutch version, Everyman or Elkerlyc as he was known in Dutch—had two companions, good deeds and wisdom. Both accompanied him to the grave. True, wisdom had to stop there, but she had been his lifelong friend.

The student should not only believe that he will learn from the course but that the professor can help him towards this knowledge, and, hopefully, this wisdom. He comes to class not with the attitude, "You show me!" or "What do you want?" but rather with the attitude, "What can I find?" He expects his own honest work to bring results. If it doesn't, he goes to his professor for help—but only after he has done his share—only after he has gone as far as he can on his own. No professor can help a student who has not first helped himself.

Then, the student must believe to the point where he is willing to take a leap of faith. Sometimes the way is dark but because, as T.S. Eliot says, he is human, he keeps on trying. Early last semester a junior science major who had entered the course we now call Introduction to Literary Forms came to me after class. When I asked, "What can I do for you?" he replied, "Gee, Dr. Doyle, I'm stumped" and added that he thought he should drop the course because he didn't understand what was happening. I persuaded him to hang on a little longer. He came to class regularly, did his assignments with care, began to look perplexed, entered the class discussions and ended up a better-than-average student.

And so the student must believe—believe that knowledge is the first step to wisdom, that knowledge (not merely a grade) will result from this course, that the professor can help him towards this knowledge and that a leap of faith is necessary if he is really to succeed.

The third requirement I would make is enthusiasm. This means, says Webster, to be "inspired or possessed by the god." The student must be "a person of keen and ardent interests." There is no substitute for the spirit. The honest, believing student is in it not only in body but in spirit. He does not merely attend a performance. He "assists," as the French say. His spirit is in his work. Agnes de Mille describes this in her autobiography, Dance to the Piper. As a young dancer trying to make his way, she gave a performance in Santa Fe. Afterwards, Mary Austin, an old woman who had lived among the Indians all her life, came up to Agnes. "You are a dancer," she said. "What you do becomes a living experience because of the potency of the gesture. . . . The Indians permit anything as long as the God is present. When he is absent, they consider everything obscene and not worth serious attention. They make great fun of the white man's dances and plays because the God is almost never there." Then, says Agnes de Mille, "she fastened me with the sharp, steady look of a frontier woman." "Never let the God be absent from your stage." So for the student, "Never let the God be absent from your work."

Secondly, the student with enthusiasm gives in to the task before him—he loses his life in a cause in order to find it. Karl Meninger who died just this last week, said that the way to mental health was to find a cause and give one's all to it. The student knows that this also is the way to understanding. Eliseo Vivas wrote that one who would understand a work of art must give it "rapt contemplation." He might have added that this is as necessary to understanding of a scientific hypothesis or a mathematical theory as to a poem or a picture. Only as the student loses himself in rapt contemplation does he discover what he is looking for. The student with enthusiasm, then, is one who "assists" who responds in the spirit, who loses

What I Expect of a Professor

by Frank Petho

Upon giving this topic much consideration I found that it is quite difficult to crystallize the many attributes of a good professor. I would say that if you asked the average college student what he really wants in a professor, he would have difficulty in gathering all the favorable attributes of many professors and combining them to mould the "perfect professor."

It is necessary to realize that each person is one unto himself, i.e., each person has a unique personality. With one-hundred people on the Juniatia faculty we are going to have different personalities present. We are going to have different teaching methods. We are certain to have differences of opinion between faculty members and students, not to mention differences between individual faculty members on the many methods of teaching.

From this statement I hope you can understand the problems that are inherent in the description of the so-called "perfect professor." Despite this difficulty I will list and attempt to describe four very basic attributes of what I believe a good professor should possess.

1. Competency

It is my feeling that if a person accepts the job of a professor, he must also accept the responsibility that is carried with this position. His first and foremost responsibility is that of teaching students the material in his discipline. To do this the professor must have a considerable grasp of this material. If this is not the case it becomes rather difficult for both parties concerned to have transfer of concepts. It would be similar to pouring the contents of one empty bucket into another.

It must also be noted that the student should not insist that the professor know all the answers. This would be inhumane. What the student expects is that the professor have a considerable amount of knowledge to work with while teaching us the concepts of his discipline.

2. Communication

The professor must be able to communicate with his students. Since most students do not have the facilities for extra-sensory perception, we must be content with lectures. The value of lectures and discussion is rather obvious.

In our library we have numerous books which deal with programmed learning. Supposedly, we could go to the library, study the contents of one of these books and learn much about its subject matter. But how many students have you seen using these books? It seems as though the profeshis life in a cause, knowing that only so can he find it.

Honesty, belief and enthusiasm. These are three inalienable responsibilities of students. But you say, these are also responsibilities of a teacher. Exactly. This is the interdependence which I declare. A teacher must often be a student. An honest student who demonstrates his belief and enthusiasm often is a teacher.

In Robert Bolt's play, "A Man for All Seasons," Thomas More is speaking to one of his young contemporaries. "Rich, why not be a teacher? You'd make a good one." "And if I was, who would know it?" "You, your friends, your students, God—not a bad audience, that you say." The declaration of interdependence is clear here, too, for a student sometimes asks the same question. Only last semester one asked me, "What difference does it make? If I am a good student who will know it?" And the reply comes, "You, your friends, your parents (who still get the report card), God—NOT A BAD AUDIENCE!"

So tonight let this declaration of interdependence encourage all of us—students and teachers—to re-examine our honesty, our belief and our enthusiasm. Without these the teaching-learning experience is boring, frustrating, wasteful; with them working in mutual interdependence it is a journey of unparalleled adventure. In our support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, let us mutually pledge to each other that honesty which disciplines, that belief which sustains and that enthusiasm which creates.

The President and Faculty of

request the honor of your presence at a reception . . .

So began the printed invitation received by big and little brothers and sisters. If, by some clerical error, a brother or sister did not receive an invitation he is still most welcome to attend, as are all Juniatia students, stressed Mr. Briggs.

According to tradition, big brothers and big sisters will call for their respective little brothers and sisters tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. The pair may then visit the lounges of Brumbaugh, South, and Leary at their own leisure, becoming acquainted with the faculty members divided among the four areas. Mr. Briggs hopes that this arrangement will provide a pleasant and easy way for students and faculty to meet.

Duke Morris, a return from the last faculty reception, will begin his music at 9:30 in Tussey Terrace Lounge. This dance will christen the new men's dorm, which was begun the fall of 1965.

At each reception area a faculty member, an administrator, and their wives will act as hosts and hostesses, greeting the guests as they arrive. Cookies and punch will be served at each area by faculty wives.

ing rats to elicit a fantastic number of responses in a short period of time. Why does the rat make so many responses? Because just every once in a while the experimenter gives the animal a food-pellet. Since the rat does not know when this pellet will be administered, he will continue making these responses until—until what? UNTIL THE RAT REACHES A BREAKING POINT! When this threshold is reached the rat withdraws into a corner of the Skinner box and becomes motionless, inactive, worn-out, sick, and afraid. He fails to make further responses. The rat will not even respond to a noxious stimuli.

Skinner boxes are for RATS! Please do not equate a student with a laboratory rat. But unconsciously many of you do just that. Our food pellets are marks. True, we work for the marks we get, but does not the rat do the same? To top the whole situation some people tell us not to worry about marks. Well, to a student who has to cope with an environment we are in today these food-pellets are important. They help us get into graduate school; they help us secure a good job; they even help us graduate from Juniatia College. If you put an animal on an operant conditioning schedule of reinforcement you must have some sort of reinforcement. In the case of the rat it is a food-pellet; we get marks.

The situation we are in now is the fault of no one and yet it is the fault of everyone. I am quite sure that you, as professors, are aware of this problem. I realize there is very little you can do about it. The strange thing about it is that students can not offer you many suggestions. In all probability we will be faced with the same problems in a few years and will not know what to do about them. But we students ask you to realize our position. We ask not for a reprieve. We ask you to consider our situation. After you have done this, well, the rest is up to you.

I read an interesting sentence in last year's Alfarada: "A teacher effects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops." To this quotation I would like to add one word: "A good teacher effects eternity, he can never tell where his influence stops." For a poor teacher his influence stops after the student writes the last word on the final examination.

Apparently J.C. will have its hands full when they take on the Upsala College Vikings on the College field Saturday. The Vikings looked impressive in their 26-6 defeat of Muhlenberg. Ken Savarino, junior halfback for Upsala, reeled off 76 yards on the ground, picked up 108 more on eight pass receptions, scored one TD and two points on a conversion pass which was enough to place him on the E.C.A.C. Division III All-East Football Team of September 24. Juniata had three players who received honorable mention and they are Cliff Berg, tackle; Don Weiss, quarterback; Dave Fleck, linebacker.

Upsala started the season with eighteen lettermen, including the top ground gainer, halfback Richie Davis, and passing ace Lou Checchetto. Their squad of 51 also included ten freshmen. Davis, who scored 50 of Upsala's 113 points last year, together with Checchetto, who set a new team record for passing accuracy with 45 completions out of 83 attempts, sparked the Vikings to a 5-3 mark last season. Upsala placed second to Wilkes in the MAC northern division last season. However, they were the only team to defeat Wilkes.

The Indians have played Upsala a total of six games, the first dating back to 1928. Juniata leads in the series with four wins and one loss, one game ending in a tie. The last game between the two schools was played in 1936 and Upsala copped this one 13-6.

Juniata's starting offensive line will have Regis Schivley at center, Ron Shaw and Lance Shomo at guard, Jeff Power and Terry Burk at tackle, and Denny Albright and Bob Pascale at end. In the backfield, Don Weiss will be calling the offensive plays, Randy Rolston and John Stolz are the halfbacks, and Berlanda is at fullback. On defense J.C. will have a front wall of Nate Mitchell and Ron Favinger at ends, Rick Stoutland and Cliff Berg at tackles, and Bob Vanyo at middle guard. Backing up the front line will be Dave Fleck and Dave Lauris as linebackers with Chris Sherl as "monster man." At the defensive back positions will be Gary Sheppard, Randy Oeffner, and Pete Straup.

During halftime ceremonies at the football game, J.C.'s cross-country team will attempt to win their second meet of the young season. Our harriers lead by Rick Beard in the first team Indiana has had for several years. For some reason cross-country had been dropped as a varsity sport at the school of the Big Indians, so this year they will be starting fresh.

A new face in the coaching department this year is Russell Trimmer, former coach at Middletown Area High School. He will take over as head coach of basketball and baseball and instructor in physical education at Juniata College. Trimmer, 32, will take over the basketball duties from Ralph Harden, who resigned after five years. He will also succeed Fred Prender as baseball coach. Prender gave up coaching the J.C. nine to become the new athletic director.

A graduate of the University of Delaware where he also coached the freshmen team for one season (1956-57), Trimmer has been head coach of basketball at Middletown since 1960. His teams have won 120, lost only 21, and have won the Capital Area Conference championship five times.

Trimmer was selected from among some 25 candidates for the dual coaching position at Juniata College. He becomes the 19th coach of basketball in the Indians' 62 years of intercollegiate competition.

Recommended as a teacher and coach whose handling of players is "his strongest point," Trimmer said he is looking forward to a "good small college like Juniata." The West York High graduate, who favors "a lot of pressing, both offensively and defensively," is anxious to "work hard to build a winner." And I'm sure that all loyal Juniataians are behind Coach Trimmer and anxious to see him build a winner.

Something else which might be of interest to every Juniata sports fan—the over-all won-loss percentage of Juniata College's baseball team was tops among members of the Middle Atlantic Conference. The Indians' 9-2 log earned them a .818 percentage.

In conference competition Juniata was second in the Northern College Division with a 6-2 record for a .750 percentage. Albright led the Northern Division (7-1; .875), but fell to fourth in a tabulation of all games played, having an 8-6 overall record.

Steve Horner, sophomore right-fielder for the Juniata College baseball team last season, was named to the MAC's first team All-Northern College Division team for 1966. Horner had a .346 MAC average and a .378 season average.

Named to the second team was Billy Kauffman, senior hurler from Denver, who posted a 1.04 earned run average with a 6-1 record for the Indians.

Two Juniata players received honorable mention: John Rolston, freshman shortstop from Hartford, Conn., a .357 season hitter; and Denis Cowher, a junior catcher from Queen, with a .333 average.

Final M.A.C. statistics placed Dave Shimp, junior third baseman from Pitman, N.J., second in the Northern Division standings for batting. Shimp hit .434 for the Indians in eight games.

Albrights Lions Scalp JC Indians, 13-7

Mistakes, including four interceptions, marred the Indians attempt to upset an alert Albright eleven. J.C.'s defense did a decent job of halting the Lions, but were unable to stop Albright on two scoring drives.

Juniata scored first in the second quarter when Don Weiss made a spectacular 87-yard run for the TD. Weiss rolled out on first down, looked for a receiver, but decided to run. He turned the corner at the line of scrimmage and somehow got through a tight spot along the side-lines before cutting toward midfield. Picking up several good blocks, Weiss booted downfield, outrunning the last defender.

Larry Bieber added the point-after and JC carried a 7-0 lead into the second half.

Early in the third quarter, Albright put together a 42-yard scoring drive in three plays. Steve George, breaking through the left side of the line, carried 32-yards for the score. Tom Bowersox tied the game with his placement.

A return of an interception for 65-yards to JC's 20 by Albright's Phil Tortorelli opened the gate for the winning TD. Four plays later Longacker dived over from the two. However, Bowersox missed the placement to leave the score 13-7. Juniata drove 51 yards from its own six late in the forth period on its longest march, but Don Seibert of Albright came up with one of Weiss passes. Seibert took the ball in front of Bob Pascale who made a valiant effort to dislodge or recover the ball.

Albright chaulked two first downs to eat up valuable time before Juniata recovered its third fumble of the day at the JC 45. Juniata had four shots before time elapsed, but another steal by Seibert ended the game.

Juniata's offense rolled up more yardage than Albright, 281 to 276 and JC's defense snatched all three of the Lion's fumbles, two by tackle Cliff Berg and one by end Ron Favinger.

Albright had the better of the ground game, but Juniata took honors in the passing department. Weiss completed 10 of 0 aeriels for 155 yards, but his four interceptions put a crimp in the Tribe's momentum.

Albright played without the services of its ace quarter back, junior Roy Shelhammer, who is nursing a twisted ankle. Juniata did not have middle guard Bob Vanyo, a defensive stalwart and his replacement, freshman Mike Simon, was injured on the opening kickoff. He has a knee injury.

Snider's Harriers Take First Meet

by Bob Dun

The cross-country team started the season off with a very impressive, 19-4-4, win over Albright. The Juniata harriers, lead by Rick Beard in a time of 26:40, took ten of the first eleven places against the outclassed Albright team. This was JC's 11 straight victory with no defeats over Albright harriers.

This years team, according to Coach Snider, should improve on last years 3-6 record. The Juniataians, led by returning lettermen Rick Beard, Merle Landsberry, Tom Berkeley, Tom Creighton, and Jim Massingham, showed a lot of depth in their opening victory. Among the new men on the squad, sophomore Phil Sipling finished third and freshman Kerry Stanley finished fifth. Freshmen John Snyder, Jeff Johnston, and Aubrey Shenk and upperclassmen, Bob Kuhns, Joe Rizzatti, and Win Harris also showed promise as they all placed before the last two Albright runners.

On Saturday the harriers face what could be their first real test against Indiana, a newcomer to the tough West Penn Conference.

Discovery Program Caters to Juniata Theatrical Crowd

A part of the Masque, the drama-club on campus, is the Discovery Program, which offers students the opportunity to express themselves in all aspects concerning the theater. This organization permits them to gain valuable experience in casting, directing, producing, and stage work. The basement of Oiler Hall offers the arena theater for experimentation in comedy, tragedy, and play reading.

Participants in the Discovery Program plan to produce four plays this year. At the end of October an original play will be presented. Senior Gary Rowe, who will also direct the two-act drama, wrote "Carmenita Among the Trees," the first creative play to be given on campus. It was written especially for the Discovery Program. "O Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad," by Arthur L. Kopit, is the scheduled presentation for November. This one-act comedy will be co-directed by Richard Buchanan and Carole Climbler. The main characters are: Madame Rosepette, Mary Ellen Franck; Jonathan, Wayne Knickel; Rosalie, Nancy Colfesh; Commodore Roseabove, Norman Koop.

The Discovery Program meets with the Masque at announced times. Mr. Clayton Briggs is advisor to the group. Both the Masque and the Discovery Program need more enthusiasm and active membership. These activities enable interested students to use their creativity and acting abilities in experimenting with the theater.

La Maison Francais

Recently Emmert House, after considerable juggling, was given over to a group of 10 girls, including sophomores, juniors, and seniors, who wished to exercise their ability to speak French in order to establish a Maison Francais on Juniata's campus.

French is spoken at all times in the house except during house meetings or cases of emergency. Female friends of the girls, whether they speak French or not, are welcome at all times to visit in the girls' rooms where members of the house may speak English to guests only or in the "salon" which is more or less neutral territory. The girls are forced to pay a penny per sentence of English spoken in the house, and the girls have chosen to be on the honor system. Although few penalty fees have been collected, there are a lot of slips of the tongue. (Have you ever gotten out of bed speaking French?) The house is, needless to say, peaceful, since the French cuts down on the English chatter considerably.

If any girl is interested in becoming a resident of La Maison Francais, she should speak to her French Prof. about it. It's well worth the effort and suffering of the first few weeks for after one is so closely associated with French, she cannot help but understand better the intricacies of communication and custom among the peoples of all lands.

If any person, male or female (of any class) wishes to speak French with other students and professors during the Table Francaise in Lesher dining Hall at 6:00 each evening.

Confusing Matter of Faculty Ranks, Promotion Explained

by Paul Keely

Many a Juniatian rarely gives any thought regarding the distinctions which are made among faculty ranks: why they are made and what they entail. To the impassive student it makes little difference whether he is subjected to the haranguing of an Assistant Professor or an Associate Professor. Nevertheless, with flagrant disregard for all unsubstantiated evidence of mass student apathy in this area, Juniata College continues to recognize the varied capabilities represented within its faculty and to differentiate the members accordingly by means of rank.

The basic faculty ranks maintained at Juniata are, in descending order of prestige, Professor, Associate Professor, Assistant Professor, and Instructor. Lecturers are appointed from time to time for special assignments. The standing of Professor Emeritus applies to those professors who reach the mandatory retirement age of 65; yet, if it is deemed that the professor possesses good health and that he still has worthwhile contributions to make, he may be asked to continue on a year-by-year basis.

Next to title, the most obvious differentiations within and among the faculty ranks include salary, qualifications, and period of appointment. Since Juniata College is a private independent institution owned by its Board of Trustees, its policy is not to publish salary schedules. Therefore the reader will have to submit to an enumeration of only qualifications and appointment procedures as they apply to each rank.

All initial appointments to the faculty are made for the duration of one year by the President of the College, acting on behalf of the Board of Trustees. An appointment to the rank of Instructor encompasses the bachelor's degree as a minimum requirement, and all subsequent appointments in this rank are annual. An appointee to the rank of Assistant Professor should have a minimum three years of college teaching experience and the master's degree, appointments being either annual or for a three-year term. With a doctor's degree one year of college teaching experience may suffice. An Associate Professor is appointed for a term of three years (after his initial one year has been served) with the stipulation of five years of college teaching experience; a doctor's degree is not required. Associate Professors who have been full-time members of the faculty of Juniata College for at least four years may be granted an indefinite appointment (tenure). Appointment to the rank of Professor requires a doctor's degree and automatically implies tenure, again provided that the initial one-year appointment has been served.

In considering appointments the President confers with the faculty council. When indefinite appointment is under consideration, the President confers jointly with the appointee, the Dean of the College, and a member of the Instruction Committee of the Board of Trustees.

For promotion in rank, qualifications identical to those listed for appointment are maintained. Excellence of teaching is the primary criterion; the possibility of achieving in one's own field, cooperation with the general college program, constructive participation in the solution of college problems, and interest in the individual student are also taken into consideration.

Promotional procedures begin within the divisions, and recommendations are brought to a joint conference of the President and the Faculty Council, following its meeting with the President, in turn acts formally in presenting its recommendations to the President. Final authorization for promotion is granted by the Board of Trustees, usually at its May meeting.

The foregoing statements on promotion and rank reflect a general policy but are not to be construed in any detail as a contractual agreement between Juniata College and an individual member of the faculty. The terms of promotion and rank for any member of the faculty are stated in direct and personal correspondence.

Chem Dept. Receives Grants

Three grants by business and industry, two unrestricted grants and one grant-in-kind, were recently announced by Dr. Dale Wampler, chairman of the Juniata chemistry department.

An unrestricted Departmental Assistance grant from the Gulf Oil Research Corporation was given to the Chemistry Department upon the recommendation of Mr. Michael Basila, a supervisor of the catalysis section of Gulf Research and Development in Pittsburgh, Pa. who toured the new science complex before dedication last spring.

The grant is one of 63 that Gulf is distributing this year to selected departments in universities and colleges under the Company's Aid to Education Program. This and other aspects of the Gulf Program, including another Gulf Oil Company grant to the department, will result in approximately $2,000,000 to students and institutions of higher education for scholarships, fellowships, and other educational purposes in 1966.

Such departmental Assistance grants are intended to contribute to the support of departments of particular interest to the company.

Hazing Custom Abolished, Much On Senate Agenda

Freshmen regulations were officially abolished by the Juniata Senate at their first meeting of the new school year held Sept. 29. The Frosh-Soph Games played the morning of Homecoming, Nov. 12, will mark the end of freshmen regulations, or "hazing," as they have existed. In a vigorous and lengthy discussion, the Senate, their proposed for carrying out the investigation, it was stressed that all existing clubs will remain functional until the re-evaluation has been completed. Senate Reorganization was discussed briefly. The Senate hopes to begin formulating ideas concerning the definite structure of reorganization and will discuss two of the major plans at the next meeting. The Senate heard a report from the vice president who is chairman of campus Judiciary. He stated that the present judicial system is unsatisfactory and that he will soon present a report to the Senate with recommendations for revision.

In respect to the academic affairs on campus, Dr. Cherry reported that the faculty does not yet have a report to make to the Senate concerning the "Memo to the Faculty" which was issued last year. It is hoped that the concern expressed in that memo has not disappeared and that all students are still very much interested in the issues expressed in it. A questionnaire will be distributed to all Juniata students in order to assess their opinions concerning various issues and proposed changes on campus. This questionnaire will furnish necessary information so that better campus programming and facilities can be arranged. Lynn Kagarise was named chairman of IWSF with Margie Hemmerly and Donna Heckman as co-chairman. It is hoped that this program may be expanded this year in order to find new areas where funds may be used.

A weekend Senate retreat was also tentatively scheduled for a weekend in November. This retreat would enable the senators and advisors to get away from the confines and pressures of the campus and devote their full time and energies to the many campus issues at hand.

The Senate also discussed each of the resolutions drawn up at this fall's Leadership Conference. It was decided to accept the recommendation to suspend all club charters for the purpose of re-evaluation. Although no definite procedure was

New Student Center At Tentative Stage

A new item of interest on campus that concerns students directly, is that concerning a new student center. Mr. Gerald Quigg of the Development Office related the details about the proposed College Center, as it is officially known and named and will be used by the entire college community, in an interview. Hopefully the center can be in operation in about one year.

The center will have faculty dining rooms, where the professors may hold private parties or hear lectures. There will also be student dining rooms as well as other cultural and recreational facilities. The estimated cost of the center is $1.5 million. Quigg emphasized that the cost is President Ellis by the architects, only estimated as the rough plans have only just been submitted to Hunter, Campbell and Rea of Altoona, who have designed many of the other structures on campus.

The money for this project comes from private fund raising efforts known as a "capital funds campaign". The Development Office has organized this program to solicit funds from Alumni, foundations, and friends of the college, which includes interested parents, local businessmen, and the Church of the Brethren. The campaign has already achieved some success. $703,000 has been contributed by the alumni alone, so far.

Questions about the building itself should be directed to Mr. Fike, vice president of finance, in Founders Hall.

Plan . . . To Do

Monday evening when Hal Lenke, the President of the Humanist Student Union of North America spoke, one comment in his critical list enumerating Juniata's faults made reference to the state of the campus senate, precisely, that it should either be made more effective or dispensed with as unnecessary. Two weeks ago a comment made by one of our editors, entitled Support or Abolish, suggested that perhaps the whole senate idea, as it presently exists (through no fault of its own) is nothing more than a farce. Last week saw the beginning of serious discussion derived out of Leadership Conference, on Senate Reorganization, the only remedy, other than putting emphasis on more student support and other factors, for the apparently sorry condition of the Senate body which somehow became obvious even to a stranger on the campus. The Senate issue is, then, one of great import. The matter deserves attention and steps in an appropriately progressive direction should be taken and, as we have witnessed, the first steps are being taken.

The problem has been recognized, been brought out in the open, people are starting to talk about the issue, and the Senate is preparing to take real action—hopefully. However, the most important thing to be aware of here is that the reorganization, a large and involved undertaking, should not be talked about for the rest of the year. Talking is one thing; doing something is another. To be sure, plans have to be made; and it is of the essence of plans to be carried out in some kind of action. The reorganization can and should have far reaching consequences, but only if the plans are properly executed, and soon. If the reorganization is ineffective for any possible reason, then why bother?

The reorganization is sure to be one topic with considerable emphasis at this week's senate meeting.

'Requiem for a Heavyweight'

by Ethel Helzel

"Requiem for a Heavyweight" starring Anthony Quinn, Jackie Gleason, Mickey Rooney, Julie Harris, Jack Dempsey, and Cassius Clay will be shown in Oller Hall, Saturday, October 8 at 7:30 p.m. Anthony Quinn portrays the champion heavyweight who gets chopped down by a younger contender. Jackie Gleason is the unscrupulous manager who bets against his own boy and drags him through the gutter until he ends up a clown in the wrestling ring. Julie Harris plays the tender social worker who tries to save Quinn from himself and the clutches of Gleason. Cassius Clay is the able young opponent who starts the story rolling with the first punch.

After the movie there will be a dance held in the Women's Gymnasium from 9:00 'til 12:00 p.m. The band performing will be the 007's.

Ed. note: Although recent controversy concerning hazing has ended in the abolition of all freshman regulations, this poem was submitted, by a freshman who prefers to remain anonymous, too late to be instrumental in the debate, and is thus presented only as pertinent comment on the issue.

Twirp Season Opens October 10

Twinkle your eyes and Twirp your guys This week at Juniata! Opportunities for advancement are present for any Juniata gal to catch her favorite guy and ask him to the week's festivities. There is always the traditional approach of asking a guy directly, but for those of you who are shy, it's good advice to take the attitude that "Everybody's doing it," and confront the prospective beau with a fearless stance.

Tradition says that girls often times come to college to find a mate, so why not promote another one of Juniata's many old, old changeless traditions and start looking now!

Now's your chance, gals, to nab that cute guy you've been keeping your eye on. And behind those deceiving eyes, maybe he's been eyeing you, too, but like many Juniata men, has not had the nerve to approach you.

Taking a stroll to Strickler's for an ice cream cone is a favorite Twirping occasion. But if you are watching your weight, gals, a nice informal evening at the Coffee House can be intellectually inspiring and just plain relaxing.

Of course there are general rules to be followed in playing the game. First, choose carefully, because if you have a lousy evening, YOU are date. And with the new crop of frosh boys, there is a wide variety to satisfy every girl's needs.

Secondly, be quick in twirping your date because he may have more strings to pull than you think. Also, you could be very disappointed to learn that your favorite prospect has been "hooked up" for the week by your roommate or best friend.

And above all, have fun! Twirp Week is a great chance to get to know some guy you've really been interested in. Use your feminine ingenuity and think of something fun to do. Who knows? The guy you Twirp might turn out to be your best beau.

Letters To The Editor

on certain ones you must not go. The Alma Mater must be known lest upperclassmen sing alone. And who shall give the rousing cheer? why, Freshman with their handbooks near.

You'll soon be scared to walk the hill where Juniata stands, For fear of meeting up with Sophs who give their terse commands, Of "Button, Frosh!" and you'll comply by raising dink with button high.

And cranking out some words of spirit; but still they'll say, "C'mon, let's hear it!"

The biggest threat for those who fail to meet the Sophs' demands Is Freshman Court, Oh! worse than jail to be left in their hands.

But, Ah! the joy! relief supreme! to strip those cursed bonds of strife: An action which for Frosh doth mean the chance to lead a normal life!

They say you'd miss it, if it wasn't, "Hah, Hah," you'll say with glee; For you'll ne'er forget, tho' far you go, Your reinstatement in Humanity.

Ed. note: This comment is printed in response to Frank Petho's "What I expect of a professor," which ran in last week's issue.

If Education Be

If education be "babbling brook . . . a swiftly moving stream." Damn it.

Statement of Policy

As an independent element on campus, The Juniatian, apart from and yet encompassing the concerns of administration, faculty and students, groups related by the common interest of the higher educational experience in its entirety, restates its policy and purpose. The Juniatian functions by reporting and discussing campus and non-campus events by contributing to the well being of the college; and by providing an undergraduate experience in responsible and effective expression.

Mountain Day

Juniata's semi-annual Mountain Day will be celebrated this semester on Wednesday, October 12 at Colerain State Park. As tradition dictates, the regularly scheduled classes, labs, English conferences, and convocation will not be held.

Chartered buses for student communication to the park will leave Founders Hall on Wednesday morning at 10:00, 10:30, 11:00, 11:30.

The remainder of the day will be scheduled as follows:
 11:00 Hike
 11:00-12:30 Free Activity and Ecology Field Trip
 12:30 Lunch
 1:30 Tag-of-War (Sophs. vs. Frosh.)
 2:00 Football (Faculty vs. Sr.)
 2:45 Horseshoe Tournament and Free Recreation

The first bus back to the college will leave the park at 3:00 and additional buses will leave at 3:30 and 4:00.

H.C.A. To Present Count Basie Monday, at JC's Oller Hall

by Gary Lindenmuth

One constant complaint that has been expressed by knowing students and professors alike is that, within our small town college community, we are seemingly estranged from the mainstream of arts, politics, and ideas, that flourish in the affluent American society. And to some degree this is a fair complaint to wage. However, in recent years there has been a marked improvement in the various events that have been brought to our campus from the vast panorama of culture that lurks just beyond our little mountain retreat. To realize this, we need only look back one year to Dave Brubeck, the Norwegian Symphony Orchestra, and Arthur Schlesinger.

This year promises to be both stimulating and enjoyable in the way of improved cultural events, and the most significant night of the year could well be Monday, October 10, when Count Basie and his Big Band come swinging into Oller Hall, thanks to the Huntingdon Concert Association. This will be the first of the Concert series for this year and it is indeed a fine choice for an opener. It certainly seems as if the more, shall we say, "classically oriented" townspeople, who are responsible for the booking of these concerts, have shown an awareness of the more, shall we say, "vulgar" tastes of the college students.

The Basie Band is considered by many jazz buffs to be the most consistent of the great Big Band jazz institutions. In this big band category we find names like Duke Ellington, Stan Kenton, Woody Herman, Maynard Ferguson, Les Brown, and Les Elgart. Most of these men Bergman's "The Silence" evoked nervous laughter at the theater and a huge void in the dorms. One of the comments overheard was, "Foreign films aren't made to be understood." Profs are hoping their finals won't draw such big blanks next January!

Too few students and fewer faculty turned out at the meeting Monday evening to hear Hal Lenke, President of the Humanist Student Union of North America, remark on humanism. The meeting was interesting to say the least. First came an intricate, theatrical performance from 21 year old Lenke, a student at Antioch College. Mr. Barbash answered, though never for a moment doubting Lenke's sincerity and affirming his own sympathy with Lenke's cause, and handed down from a more adult viewpoint (but dare we trust anyone older than 27?) a cutting and valid critique of Lenke's rhetoric and logic. The whole show did prove to be stimulating if nothing else, and we wonder what the prospects are of having some sort of organized humanist group on this campus.

Do you smoke? Is there a radio in your room? . . . So goes the questionnaire sent out by the Senate this week? Commuters and Chairmen Jim Hamilton and his committee have vowed to read all 1200 faculty and student replies.

Chilly autumn winds carry summer jobs and permanent employment far, indeed, from the student. Yet, Robert Doyle, Director of Financial Aid and Placement, urges early applications for summer work.

"Many prospects," commented Mr. Doyle, "lie in government jobs." The Federal Service Entrance Examination to be given at Juniata November 15 offers career-minded an opportunity to enter government service. This test is required of all applicants for federal service regardless if they aspire to careers in budget management, or food and drug inspection, or park ranger activities. Interested persons should contact the Placement Office before the application deadline, October 19.

Mr. Doyle also suggested that undergraduates inquire soon about summer opportunities with the government since many jobs require preliminary examinations.

The senior girls started it all by throwing off vague references to button plays and body blocks. Then the junior girls began gyrating against dorm walls ostensibly to strengthen their leg muscles. Look as if everyone wants to enjoy the fun and what can a guy say when he's befrosted by eleven girls eager for him to coach their powder-puff football team!

Frosh Chorale Is Created

The newest musical group on campus is the Juniata Chorale, composed entirely of singing Freshmen. The members were chosen in tryouts Tuesday evening. The choir, which will rehearse for the first time Wed. Oct. 12 from 7:30 to 9:00 p.m., is composed of the following people:

Focus Opens Season With Print Exhibition

The Juniata College Focus series begins this year with a display of 71 prints from the Brooklyn Museum's Fourteenth National Print Exhibition selected by Miss Una E. Johnson, Curator of Prints and Drawings. This exhibition, representing a cross-section of print making in the U.S., will be on view in the Shoemaker Galleries from Oct. 14 through Nov. 14. This traveling group of prints, chosen from the original exhibition of 165 prints, includes the purchase prize awards by Robert Broner, Judith Hahn, Peter Hoover, John Hultberg, Boies Margo, Ramon E. Oeschger, Andrew Rush, Robert Schuler, Arthur Thrall, Michael Mazur, and Garbor Peterdi.

Mr. Mazur visited the Juniata campus two years ago when he spoke at the dedication of Shoemaker Galleries. He is a graduate of the Yale School of Fine Arts and Amherst College and now teaches at Brandeis University. He was a Guggenheim Fellow and the recipient of grants from the Tiffany Foundation and the American Academy of Arts and Letters. His works are in the permanent collections of many private art collectors as well as in such museums as the Metropolitan Museum of Art, N.Y., the Museum of Modern Art, N.Y., Boston Fine Arts Museum, and the Library of Congress.

Mr. Peterdi is a leading teacher of painting and printing and has written a book of instruction concerning various types of printing. Our Associate Professor of Art, Mr. Steven Barbash and Mr. Mazur studied under Mr. Peterdi at the Yale School of Art and Architecture.

In conjunction with the print exhibitions to be shown in the Galleries this year, the College has recently acquired two printing presses. The Dickerson Combination Press, developed within the last decade, will be used by the Art Department for printing and demonstration. This press prints both etchings and lithographs and will ultimately be integrated into Art Studio. A much older press with a significant history is the Washington Press, which will be used to demonstrate and trace the art of printing and book-making.

The print exhibition and the new presses are indications of the increased interest in print making which is evident in the U.S. today. More and more people are becoming interested in art and in owning good works of art. Due to the expense involved in buying original works, many collectors prefer to buy original prints. The growth each year of the size of the Brooklyn Museum's print exhibitions show, as Miss Johnson says, "the continuing vitality and exuberance of the print in twentieth century art."

Dr. and Mrs. John C. Baker, New York City, have donated an "Ankor Wot" rubbing to Juniata College. This is one of the first acquisitions of art by the college since the Shoemaker Art Galleries was dedicated last spring. A few original paintings are among the contributions.

Dr. Baker is chairman of the Juniata Board of Trustees and former president of Ohio University. He is a Juniata alumnus from the class of 1917.

Mr. Fike and Mr. Friend photo by Wilcox

A call of "fire, fire" routed the Juniata staff out of their snug cubicle, Tuesday. Smoke there was, and a burning feeling in the recesses of the business office called forth Mr. Fike. Ax in hand, he crushed the flimsy wall to reveal some smoldering wires nicely toasting one of the beams. As faculty bystanders purported calls for emergency federal aid and better yet, new wood paneling for their offices, the blaze was quenched at its roots. Apparently, the water fountain across from Deans' Schoenherr and Heberling became a little hot around the wires and selected an activist approach.

Financial Assistance at JC Involes Third of Enrollees

Thirty-three percent of Juniata's current enrollment receive financial assistance of some sort, whether through scholarships, grants, loans or employment. The money backing these programs is amassed from a variety of sources.

Juniata College itself provides aid via scholarships to worthy students who have attained high academic standing combined with leadership and participation in student activities, and who maintain an academic average of 2.75 or better. Grants-in-Aids are awarded much on the same basis, although a 2.75 average is not required. The Student Loan Fund plus funds provided by alumni and friends make additional money available to Juniataans.

Approximately 80 students are employed on campus, working in the dining halls, and additional jobs are filled in the library, laboratories, and assorted routine positions.

The Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency scholarship program, which is replacing the State Senatorial plan, involves 101 Juniataans. 23 students are placed in Group I, those of high academic rating and equivalent SAT scores; Group II, composed of students displaying financial need, totals 74; the remaining 4 students are placed in Group III, under unusual circumstances.

Robert A. Doyle, Director of Financial Aid, points out how this program enables the student to make the decision of what college to attend an educational choice, not a financial one.

Juniata students benefit from four forms of federal aid. The College Work-Study Program provides 90 percent of the wages for students employed in the community. Eleven students devote 15 hours per week to this program. The National Defense Student Loan (NDSL) fund provides loans up to $1,000 per year at a yearly interest rate of 3 percent, with payment due 10 years after graduation.

Other federal sources are through Educational Opportunity Grants, which are direct awards of funds, and guaranteed loans available through the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency.

Industries offering scholarships to sons and daughters of employees are represented by three Juniata students. Fourteen young men and women on campus have been awarded National Merit Scholarships sponsored by the college; a small percentage of additional students supplement their financial status through assorted awards and scholarships from private and public concerns.

Young Republicans' Club To Be Organized Under Shield and Saylor

The charter of the Juniata College Young Republican Club was approved by the Senate in May, 1966. The purpose of this new organization is mainly educational. The organization hopes to secure both Democratic and Republican speakers at meetings in order to provide an awareness of politics and to instill an interest in active participation in politics after graduation.

Last year Juniata hosted the first district meeting of the Republican College Council, the purpose of which was to bring together college organizations from the entire state. Students put out the state council's newspaper.

The current officers are Chairman, Betsy Shield and Vice Chairman, Ann Saylor. Elections for additional officers will be held at this year's initial meeting. Within the next two weeks a paper explaining the organization and its intended activities will become available to the students. The time and place of the meetings will be posted throughout the campus.

The Tribe gridders travel to Selinsgrove tomorrow where they will take on Susquehanna before a homecoming crowd. Both Juniata and Susquehanna will be seeking their first win, of the season.

Jim Hazlett, Susquehanna's "Athlete of the Year" in 1951-52, who took over last winter as athletic director and head coach of football and baseball, will direct the Crusaders in their efforts against JC. Hazlett is attempting to improve the Crusaders 0-9 record of last year, but so far he has not had any successes. Hazlett installed a wide-open offense with a lot of passing and outside running. A pre-season evaluation of Susquehanna showed the Crusaders with a

JC Trotters Tie Indiana, 28-28

In their second meet of the season, the Juniata harriers tied a tough Indiana team, 28-28. Although they only tied Indiana, most of the Juniata team ran the course faster this week than last week in spite of the bad weather and poor track conditions. Rick Beard finished first in a time of 25:40, his best time for the Juniata course. Phil Sipling, Tom Berkley, Sid Lansberry, Kerry Stanley, and Jim Massingham also placed for the harriers. JC has never lost to Indiana in cross-country in three meets.

Coach Snider said that this year's team is faster than last year's and has more depth. However, the team will have to be at its best if they are to beat Susquehanna on Saturday. Susquehanna, led by Bob Hadfield who holds the Juniata course record of 25:15, is one of the strongest teams in the MAC and defeated Juniata last year 35-20.

The summary: 1, Rick Beard (J); 2, Andy Goudy (J); 3, Jim Conley (J); 4, Phil Sipling (J); 5, Jack Bean (J); 6, Tom Berkley (J); 7, Bill Meckley (J); 8, Sid Lansberry (J); 9, Kerry Stanley (J); 10, Jim Massingham (J); 11, Bob Pilet (J).

Seven Mile Course Winds JC Harriers

Juniata's harriers went down to their first defeat in three meets this year. A strong Lock Haven team triumphed, 19-39, over a grueling seven mile course. Not only was the course longer than most college courses (the average is about 4.5 miles), but also in such poor condition that senior co-captain Tom Creighton sprained his ankle among the rocks and ruts of the course as the team walked over it before the meet. Lock Haven had a distinct home advantage, being conditioned to run over the rough seven mile course. Somehow JC was not informed of the extreme length of the course until the day before the meet. At least that is better than waiting till the last minute before the race starts.

Finishing first and second in the meet was English and Zimm of Lock Haven. English's time was 45:20. Rick Beard of Juniata followed Zimm with a time of 47:02. The other Indians who finished in scoring position were: Phil Sipling (6), Jim Massingham (9), Tom Berkley (10) and Kerry Stanley (11).

Any football player or cross country runner or any one else who is unable to attend the meeting on Tuesday should contact Coach Trimmer.

strong, experienced offense, but a questionable defense. The Crusaders, however, have yet to score this season, losing to Waynesburg 0-6 and Wittenburg 0-9. Susquehanna looked strong defensively against Waynesburg, but Wittenburg ran all over them. Currently Susquehanna is on a twelve game losing streak which stretches over three seasons.

Juniata holds a slim lead in the series, dating back to 1923, with 13 victories to SU's 12. Two games ended in ties. The Tribe will be defending the "Goalpost Trophy," which JC won from the Crusaders last year with a 38-6 victory on College Field. The trophy, a piece of goalpost which was torn down by Juniata students some years back, has become a symbol of rivalry between the two liberal arts colleges.

Tomorrow's game is scheduled for 2 p.m. Pre-game festivities, featuring bands and the Homecoming floats, begin at 1:10 p.m. The floats and bands also will parade through Selinsgrove at 10:30 a.m.

During halftime JC's harriers will vie for an upset over susquehanna's strong crosscountry team. Two-year letterman Bob Hadfield, a junior, and freshman Bob Volkman are expected to pace the Crusaders this year. Hadfield broke course records in six meets last year including JC's course and Volkman had been an outstanding miler and half-miler at Erie Academy.

Other lettermen on the team are Rich Main, senior, and Pete Delin, sophomore. Two other who have been running strong for SU are sophomore Barry Brown and freshman Dennis Sheariss.

The Indian harriers have a one game lead in the 5-game series that started in 1961. Susquehanna, though, has won the last two meetings—between the clubs. Sophomore Rick Beard will lead the way for the invading Tribe, and close behind should be sophomore Phil Sipling who has looked strong in the first two meets of the season. Other point getters for this season have been juniors Tom Berkley and Sid Lansberry and freshman Kerry Stanley.

Anyone who has been around College Field these past two Saturdays, should have noted two "new looks." The Indian gridders are sporting new football uniforms this season—all white, with blue numerals. One fan made the comment as the team burst down onto the field that "they looked like they stepped out of a Tide commercial." However, it should be added that after the game was over the team certainly needed some Tide to get the uniforms clean again. The familiar Indian on the helmets has been replaced with a gold feather in the middle of the headgear—a la Redskins style.

The other "new look" is the new view given to spectators in the middle sections of the stands. These sections were raised three feet to permit a better view across the field. Since reconstruction of the field about four years ago, the center had been higher to allow for drainage, and spectators in the middle sections had difficult "over-the-hill" view.

The 87-yard run against Albright by Don Weiss, sophomore quarterback, was the second longest run from scrimmage by a JC player. The record is held by Jim Barrier (Coach Bill Barrier's older brother) with his 92-yard romp in 1958 against Ursinus. It seems that the rain last Friday not only dampened the grass, but also the spirits of Juniata's students. The pep rally(?) which was held that evening was a total flop. Even those few who showed up were not enthusiastic enough to "psyche-up" a cow.

Tribe Falls Under Viking Rally

Tri-captain Bo Berlanda (33) drives for yardage against Upsala's line. Berlanda lead all JC runners that afternoon with 41 yards gained and 0 lost.

JC's Indians played well for the first three-quarters of their game last Saturday, leading Upsala 10-0 at this point, but were unable to stop the come-from-behind efforts of the Vikings in the final stanza. In this last period Upsala rallied twice, while stopping the Tribe's offense cold to win their second game of the season 15-10. This was the second straight game of the season which JC has lost by five points.

JC's fullbacks who were not used in the opener against Albright, rammed Upsala's line for a total of 69 yards. Both fullbacks, Bo Berlanda and Jim Hartland, ran hard on the wet turf, neither losing a single yard. Berlanda led the ground attack with 41 yards, while Hartland had 28 yards gained.

The Indians first score came on Larry Bieber's 26 yard field goal capping a 55 yard drive. JC made three first downs on plunges by Hartland and passes to Pascale and Rolston.

Only three minutes later JC was on the board again following a fifty-three yard touchdown drive. The big play was a forty-five yard pass to Rolston, who got behind the safety man and raced to the seven before being caught. Two plays later Weiss hit Stultz on a sprint out from the five and Beiber tackled on the placement.

Late in the first half Upsala started to drive on a thirty-five yard pass to Stallone. But a few plays later the Vikings fumbled on JC's twenty-seven yard line and the Tribe took over. Juniata proceeded to run out the clock.

First half statistics showed JC with 54 yards rushing and 78 yards in the air. Upsala had only 16 yards on the ground, but 82 in the air.

Upsala had a serious threat going for them late in the third quarter, following a thirty-eight yard pass from Checchetto to Severine. JC's defense tightened and stopped the Vikings when Randy Oeffner intercepted a fourth down pass on the one yard line. Juniata's biggest chance in the second half came when Bob Vanyo covered a Viking fumble on JC's thirty-one yard line. Two straight personal foul calls against Upsala put the ball in the Viking's territory, but the Indians were not able to capitalize on this opportunity, giving Upsala the ball on their thirty-seven.

Upsala immediately drove sixty-three yards for their first score. Two deep passes, one of thirty-one yards and the final TD pass of twenty-one yards from Checchetto to Rich Davis, kept the Vikings rolling. A screen pass from Checchetto to Davis gave Upsala the two pointer.

Juniata gave up the ball immediately after the kick-off, when Weiss' pass bounced off Stoltz and Upsala linebacker, Sibby Sica, came up with a diving catch of the ball on JC's twenty-five yard line. A personal foul gave the Vikings a break after their quarterback had been thrown for a nine yard loss.

Davis, Upsala's high scorer from last year, took over and ran four straight plays at the right tackle hole gaining six, four, and three yards before diving over from the one.

Jack Fertig added the extra point. Upsala's second interception of the day came when another deflected pass was grabbed by Ed Smith as the Tribe tried to strike back in the closing moments of the game.

Cheerleaders Chosen for '66-'67 Lead New Burst of Enthusiasm

by Cynthia Harris

According to Bob Gaylor, Senior Captain of the cheerleading squad, School spirit is returning to Juniata, as evidenced by the enthusiasm at the Susquehanna game last week. "The bringing back and retention of the goal post," Bob feels, "shows two things: First, the guys wanted the game, but also, the student body was itself psyched up. I say this because although there was a small crowd at the game, the people who were there really meant it this year." Bob stated that "the enthusiasm and cooperation of the people in the stands has been better this year than in four years, with a lot of people displaying considerable interest in the team."

"Credit for this enthusiasm goes to two sources: The general identification of the students with enthusiasm and the ten kids I have working with me this year. They are all hard workers, who are not afraid to put out an extra effort or try something new. Therefore the crowd has joined with us in a real honest feeling of school spirit."

Bob feels that school spirit is in this case, beginning with class pride, and he hopes to see this proved at the class competition for the cheering trophy, during which the classes compete, all using the same cheer, to decide which class cheers the loudest.

Fund Drive to Support Two JWSF Projects

Mid November has been chosen as the time for this year's Juniata World Service Fund drive. A week of unique fund raising stunts supplementing the dormitory solicitations will give each student on campus the chance to make his contribution.

This year the JWSF drive will be devoted to raising money for the foreign student fund and a scholarship for a disadvantaged student. The goal for this year of $1850 will be divided between these two programs. In the past, four projects have been supported by JWSF; the money raised being evenly divided among them. After evaluating this plan, the JWSF committee decided that each project would benefit more if fewer projects were supported in one drive and if they were varied more frequently.

From the Desk of the Office of the Registrar

All students planning to complete graduation requirements by the end of the Fall Term, 1966-67 are requested to attend a meeting in S202 at 10:00 a.m., Monday, October 17. The purpose of the meeting is to complete the necessary applications for the winter comprehensive examinations. Anyone unable to attend should complete the form in the Office of the Registrar by October 17.

Library Displays Publications

The Beechley Library is displaying a group of publications by members of the faculty and administration. The display will be arranged annually on the opening of the college year.

The publications and their authors are: Mrs. Helen Buchanan Menah, associate professor of sociology, Dating, Mating and Marriage, Howard Allen Inc., publisher.

Dr. Young Kihl, assistant professor of political science, a book review in the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Floyd A. Inman, instructor in philosophy, Rudolph Carnap, Realist or Nominalist? Philosophical Forum, 1965-66.

Dr. Clifford R. Adams, lecturer in psychology, Preparing for Marriage, French Edition: also published in English.

Dr. Donald Borchert, assistant professor of religion, The Challenge of Linguistic Philosophy to Contemporary Theology, in Foundations: Why Men Suffer, in Christianity Today; and Beyond Augustine's Answer to Evil, in the Canadian Journal of Theology.

Miss Lillian Junas, assistant professor of journalism, Getting the most from your Yearbook Pictures, The School Press Review.

Barnard C. Taylor, director of public information, A Graphic Designer in a College Community, American Artist Magazine.

Focus Series Features Boulding In Judy Lecture

"Logic of Love" is the title of the address by Kenneth E. Boulding, this year's guest for the Will Judy Lectureship, Wednesday, October 19, at 8:15 p.m. in Oller Hall. Following the delivery, the traditional talk-back analysis session will take place in Alumni Hall with Dr. Ronald Cherry presiding.

A renowned economist and worker for world peace, Mr. Boulding hails from the University of Michigan where he has been professor of economics since 1949, and research director of the University's Center for Research on Conflict Resolution as of 1964. In addition to many pamphlets and articles, Professor Boulding has authored twelve books, the most recent of which is The Meaning of the Twentieth Century: The Great Transition (1964). In 1962, the economist was the recipient of the American Council of Learned Societies Prize for Distinguished Scholarship in the Humanities.

Born in Liverpool, England, Mr. Boulding became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1948, after receiving his B.A. (1931) and M.A. (1939) degrees from Oxford. He has taught at the University of Edinburgh, Colgate, Fisk, Iowa State, and McGill Universities, as well as University College of the West Indies in Jamaica and the International Christian University in Tokyo. During 1941-42, Mr. Boulding was employed as an economist for the League of Nations Economic and Financial Section in Princeton, N.J. His interest in peace stems from his background as a member of the Religious Society of Friends.

The Will Judy Lectureship provides for an annual lecture as part of Juniata's Focus on Art and Life Series. Captain Will Judy, a Juniata College alumnus, established the Lectureship in 1958 by contributing $20,000 to supplement and enrich the academic program of the College. Thus each year speakers who are leaders in government, education, the arts, natural science, business, or some other area of interest to the college community are brought to the campus.

Hunter Makes Changes As English Conference Head

by Linda Lehman

The new English conference program, under the direction of Dr. Richard E. Hunter, gives freshmen students the opportunity for attaining competency before entering the Fall term. By taking a written examination, the student who excels may be exempt from English conference.

Achieving competence in expository writing is the main concern of the advising faculty. Organizing coherent paragraphs and avoiding wordiness are important factors in writing a theme. According to Dr. Hunter, the student should have concern to choose the exact word to convey his thought and thus be concise.

Conference advisors are working together to develop a unified approach and avoid the tendency of students to "ramble on" in their themes. Each professor may have a particular characteristic to emphasize, such as creativity, word choice, etc., but all advisors are aiming for a common goal—that of coherency.

Thus at the end of the semester, the conference advisors have the same system upon which to judge competency. A student must be writing at least on a B+ level to be considered eligible for competency at the end of a semester.

As in the case of the freshman student, his Great Epithet exam is read first by an English advisor other than his own, and then if recommended, is read by his own conference advisor and Dr. Hunter. The decision of the majority of the three will determine whether or not the student attains competency.

A total of 160 freshmen took the test given at the beginning of the year. From those students, 25 were recommended and 13 were finally chosen to be exempt from the program. The students chose one of the following three topics:

- (a) Humphrey or Kennedy in 68
- (b) Changes in the Catholic Church
- (c) Mini-Skirts Why?

Dr. Hunter does not wish the English conference program to be associated with the English department at Juniata College. He feels that because one must write well in all of his courses, the student should have the ability to write coherently and effectively. English conference, therefore, is beneficial for writing all papers and themes.

The attitude of Dr. Hunter and the advisors is that students should realize the practical value of being able to express themselves coherently. It is to their advantage to have organization in their writing.

One must be able to communicate intellectually, as well as emotionally, with his fellow man. And, to quote Dr. Hunter, "If a student has to express his ideas, why not express them well?" This is the main objective of the English conference program.

ATTENTION:

Voting for the freshman class steering committee will be held on Tuesday, October 18, at the regular times. Freshmen may vote before breakfast in Lesher, or after lunch and dinner in Totem Inn.

Doyle Directs Placement

Robert A. Doyle has been appointed Director of Placement and will continue as Director of Financial Aid. In his new position Doyle replaces William Martin who left to take a position as Director of Placement at Hofstra University, Long Island, N.Y.

In addition to his duties as Director of Financial Aid where he administers student scholarships, grants-in-aid, student employment and loans Doyle will also assume responsibility for the placement of Juniata graduates in suitable employment.

In the dual position Doyle will be responsible to Mr. John Fike, vice president for financial affairs and treasurer, for all financial aid and to Dr. Charles Schoenbert, dean of student affairs, for placement.

A graduate of Juniata College in 1960, Doyle joined the staff as admissions counselor, then resigned to take a tour of duty in the U.S. Army. He returned in 1963 as assistant director of admissions.

Newly Created Dept.

The theatre arts and the arts of public speaking were given additional recognition at Juniata College when the faculty voted recently to establish a Department of Speech and Theatre under Clayton Briggs, associate professor of English.

Professor Briggs, who has been with the College since 1962, announced an expanded curriculum in both areas. In Speech he will offer Public Speaking, Persuasion and Discussion, and Debate. The theatre courses include Introduction to the Theatre, History of the Theatre, and Playwriting Theory and Styles.

Briggs declares that "there has been tremendous burgeoning of the arts in this country and Americans are understanding for the first time the wealth and value of the arts."

Although Briggs will not offer a major program of instruction, students will be in a position to enrich their understanding and appreciation of both speech and theatre.

The two major productions scheduled by Briggs for this year are contemporary American plays: Patricks Teahouse of the August Moon, November 10, 11 and 12 and William's The Glass Menagerie, March 9, 10 and 11.

The establishment of the new department is part of a general upgrading in Juniata College theatre which includes a revival of the Masque, a continuation of the one-acts, a challenge to area colleges for a one-act play contest, and improved technical facilities in Oller Hall on campus.

Briggs serves as advisor to the student radio station, WJC, and is also assisting the Forensic Club.

The Public Speaking and Introduction to the Theatre courses will be offered annually, while the other courses will be taught in alternate years. The spring term will include two sections of Public Speaking as well as two new courses: Persuasion and History of the Theatre.

Briggs is active in the community and is anxious to offer his assistance to any groups or individuals who may wish to explore the problems of theatre or public speaking.

Rockwell Announces Chem. Equipment Gift

The gift of a time of flight, mass spectrometer, from the E. I. DuPont de Nemours and Company of Wilmington, Delaware was announced by Dr. Donald M. Rockwell, acting dean of academic affairs.

In describing the use to which this instrument will be put, Dr. Dale L. Wampler, chairman of the chemistry department, said that the mass spectrometer will make it possible to analyze samples for the mass of the component molecules.

It will be chiefly used by Dr. Charles Spink, who teaches instrumentation in the chemistry department, and will help give students experience in the use of instruments.

The father of Juniata junior, Kathryn Grigsby, assisted Gerald Quigg, director of development in the search for the instrument. Dr. William E. Grigsby, laboratory manager, technical services laboratory, plastics department of DuPont was able to obtain the mass spectrometer from the company's experimental station located in Wilmington, Delaware.

Coordinator of the gift for DuPont was Mr. Daniel Hamblin of the experimental station.

A Fresh Atmosphere

The characteristic trend of all JC campus activity this fall seems to be summed up in the key words reorganization and rejuvenation. We have witnessed evidences to this in all three aspects of the college community: faculty, administration, and of course, the student body. The vigorous administrative and faculty turnover has brought many new faces and significant changes to Juniata. Changes in relation to students make an almost endless list. To note a few, look at the new WJC, the plans for the much needed Senate reorganization, the liberalization of women's smoking regulations in the form of Brumbaugh and Leshner smokers, the reorganization of various existing campus clubs (the Pyrenees club is dividing) and the revival of old or non-existent ones (the International Relations Club is making a comeback). This trend of originality is also seen, of example, in a current, but obscure (at the moment) movement underfoot to establish certain new communications media on campus. Change also can be seen in "constructive abolition"; the hazing tradition has been dispensed with.

It stands to be said then, that all is indicative of some healthy, progressive attitude, a new campus atmosphere. Although, as an example, some may have felt at first that the unusual turnover in faculty and administrative personnel was undesirable, disastrous, and due to some large fault of Juniata's, this isn't really as bad as one might conclude. This kind of change, as well as the other examples noted, serves as a preventive measure against stagnation and helps to encourage progressive action. Even though a certain favorite prof may be 'Good', his benefit has already been derived; chances are that something may be gained in replacement (both for himself and for his student). New administrators generally have new ideas which serve to greatly improve the general state of campus affairs. Fresh student attitudes get worthwhile things done, and contribute most significantly to the learning experience.

Juniata can well benefit from change. She can gain much from the progressive innovations. She can achieve a clearer perspective undimmed by those obstacles that have been subjected to what may be called "constructive destruction." It is only through change that the action that is the learning process, presumably the prime function of Juniata as an institution, can occur. This new vigorous atmosphere can help to instigate that action, thus making our learning here, our study here, truly worthwhile.

(ACP) — The war in Viet Nam has generated a good deal of debate on college campuses recently. Why do these people, and others, protest and argue? Well, says the University of Oregon Daily Emerald, the present generation of college youth was born deep in the bowels of the greatest world war in history. Many of them have no living fathers because of that war, and many others have fathers bearing the lifelong scars of battle.

Five years after the war, when most of today's students were between the ages of 3 and 10, another major conflict was at hand, this time in Korea. The youngsters saw their older brothers drafted for battle—many of them just out of college. Today's college student had little or no contact with developments which led to the present situation in Viet Nam. Precious few voices were raised in question when President Eisenhower first committed American troops in Southeast Asia as early as 1956. The adults who today criticize the student for inspecting his government's policies paid pitifully little attention to the warnings sounded a decade ago about America fighting a land war in Asia.

The fact is that many more college students should concern themselves with this war—more even than they are now concerned. It may be the most important problem they will ever face. Those who are vigorously debating the issue are asking questions all Americans should be asking, regardless of political belief.

Today's student would like a chance to finish school, get a job, and perhaps marry and raise a family, uninterrupted by nuclear inferno. If his body is to be committed to war of another generation's making, then today's student wants some answer, and his right to demand them is implicit.

Correction and Apology from the Editor's Desk

A serious error in a story published in last week's Juniatian on the proposed Student Center has come to our attention. Since we believe, along with those whom the error directly concerned, that the prime responsibility of news is to accurately report facts, a correction and an apology are in order.

The report stated that, in relation to the Student Center, $703,000 has been contributed thus far by the Alumni in a "capital funds" campaign. This is an incorrect statement apparently due to misinterpretation of the true facts. The $703,000 was contributed in the fiscal year 1965-66 in the total Annual Giving Program at Juniata from all sources including Alumni, Foundations, Government, Parents and Friends.

No funds as of yet have been raised for the College Center. The capital funds campaign to finance the project would be tied in with this year's Annual Giving Program. The College Center campaign has not yet been started, and the Trustees were still considering many factors about the facility at the time the article appeared.

Since this error has created an uncomfortable situation, we sincerely regret the mistake and extend apologies to all those affected.

Senate Wrestles With Reorganization

Reorganization has been the main topic of discussion at the last two meetings of the Juniata Senate as the senators began the often tedious job of making concrete statements from rather hazy and general ideas. Last week Frank Petho and Toby Dills presented two means of selecting the proposed Cabinet, or administrative branch of the Senate. They pointed out the advantages and disadvantages of both the slate and appointive systems. The general discussion also involved the position of the Senate in the overall power structure of the campus community. Gary Lindemuth presented a personal view of the campus hierarchy which includes the Faculty, Administration, and Senate.

The basic question of where the Senate stands in regard to these other campus areas and the authority within the Senate itself sparked this week's discussion. The importance of the various chairs in the existing Senate were examined to determine which ones were areas of direct Senate policy making and administration and which served mainly as links for communication of activities mostly outside of Senate jurisdiction.

It was decided that the Senate has greatest control over areas such as student relations, including freshmen and clubs, the coordination of special campus events, the general social life of students, intramural athletics, and communications. Other areas of campus life now represented by Senate chairmen are carried out through different channels.

Besides Senate reorganization, many other matters of business were discussed. Lynn Kagaris reported that the JWSF drive this year will be carried out to obtain funds for a foreign student and an underprivileged student. The goal of $1850 will be divided with $1000 for the foreign student, $700 for the underprivileged student, and $150 for operating costs.

A dining hall committee was established as a sounding board for student complaints and suggestions. Members of this committee are the Director of Food Service, Dining Hall Hostesses, three members elected from the dining hall staff, and representatives elected from both Men and Women's Houses. Those elected were Laura Lingenfelter, Leshner, Beth Clopper, South; Susan Loose, Brumbaugh-Geisda; Bob Gaylor, North; Jim Dinger, Cloister; Dave Kerstetter, Sherwood; and Dave McKean, New Dorm West.

Don Armstrong and Gary Rowe were appointed co-chairmen of the Coffee House and will share equal responsibilities. The Senate also voted to loan the Chess Club, represented by Allan Burkett, $100 in order to buy more equipment necessary for tournament play.

The charter for Juniata's newly established Pep Club was approved. The Senate also planned a retreat for December 10 at Green Hills Mansion in Barree.

Victory Over Susquehanna Prolongs Indians' Possession of Goal Post Trophy

by Cynthia Harris

In 1952, in the midst of an undefeated season, Juniata won the Susquehanna football game by a score of 54-0. The exuberant Juniatians ran to the goal post and shook it until it gave and came crashing down. A piece of this post was then carried back to Juniata in triumph, where for a short time it was the cause of somewhat strained relations between the two schools. Therefore it was decided to make a trophy out of the post, which would be passed back and forth between the two teams annually. Through the efforts of Harold Brumbaugh a plaque was made, the goal post was painted, and it became the symbol of rivalry between the two schools. A ceremony was held at which the goal post was officially recognized as such, and the plaque was engraved as follows: By joint consent, this section of the goal post taken from Susquehanna University by Juniata College during the moment of victory game in 1952 has become a symbol of the friendly rivalry between the two schools. The annual victor may keep it until the following season, meanwhile inscribing thereon the year involved.

Each year the goal post is carried to the game on the floor of the bus, and the students carry it on to the field where it is placed by the team benches for the duration of the game. When the game is ended, student government representatives from each school participate in a ceremony during which the trophy is handed over to the winning team. For five years Juniata has carried the post onto in love with this city."

About their living conditions—

Pat — "I'm living in a dorm so I have the coveted privilege of taking a shower every night if I wish. There is one strange custom, however, concerning toilet tissue. If one wishes to use it, one must carry it along to the 'salle de bain,' then take the remainder back to one's room. We're issued one roll about every two weeks!"

Pat — "I'm temporarily holding up in a 19th century apartment house. I heat all my water by my own grubby labor—and by the aid of a hot plate. It's the first time, I admit, I've ever brushed my teeth over the bathtub (no sink). German telephones are very perplexing: I still haven't figured how to use them. When I step into a telephone booth, I feel like I'm facing an IBM machine! They have wheels and knobs and lights that blink—they've got practically everything except understandable directions!"

Language classes—

Pat — "The classes are purely orientation and language. We've all made the trip to the bank, to the police station, to the post office with our tutors."

Janie — "We mainly work in the language lab (2 hours) and on grammar, with some history of Alsace thrown in. . . (and we . . . toured) the cathedral and the museum. Of course, we had to write compositions about the visits afterwards, though, so those few hours out of class weren't really such a treat."

Food—

Pat — (A typical European breakfast includes). . . "bread, jam, cheese and coffee," (dinner) "bread, cheese, meat if you're rich, and a large dinner is consumed at noon at the mensa (cafeteria) for about $4.00. Pastry is an ever present temptation with a shop in front of me every time I turn a corner."

Charlotte — "Delicious food."

Job hunting. Seniors should be aware of an early opportunity to have an interview with a representative from the U.S. Bureau of the Census. Usually interviews are scheduled in February, but this representative will be on campus in November. Interested persons should sign up now for an interview appointment in the placement office.

Powder puff football continues with scenes such as this being enacted at practice sessions and during games. Coached by interested football oriented males, the teams get real football experience and a lot of fun and exercise.

the field only to carry it off again victoriously; for two years, 1963 and 1964, Susquehanna claimed the trophy, and the Susquehanna-Juniata game was not played for four years due to rescheduling of the Indians.

The goal post itself, now on display in Tote, is painted with the Susquehanna colors of maroon and orange above the plaque and Juniata's blue and gold below. A new and temporary addition to the trophy this year was the hoop which was hung on it until it mysteriously disappeared. This hoop was part of the display which the Susquehanna team ran through, and it apparently turned up on the bus of its own accord. The goal post will remain in Tote this year instead of being returned to its previous site in the Guidance Office.

Representing Juniata at the conference are Linda Ronning, Sandy Baer, Rich Kensing, and Glenn Aston-Reese of the Juniatian and Dick Mohler, Karen Greiss, Janie Lukens, and Veasey Cullen of the Alfarata.

Miss Lillian M. Junas, Juniata's advisor to publications, and representative to the N.C.C.P.A., will participate in a panel presentation dealing with the photography aspect of news policy.

Grade Averages Released; Meanings Evoke Comment

by Sue Detar

"Hey, I'm above average!" "Gee, I should have been a boy!" Such exclamations of astonishment passed the lips of Juniata students who looked at the comparison of average grades released by the Office of the Registrar. When they all came to realize what the numbers meant and that the cumulative average of the college at the end of the spring '66 term was 2.41, the general reaction seemed to indicate that no one thought JC students were so intelligent. "It's hard to believe... it looks so good."

Faculty opinion put a general damper on such an optimistic outlook. "The figures simply say that for the fall term for the last five years the lowest average was 2.35 and the highest was 2.39 while in the spring term it varied from 2.37 to 2.49. The most interesting thing in the chart to faculty and administration is its relative stability. Despite changes in curriculum and grading scales, grade averages have remained basically steady in the last thirty years. No one would say if this is good or bad; it's just interesting. Tendency was to agree that this was favorable. "If grade averages would continue to go up and up, professors would have to take a good look at the curriculum and their criteria for grading."

One member of the faculty remarked that the relative merits of the figures could also be regarded on an absolute basis. If the students have a better mastery of basic knowledge than did students previously, don't they deserve a better grade? But at the same time, students come to college better qualified than they did even five years ago. Just think, with the same grading scales as ten years ago, half the college could be on Dean's List.

The notable increase in the Freshman average last year could be due most probably to an added motivation—Viet Nam. Last spring the Freshman men's average equaled the 2.33 of the Freshman women, a rare occurrence on one chart.

One student also pointed out that although the averages generally tend to be higher in the spring than in the fall, last year there were decreases from fall to spring in the averages of the freshman women and the Senior men. Could there be a lesson in here somewhere?

Juniata is no exception to the majority of small eastern co-ed schools where women have a higher average than men. In our averages last year the women beat the men 2.46 to 2.34.

Some of those students who understand the numbers consider them to be meaningless because of changes in curriculum and the inability to compare them to the averages of other schools. Why compare? That 3.03 average for Senior women in spring '64 looks pretty good especially if you ignore the 1.87 of the Freshman men in the fall of '62.

As every student comes to realize the meaning of such statistics, the question becomes—How average is my average in the comparison of the average average of averages?

Prof. Johnson Presents Annual Fall Organ Recital

Five centuries of music will be represented in an organ recital presented by Donald S. Johnson, professor of music, Juniata College, Sunday afternoon, October 23, at 3:30 p.m. in Oller Hall.

The program will offer music from the 15th through the 20th centuries. An annual event, this will be Professor Johnson's 23rd fall recital on the Juniata campus.

Donald S. Johnson

Assisting musician will be Mrs. Phyllis Wald Henry, prominent soprano and voice teacher of Huntingdon, who will sing a group of art songs by Edward Grieg, in the Norwegian language.

Mrs. Henry studied voice at Cornell University, with Eric Dudley; New York City, with Paul Althouse; Chicago with Rudolph M. Messers and at State College with Martha Ramsey. She has sung in this area in many concerts and oratorios and with the Choral Society of State College.

Prof. Johnson, college organist at Juniata, also is organist-director at the Huntingdon First Methodist Church where he trains three choirs. He is a graduate of New York University and has studied at Bush Conservatory, Chicago; the Christiansen Choral School; Union Theological Seminary School of Sacred Music; and the Church Music Institute at Alfred, N.Y.

The first group of the recital will consist of music by four early composers: Purcell, J. S. Bach, Couperin and Mozart. One of the pieces will be Johann Sebastian Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in B Minor", an awe-inspiring work which gradually assumes symphonic proportions.

Modern composers make up the second group, including Paul Hindemith, Richard Purvis, Seth Bingham and Louis Vierne. "Sonata III" by Hindemith utilizes German folksongs as themes and provides an excellent example of the work by this great contemporary composer.

Other pieces which will be presented during the recital include: Fanfare and Variation by Henry Purcell; Bells of Arcadia by Francois Couperin; Fantasy in F minor and F major, by Mozart; Pastorale by Richard Purvis; Roulade by Seth Bingham; and Westminster Carillon by Louis Vierne.

Masque Sponsors Drama Competition

Juniata will witness still another "first" this year as members of the Masque sponsor a drama festival. Originally, ten colleges were asked to participate, and four of these have responded so far. Albright College, Delaware College, Juniata, and one other are those which have agreed to participate; however, this list is not definite. Each participating college will be required to pay an entrance fee of ten dollars with the understanding that none of this money goes to Juniata—all such proceeds are to be used for prize money. Each college will be given forty-five minutes in which to perform. Local citizens will judge the contest.

Juniata will present excerpts from the play "Miss Julie" for the festival, with Barbara Rowe as Miss Julie, Richard Buchanan as Jean, and Carol Climer as Christine. The play itself, a ninety minute tragedy put on last year for the Discovery program, tells of an aristocratic woman who faces conflict between her love-life and the preservation of her name.

Tussey-Terrace Dedication Highlights Parents' Day

Student leaders of Juniata College and officers of the Parents Association, have arranged a full program including classes, football game and a building dedication, for more than 1200 parents and guests on the campus this Saturday.

Parents Association officers under the leadership of President John Anodiades, of Baltimore, Md., have worked closely with student leaders James Donaldson, Coraopolis, Pa., president of the student senate and Norma Jean Edgar, Royersford, Pa., general activities chairman of the student senate.

Arrangements have been made for class visitations, receptions with the deans and faculty, dedication of a new men's dormitory and a student variety show.

Highlight of the day will be the dedication of the Tussey-Terrace Residence Complex, the largest dormitory on the Juniata campus and the third to be built in the current long-range development program.

The class visitors will hear lectures on the Judeo-Christian Heritage by Dr. Earl Kaylor, Jr.; The Nature and Function of Business by Dr. Ronald Cherry; Microbiology by Mr. Robert P. Zimmerman; Second Year German by Mr. George T. Dolnikowski; Logic by Mr. Floyd A. Inman; and The Development and Structure of Chordates by Mr. Robert L. Fisher.

The traditional football game will be played against Lycoming College. The reception for parents, faculty and guests will be held after the game at three locations on campus. In the evening the students will offer a variety show under the direction of Don Ardolino, senior from Johnstown, Pa., and Anita Smith, junior from New Enterprise, Pa. Two acts will be given in two locations simultaneously so all the parents may see the show. Between acts the actors will switch from one stage to the other.

Concluding the weekend will be an all-college worship service Sunday morning in Oller Hall.

Faus Interprets Convocation Purposes, Calls Function Essentially Educational

by Mary Schmoyer

An important program set up in accordance with the religious commitment of Juniata College is the Convocation Program. In order that more JC students might fully understand the true purposes of this program Rev. Robert Faus, Minister to the students here on campus, presented several different interpretations of the convocations.

An attempt is being made to reflect the faith of the students, even though this can be difficult because of the wide diversity of beliefs. The students need opportunities to explore their own religious commitments so that they may challenge these beliefs or cultivate new ones.

One possible interpretation could be that the convocation is "the place where the institution (college) tries to indoctrinate, or at least defend, Christian attitudes in the academic community." Unfortunately, the convocation setting provides no opportunity for argument and discussion to further understand any aspect of the Christian faith as it is presented by the program.

The real purpose of the convocations is an educational one, which means that an attempt is being made "to represent the variety of religious ideas to the academic community for purposes of education." It is assumed, of course, that students will not agree with all the convocation programs. This is all right, for the programs permit the understanding of the events occurring in religious communities.

The students are not expected to change their ways of thinking in order to agree with the convocation speaker. Instead, they are offered the opportunity to interpret the ideas of the speaker and relate them to their own ideas of thinking. This definitely allows them to think through their own questions.

These purposes permit a wide range of individuals and ideas to become involved in the convocation programs: Conservative theology vs. liberal theology; Traditional views vs. modern ones; Orthodox ecclesiology vs. radical departure from it. Currently, Rev. Faus plans and moderates the programs. In the formation stage is the Convocation Committee composed of students who will help plan programs. The committee, under the administration of Rev. Faus, will be responsible to the Students Activities Committee. Since this program is for the benefit of the students, Rev. Faus and the committee will welcome any criticisms and ideas concerning the convocations.

Looking ahead toward future convocations, one finds many thought provoking presentations. Next Wednesday, October 26, Rev. Faus will express his concern for the students in their own feelings that there is a lack of concern for them by the adult world, consisting of parents, teachers, and administration. His theme will be, "Why Don't They Cry for Me?" November 2, Dr. John Wheatcroft, a poet and writer, will present his work concerning the Word. November 9, Dr. Harold K. Schilling, Professor of Physics, will present his viewpoints concerning man's personal struggle with scientific achievement. And, a graduate of Juniata College, will speak for the Juniata World Service Fund, November 16. A native of Kenya, he will present the need for intercultural exchange. December 7, Dr. Frank Gabele, a conservative theologian, will speak about the Christian and Aesthetics.

With all these presented purposes in mind Rev. Faus concluded, "While the Convocation Program doesn't seek to indoctrinate or evangelize or even unify the student body, it is hoped that it will stimulate them at least to do some thinking of their own, something I hope that isn't foreign to the academic community."

Senate, Judiciary Reorganization Debate Continues

A major issue confronting the Senate, its members and the entire student body is the reorganization of the Senate departments. Chairmen are concerned with specifically stating the responsibilities and authority of their chairs.

The proposed method now being debated is that of separating the policy-making branch (or legislature) from the administrative (or cabinet) branch of the Senate. Slow but definite progress is being made because purpose and organization of the chairs have to be clearly defined before action can be taken on the Senate body.

The basic question underlying Senate reorganization is one of ineffectiveness in policy-making. Students are responsible for policy-making in many campus activities, such as athletic programs, major campus weekends, etc.

Feeling that students do not actively participate in setting up regulations, the Senate is striving for a reorganization in which students can question school policies which they feel are not effective. In areas such as academic affairs, Men's and Women's House, students should play a major role in administration.

The Chairmen in the Senate believe that they should be able to (a) investigate, (b) make, and (c) carry out policies that fall under their jurisdiction. This is their main reason for examining the present Senate's functions.

The Judiciary body is also considering new plans for development. The Judiciary was effective during the five or six years after its founding in 1956. But recently there has been a lack of interest, due to the fact that students are not aware of judicial functions.

Thus the Senate reorganization will parallel a revision of the Judiciary. The need for changes was realized at the Leadership Conference held this summer. Plans are being made to submit a report on tentative judicial organization to the Senate for approval. In the process of preparing this report, information on judicial systems at other similar colleges is being obtained.

The present Senate organization does permit the Senate to carry out

For Better Elections

Student government exists for the benefit of the students and should be supported by student action, both in who runs for what office and how the selection is made. Past elections on this campus have exhibited poor results in relation to various election procedures; we have seen lack of enthusiasm in that too few people have been actually interested in serving in student government positions (usually the slate of candidates is small), and in that the electorate generally has to be reminded, asked, begged, and prodded to exercise its voting power. Note the existence of a Senate Election Publicist who already has issued his first reminder to the students to vote. This is a wise measure in effecting better participation in elections, but its necessity does not speak well for the political spirit of the student body.

The first experience with politics for this school year, namely the election of the Freshman Steering Committee, carries with it some interesting implications. In the first place we might note that the essence of the steering committee idea is to provide an opportunity for those interested persons to get involved in class politics without going through the more discriminating methods of election of class officers as such, so early in the year with such a new group of people. The committee is made up of seven people. With only nine running, doesn't it seem almost silly to brother with an election such as this, perverted as it was into a choosing of those two not to be on the committee? If an election were not held, and the committee were to be composed strictly on a volunteer basis, would not more people give themselves to the work? How could a response as great be achieved in an election situation? More interest must somehow be developed so that a larger slate makes the election worthwhile and less of a farce.

The slate is not only concern here. The standard Juniata cry of apathy may be heard; just slightly more than half of the Freshman Class voted in the sorry election. We would hope that this is not indicative of a trend.

To use the example of the Steering Committee Election may not be totally valid as it is limited to only a part of the student body. It should however, serve to demonstrate that more awareness and sincere interest in elections is needed. A most interesting election it would be to see real political battles ensuing with the students anxious to resolve the debates, beating down the doors to Tote to mark their ballots. It's possible; and we can make it probable.

Solving the Teacher Shortage

by Dr. Crouch
Chairman, Education Department

The school systems of our country are experiencing their worst teacher shortage in twenty years. This shortage is not ephemeral in nature. It will not be solved by any combination of substitute or crash programs for teacher preparation. In addition, this situation is more painful to bear because over the last five years educators have seen fit to announce that the shortage was about over; that supply and demand were soon to reach a balance. What has happened?

For one thing, industry continues to offer more starting pay to the college graduate. However, it is not all starting pay. Los Angeles, located in the heart of the second highest paying state in the nation (Alaska is highest), experienced a shortage of 800 public school teachers at the beginning of the current school year. Industry offers more in side benefits. But even this is a major problem, for many schools are now offering some help toward graduate degrees, paying for insurance, and making other attempts to add side benefits to their programs. Then what is the problem?

I believe the answer lies in salesmanship. Industry sends to the college campus high-powered personnel men who "sell" a better future to our young people than do those who represent school systems. And to make matters worse, our college faculties tend to support the programs provided by industry and positively refuse to "sell" teaching as a respectable, desirable profession. They seem to find it difficult to help perpetuate their own kind. The college faculty's refusal to sell teaching results in two problems for our educational society. First, there is the current teacher shortage throughout elementary, secondary, and higher education. Second, the quality of education given youth coming to college or going directly into the work world is not as high as it might have been if youth had been confronted with good teachers in elementary and secondary schools. What is the answer?

There is not space here to discuss all possible answers. But I suggest that for a good beginning all faculties and especially those on liberal arts campuses need to turn their attention to "selling" teaching to those students who can make a sound contribution to the profession of encouraging others to "learn." They need to let industry and business sell their own programs and concentrate, themselves, on making sure that our education systems do not suffer from neglect just when the need is the most critical.

If there is such a thing as a good liberal arts program then it would seem that it could not be of more value than in the preparation of teachers whose job it is to work with

JC Movie Night

"Black Orpheus", the feature presentation for next Tuesday's JC Movie Night at the Clifton Theatre, was awarded the grand prize at the Cannes International Film Festival in 1959. Widely praised by major film critics, the film is an modern re-enactment of the ancient legend of Orpheus and Eurydice. Filmed in Rio de Janeiro under the direction of Marcel Camus, the film appeals to the audience on an aesthetic level in its poignant portrayal of this ancient theme.

The film stars Breno Mello as Orpheus and Marpessa Dawn as Eurydice. The feature begins at 8:15, short features at 8:00.

Around Campus

Bids on the new Academic Center—the former Science Building—have been delayed until Congress appropriates money for the higher education facilities act. Latest word is that the Senate passed the money measure but a conference committee must resolve differences with a $2.9 billion House passed version.

President Calvert Ellis is visiting colleges in the South as part of a special project for the Ford Foundation. He attended a meeting of the American Council on Education in New Orleans and the meeting of the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities at Bedford Springs.

Where did the long student hated Shakespeare statue in the Beeghly library disappear? Previous student pranks included decoration of Willie (paper cups and chewing gum the most frequent contenders) and academic honors (laurel-and-otherwise wreaths bedecked the Shakespearean brow). And now all there is a sign "Out to Lunch." Did Willie perhaps leave the library thankful?

Registrar John Hollinger reports that there are 1,009 residents (609 men and 400 women). The 69 non-resident students break down into 54 men and 15 women. 1,078 undergraduates are working toward a degree and 27 are not. The total enrollment is 1,105 or a 6 1/2 percent increase over 1965-66. The student body consists of 203 seniors, 215 juniors, 317 sophomores, and 343 freshmen. There are 24 juniors studying abroad or in the UN program at Drew University.

In Defense of Crime

by Paul Danish

(CPS) A word about crime. There's been a lot of concern about crime lately. Crime seems to be the best thing to come around since the I Love Lucy show. There is crime in the streets. There is crime in the country. There is crime in the universities. Everybody is against crime. Why not? It's safe.

Honesty, however, dictates us to write a slight dissent into the record. When it comes to crime we're for it.

Because you are. We sell newspapers on crime news because you devour them.

A good juicy murder is the best emotional catharsis that can be had next to war. Nothing titillates the public appetite like hate, sex, and violence. You love it.

The reason you love it is because it gives you a chance to vent your spleen.

"An ax murder in a music room?"

"How awful."

"There ought to be a law."

"It's the work of outside agitators."

"Throw them all in the brig."

There is a little right wing maniac in all of us; and a report of a crime of violence is perhaps the only time we have to indulge this human, all too human, failing. It is the one time we can—with perfect safety—demand that we scrap our democratic ideals and replace them with the rough, gut sort of justice that is in essence incipient fascism.

"They ought to string the bastard up."

Maybe they ought to. Maybe we would be better people if we could work our frustrations off by taking vengeance on those who put themselves beyond good and evil. Society has always demanded its pound of flesh; maybe our problem is that we have hesitated to give it.

Yeah, that's the answer. Kill.

Kill for law. Kill for order. Kill for peace. Kill. Kill. Kill.

We'll be better men if we kill Richard Speck. Civilization will crumble if we don't gas Joseph Morse. He might be innocent or he might be guilty, but who gives a damn. The important thing is that we feel clean again.

The point is that if the American experience means anything it means that liberty and freedom and justice are god-given rights, and they don't fold up the first time some psychopath decides to assassinate the human race.

If our vaunted freedom is worth anything—the self-same freedom which we have shipped 300,000 men half way around the world to defend—it has to be durable enough to withstand the onslaughts of syndicalist violence.

Whether or not it remains to be seen. A couple of spectacular murders, and half the country is primed to strike the second amendment from the Bill of Rights. The same people don't seem to be particularly adverse to knocking out the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th, either—if they can be guaranteed the right to play in the streets after dark.

Democracy, however, requires that we assume the criminal is the exception—even if there are enough of them around to make the streets unsafe for democracy. If we really do believe in freedom, we must assume that every man—no matter how depraved and corrupt he seems—is as virtuous as every other man, until proved otherwise in a court of law. And not a kangaroo court.

The reason we fight and die for democracy is to guarantee that every individual will receive the dignity that should be accorded to him by virtue of the fact that he is a man.

Rich man, poor man, beggarman, thief, Doctor, lawyer, Indian chief. Freedom is wasteful, inefficient, even dangerous. Get rid of it, and you can have law and order.

You can walk the streets in perfect safety.

You can have the trains run on time.

And you can die a little and go to hell.

Gettysburg Address

by Robert Ewegen

(CPS) (As presented by Little Boy Johnson, President of the United States and grandson of a former President whom we all know and love. The address was delivered at the dedication of the American military cemetery, "Gettysburg East," outside of Saigon in the year 2052.)

Mah fellow Americans: Foah score and seven years ago, my grandfather brought forth upon this continent of Asia a new political concept, conceived in expediency and dedicated to the proposition that we are better dead than red.

Now we are engaged in a Great Society (oops, I mean a Great Civil War), and for that matter have been engaged in that Great Civil War for four score and seven years now, testing whether that concept of a permanent American military presence in Asia or any concept so ill-conceived and so ineptly executed, can long endure.

We are met on a great battlefield of that war, a battlefield where General Ky was overthrown by General Hee, where General Hee was overthrown by General Me, where General Me was overthrown by General Wee, where General Wee was overthrown by General Gee, and so forth through the 56 different coups that finally culminated last spring in General Flea's government, which we are now convinced is in a position to bring to this nation the political stability that is so necessary if we are to begin to effectively roll back he aggression from the north.

Excuse me folks, I just received an urgent note. (Oh no, not again.) Hrrump. What I meant was the 57 coups which finally culminated in General She's coup three minutes ago which we are finally convinced is in a position to at last offer this nation the political stability that is.

Hmmph. Be that as it may. We have come to dedicate this battlefield as a fitting memorial to the light to moderate losses that our forces have sustained over the past 87 years so that my grandfather and his successors could test the theory that the way to bring Hanoi to the peace table was to escalate further.

It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this, and anyone who thinks otherwise is a nervous nelly and probably a traitor besides and simply helping to prolong the war.

The world will long note and long remember what we did here, probably because we will still be long doing it, but the world will probably never understand WHY we did it.

And frankly, I'm fed up with that kind of idiotic questioning emanating from the capitals of the world over the last nine decades! I DON'T CARE WHY WE ARE HERE! THE POINT IS WE ARE HERE AND IT'S TOO LATE TO PULL OUT NOW! WE ARE GOING TO STAY HERE! WE ARE GOING TO ESCALATE! THIS UNPATRIOTIC PRACTICE OF DEFERRING GRANDFATHERS HAS TO STOP SO THAT WE CAN BUILD UP OUR TROOP COMMITMENT TO $8,000,000 MEN. ONLY THEN WE WILL HAVE AN ADEQUATE STRENGTH RATIO OF 84 TO 1 NECESSARY TO PUT DOWN THIS INSURRECTION.

Prints such as these two comprise the display from the Brooklyn Museum's Fourteenth National Print Exhibition, which opened here as a part of the Focus Series. The 71 prints selected by Miss Una A. Johnson, Curator of Prints & Drawings to represent a cross-section of print-making in the United States, have been on view in the Shoemaker Galleries since Oct. 14. The Show will remain here until Nov. 14. This traveling group of prints, chosen from the original exhibition of 165 prints, includes the purchase prize awards by Robert Broner, Gudith Hohn, Peter Hoover, John Hultberg, Boies Margo, Ramon E. Oeschberg, Andrew Rush, Robert Schuler, Arthur Thrall, Michael Mazur, and Garbor Reterd.

The print exhibition is indicative of the increased interest in print making which is evident in the U. S. today. More and more people are becoming interested in art and in owning good works of art. Due to the expense involved in buying original works, many collectors prefer to buy original prints. The growth each year of the size of the Brooklyn Museum's print exhibitions show, as Miss Johnson says, "the continuing vitality and exuberance of the print in twentieth century art."

Senate Announces Schedule For Reorganization of Clubs

All Juniata clubs will undergo re-evaluation in the near future as their club charters are presented to the Senate for an investigation of the club's effectiveness and value to the campus. In a memo presented to the Senate by Chairman of Underclassmen, Frank Petho, the standard form and content of club constitutions was outlined as well as the general procedure for the re-evaluation.

Each club will be notified by letter as to when their charter will be reviewed. A two week period will be allowed in which the club may submit its constitution. If no constitution is submitted, it will be assumed by the Senate that the club had no interest in acquiring a new charter. In such a case, subsequent action will be taken to revoke the club's present charter.

During the period of club re-evaluation the various clubs will be allowed to function under the present constitution and charter. In addition to this extensive investigation, the clubs will be reviewed again in one year. However, after the initial review, only the more physical aspects of the club will be subject to annual review.

Senate

The administrative duties, but does not permit it to serve the students to its full capacity. Gradually the members are coming to conclusions as to what student government should be. The Senate, after much preparation, will incorporate its ideas into a plan which it feels will function most effectively in its re-organization.

Nov. 13 through 19 has been designated as JWSF operation SOS (Students Opportunity Service) week. This week will see a series of activities designed to raise funds for the foreign and underprivileged students. Included in the planned activities are the election of a freshmen queen, faculty waiters in the dining rooms, a slacks and suits day, sacrifice supper, penny mile, former Nigerian student Andy Adele at Convocation speaker, and a Fair Night with Dr. Rockwell and a square dance and a country fair in the gym with various campus providing booths.

In connection with this week, the Senate granted JWSF $75 to help pay expenses for Mr. Adele. They also voted to back JWSF in their efforts to secure information on foreign exchange programs in order to get a foreign student at Juniata next year.

Mr. Glenn asked that the students be reminded to use box numbers on all inter-college mail and to limit the quantity and size to that specified. Because of the lack of help this year, students are requested to comply with these rules to facilitate the handling of the mail.

Senate reorganization discussion developed into a real two-sided debate as the Senate struggled with the problem of the inter-relationship of policy making and control between the Senate and various other powers on campus. Men's and Women's Houses and Religious Activities were discussed as to whether these should exist in such a way as to be controlled by the Senate or whether they should exist autonomously. The senators were divided on this question with each senator strongly convinced of the necessity of his position. The basic question was whether student activities such as those mentioned should also be subject to another student group. Some senators believed that these groups have been functioning autonomously and should remain so while the others strongly advocated bringing them within the control of the reorganized Senate structure. Each senator was asked to consider this question during the coming week in the hope that it can be decided finally at next week's meeting.

USMC Interviews

Captain Frank W. Tuckwiller of the Marine Officer Selection Office in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania will be on campus at Juniata College on October 27, 1966 to interview and test students who wish to receive a commission in the United States Marine Corps. Interviews and testing will be conducted in the Totem Inn while on campus.

The officer programs available to undergraduates are the Platoon Leaders Class (Ground) and Platoon Leaders Class (Aviation). These programs have two six-week training periods, which with successful completion leads to a commission upon graduation. For seniors or recent graduates there are the Officers Candidate Course and the Aviation Officer Candidate Course, which require successful completion of a ten-week training period after graduation and leads to a commission. Another important program is the Women Officer Candidate Course, for women who are juniors, seniors or college graduates.

All preliminary training is conducted at Quantico, Virginia. Ground officers continue training at Quantico once they are commissioned Second Lieutenants. The aviator, after his preliminary training at Quantico, goes to Pensacola, Florida for flight training.

Students who desire to participate in any of these programs may do so while in college without interference with studies or other college activities.

Busy Season Ahead For Juniata's Touring Choir

While many J. C. students were busy attending to last minute details before returning to their books, the Juniata Touring Choir and its director, Professor Bruce Hirsch, appeared on campus on September 11th for a week of rigorous preparation and rehearsals for the upcoming college year's activities. Life was not easy for the choir members, a typical day began with early morning calisthenics to aid in breathing exercises. Besides the jumping jacks and sit-ups, there was that run around Taylor Highlands and Round Top. Sectional rehearsals were held each morning so that each could learn its part in the music and work out any problems concerning its performance. 10:30 a.m. was reserved for full rehearsals of all sections. Since "all work and no play makes Johnny a dull boy," the two-hour evening rehearsal was preceded by a free afternoon. In addition, the picnic and dances were welcomed activities during the busy week.

The choir will tour the Philadelphia-New Jersey area and Maryland from January 28 to February 5, 1967. In addition, two weekend tours during the second semester are scheduled, the areas of which are not yet definite. A program of religious music with brass and organ accompaniment will be offered in the churches. The performances in the high schools will include a 15-minute presentation of religious music, followed by Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial By Jury."

The on campus performances include singing at the dedication of Tussey and Terrace, the new wings of West Hall, on Parents' Day. The Christmas presentation will be "Amahl and the Night Visitors," which will be presented on Sunday, December 11. In May, the musical, "Brigadoon," is the scheduled presentation. All the choir members are eagerly looking forward to acquiring their new scarlet robes trimmed with antique gold and white satin.

Voting for the members of the Freshman Steering Committee was held Tuesday evening in Tote. The results are as follows: Carmen Patete, James Wilkes, Scott Taylor, Sally Palmer, Anne Nicklaus, Susan Folk, and Rich Sackett.

This is Russ Kennedy of Balboa Island, California, on an in-port field trip as a student aboard Chapman College's floating campus.

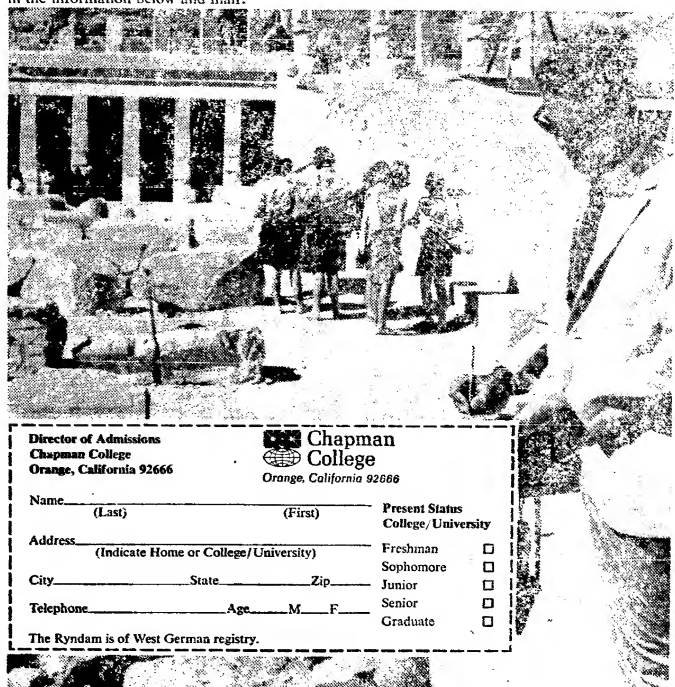

The note he paused to make as fellow students went ahead to inspect Hatshepsut's Tomb in the Valley of the Kings near Luxor, he used to complete an assignment for his Comparative World Cultures professor.

Russ transferred the 12 units earned during the study-travel semester at sea to his record at the University of California at Irvine where he continues studies toward a teaching career in the sciences.

As you read this, 450 other students have begun the fall semester voyage of discovery with Chapman aboard the s.s. RYNDAM, for which Holland-America Line acts as General Passenger Agents.

In February still another 450 will embark from Los Angeles for the spring 1967 semester, this time bound for the Panama Canal, Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Nigeria, Senegal, Morocco, Spain, Portugal, The Netherlands, Denmark, Great Britain and New York.

For a catalog describing how you can include a semester at sea in your educational plans, fill in the information below and mail.

Parents To Watch Indians Meet Warriors

Juniata's Indians will take on the Lycoming Warriors before a Parents' Day crowd on College Field tomorrow afternoon. JC brings a 2-2 record into the game, while Lycoming is 2-3.

Two of Lycoming's losses were to Upsala and Albright. Both of these teams also defeated the Tribe. Albright downed the Warriors 10-0 and JC 13-7. Upsala defeated Lycoming last Saturday 27-12, while they squeezed out a 15-10 victory over the Indians.

The Lycoming Warriors, who had a fair '65 season with 5 wins and 3 losses, expected better things this year with a strong nucleus of 28 returning lettermen. Their team has not yet lived up to the coaches' expectations. The Warriors' team, which gave up 81 points while scoring 153 last season, has allowed 98 points and scored only 68 in five games and this year. Last year JC was one of the three teams to beat Lycoming. The Tribe won by a score of 17-13. This will be the tenth meeting between the two schools, with Juniata leading the series 8-1.

One of the top returning lettermen for LC is fullback Bob Stetson. The 225-pound senior co-captain has already attracted the attention of pro football scouts. Stetson is also an excellent linebacker. So far this year Head Coach Dave Bussey has used him both ways.

Juniata is riding a two-game winning streak into tomorrow's game. Last week the Indians downed Susquehanna 37-0, and the week before Susquehanna was its victim by a score of 54-6. So far this year, JC's opponents have been able to score only 34 points while the Tribe has chalked up 108.

In last week's game with Geneva, JC's defense had a field day scoring 8 points on a touchdown and safety while setting up another TD. Geneva's net offense was 84 yards; only 12 yards were gained rushing.

Geneva came roaring out at the beginning of the game, holding the Tribe on three plays, then blocking Steve Horner's punt on JC's 36. On three straight runnings Geneva had a first down inside the Indian's 25. Juniata's defense then came alive and held the Golden Tornadoes at the 24.

After an exchange of punts, Juniata started their first scoring drive from their own 14. Two big plays during that drive were passes to Horner for 15 yards and one to Albright for 49 yards. The pass to Albright put the ball on Geneva's 6-yard-line, where Weiss moved a round the right end after a great fake for the score.

After Bieber's kickoff, Geneva was forced to punt. Dave Fleck broke in to block the punt and Ron Favinger scooped the ball out of the air and took it in for the TD.

Later in the second quarter Geneva fumbled the ball on their 22. On the next play Weiss rolled and hit Pascale in the end zone for the score.

In the very next series of plays Geneva was unable to move the ball against JC's strong defense. The snapback to the punter was high and he was tackled on Geneva's 4-yard-line. One play later Berlanda drove into the end zone from 3 yards out.

After the second half started, Geneva made one of their first deep penetrations into JC's territory before fumbling on JC's 39. This started the Indians on their last TD drive of the game. Berlanda started things rolling with a 5-yard plunge. Then Weiss threw to Albright cutting across the center for a 31-yard pass play. Two fine runs by Weiss and Horner were nullified by a 15-yard penalty, but this did not stop the Indians. After a draw to Jim Hartland, Weiss hit Jeff Barnes in the end zone for a 22-yard TD pass. Bieber scored the point, which made him 5 for 5 in that department for the afternoon.

Late in the fourth quarter, Geneva's third team quarterback, Galiffa, tried to pass from his own end zone, but Gary Ross caught him for a safety to end the scoring for the day.

Scoring Summary:
Juniata 14 14 7 2-37
Geneva 0 0 0 0-0
Jun-Weiss, 6-yard run (Bieber kick)
Jun-Favinger, 7-yard run of blocked punt (Bieber kick)
Jun-Pascale, 33-yard run from Weiss (Bieber kick)
Jun-Berlanda, 3-yard run (Bieber kick)
Jun-Barnes, 22-yard pass from Weiss (Bieber kick)
June-Safety, Galiffa tackled by Gary Ross in end zone

Bo Berlanda (33) drives through the center of the Geneva line. Berlanda is currently JC's leader in the rushing department with 139 net yards. He helped power JC to a 37-0 win over Geneva last Saturday with a 3-yard TD run.

Intramural Sports Program In Full Swing For This Fall

Spotlight On IMs

by Rick Beard

The fall intramural sports program, now in full swing, offers competition in tennis, both singles and doubles, handball, and touch football. The singles competition in tennis has reduced the initial twenty players to seven — John Solis-Cohen, Jim Dinger, Tom McAulay, Dave Newcomer, Carmen Petie, and Wayne Wisler. The seedings place John Solis-Cohen as favorite, with Dave Newcomer, Al White, and Jim Dinger in the second, third, and fourth slots.

In doubles competition eight partners signed up for play. At this stage of competition only four remain. They are John Solis-Cohen and Ken Howie, Professors Fisher and Pirogner, John Kantonah and Jim Dinger, and Will Brandau and Bob Riech. Solis-Cohen and his partner are top seeds in this competition.

The touch football program is operating with ten teams of eight to twelve men, although only six men play at a side at one time. The present standings are—

Bridge Tourney First on Campus

by Larry Bieber

The first duplicate bridge tournament of this year was held Thursday evening in Women's Gym with ten partnerships participating. Twenty hands were played and when it was all over, Al Burkett and Steve Werner emerged winners in the tough North-South group with 51½ match points to the 44 points of second place Terry Fabian and Les Donahue. In the East-West pairs, Paul Schaffer and Bob Knuth were easy winners with 56 points. The Bowlers finished second. The next tournament will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, November 19, and all bridge players on campus are invited.

JC Runners Lose Meet To Geneva

by Bob Dun

Juniata lost to a tough, experienced Geneva team, 22-36, to give the hard-time of 23:17 for the four mile course, but Geneva captured six of the next seven places. For Juniata, Phil Sipling finished fifth; Merle Landsberry, ninth; Aubrey Sherk, tenth; and Jim Massingham, eleventh. Next Wednesday, Juniata will host arch-rival Elizabethtown at 4:00. Last year Elizabethtown was the MAC champion and has most of its men back from last year.

Coach Snider said that the rest of the season will be rough, since JC will face several veteran teams on unfamiliar courses. However, Coach Snider emphasized that the team has done real well considering that the majority of the runners are first year men.

The summary: (1) Beard(J); (2) Robb(G); (3) Rawl(G); (4) Stierrett(G); (5) Sipling(J); (6) Hemphill(G); (7) Martin(G); (8) Smith(G); (9) Lansberry(J); (10) Sherk(J); (11) Massingham(J).

JC suffered one casualty last Saturday at Beaver Falls. Freshman Victor Rini suffered an attack of appendicitis and went under the knife at 12:30 p.m. in Providence Hospital. "Vic" should be out of the hospital by Saturday.

Anyone looking around JC's campus this week has probably wondered what our girls have been up to. Many have been seen sporting ankle wraps, knee braces, armbands and ice packs. These items are not usually found among the members of the "fair and gentle sex," but due to the vicious nature of the powder puff football games among the four classes they have become necessities. Both the Junior girls and Frosh girls are undefeated, while the Senior and Soph girls have yet to win a game. The Juniors walloped the Seniors behind the running of their fabulous scaback. (Her name has been omitted to avoid embarrassment.) The Frosh girls have put down the Seniors and Sophomores.

One athletic "miss" (fortunately for the guys she does not go to JC) who was in the news several weeks ago is Mary Stone, a resident of Texas. A 19-year-old phys-ed major, Miss Stone, standing 6 feet, weighing 170 pounds (They always did brag about the big ones in Texas), flung a rolling pin 105 feet to win the National Rolling Pin Championship held at the Allegheny County Fair in Pittsburgh. Miss Stone, however, was disappointed in her throw, stating that she threw it 133 feet in Texas.

Coach Trimmer announced that 36 candidates showed up for basketball this season. Of these, 8 are returning lettermen. Senior lettermen are Jim Doyle and Bob Pascale. Doyle, however, did not play last year, but lettered in the sophomore year. Junior lettermen are Jim Biello, Will Brandeau, Ron Favinger, and Clair Kenyon. Tom Deftore and John Stultz are the lettermen in the Sophomore class. Upper classmen returning from last year's team who did not letter are Juniors, Ed Herrick, Russ MacIsaac, and John Tussey; and Sophomores, Dale Broadwater and Bob Chandler. Gary Wessinger, a Sophomore, did not play last year. Freshmen candidates are Marty Arnold, Bruce Bader, Adam Barnhart, Gene Galbraith, Tom Hengst, Bill McQuade, Vic Roberts, Ken Rookstool, Bill Stavisky, Terry Turnbaugh, Jim Wilkes, Bob Wood, Eric Woodworth, Pete Straup, Kurt Gansauer, John Greiner, Robert Krouse, Jeff Lesnett and Russell Mizell. Three transfer students, ineligible to play varsity this year, are Tom Malcher from Wisconsin, Doug Harman from York University College and Joel Delawski from Annapolis.

Brumbaugh Cradle Added To Carnegie Historic Collection

A recent addition to the Carnegie Museum has been the Brumbaugh Cradle, which has brought considerable attention to the history of the museum.

No one knows when the collection which is presently housed began. However, Miss Lillian Evans, a graduate of Juniata in 1910, maintained a place in the Juniata Library for literature, letters, relics, and other items which are normally considered to be of interest for a museum. Miss Evans was the librarian, and she assumed responsibility of the items.

When the new library building was constructed in 1963, the top area of the old building around the rotunda was designated as a museum for the first time. Prior to this, there was no organized preservation of artifacts and historical items. With the official designation of a museum, Mr. H. B. Brumbaugh was appointed curator.

Miss Evans served as college librarian from 1918 until 1952. Since her retirement, as a volunteer she has given considerable assistance to Mr. Brumbaugh in identification of, cataloging and organizing the collection.

That Juniata is a small college has been a great asset to the museum. Many things which were saved have been preserved by Juniata families who were so closely related to the founding and early growth of the college.

Many early pieces in the museum are of great interest. There is a hickory wicker chair from the wood-chopper's cabin at the old forge. Three Juniata boys took refuge here during a smallpox epidemic when school was closed and might not have continued if these three students had not remained.

The cane used by the first teacher of the college, Prof. Jacob Zuck, is contained in the museum.

From a historical viewpoint the most significant have been diaries kept by the three founders of the college, Dr. A. B. Brumbaugh, H. B. Brumbaugh, and J. B. Brumbaugh.

All creative individuals interested in submitting original drama, poetry, prose, photography, and line drawings for this semester's Kvadr are asked to note the November 28th deadline.

On Wednesday, November 2, Kvadr has organized a workshop at 2:30 p.m. in the Coffee House.

Also included is a complete collection of class pictures from 1879 until the middle twenties.

The most recent acquisition has been the Brumbaugh cradle, which was presented by Mr. Randall Brumbaugh of Marklesburg. Mr. Randall Brumbaugh is the nephew of a former Juniata College president, M. G. Brumbaugh, who was also a former governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. This is the cradle that rocked this former governor.

'Oriental Mystique' Court Nominated

At the beginning of next week the JC student body will have the opportunity to elect its favorite campus coed for homecoming queen.

Judy Tipton, who is in charge of the election of the queen, explained the procedure that will be followed in the choosing of the queen and her senior and junior attendants. The Men's House nominated six senior women students for queen and senior attendant and three junior women students for junior attendant. After Dean Helmes approved the nominees the girls were informed of their nominations and invited to run for the honors.

Toby Dills, vice-president of the Senate, is in charge of the election day voting. Each voter will receive a ballot listing the six senior and three junior contestants. The voter will write "Q" after the name of the senior girl as his choice for queen and "A" after his choice for senior attendant. The girl with the largest number of queen votes will be the homecoming queen. Of the remaining five the girl receiving the largest number of both queen and attendant votes will be the senior attendant. The junior attendant will be the girl who receives the largest number of attendant votes of the three junior nominees.

An exciting weekend will be in store for this winsome young lady. The queen will be notified of her election one week in advance of Homecoming Weekend so that she

Convo Speaker Wheatcroft Directs Poetry Workshop

"Gladly would he learn and gladly teach" is a line from Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales", which the students from Bucknell University used in their yearbook dedication in 1961, to describe Dr. John Wheatcroft, this week's Convocation speaker. Dr. Wheatcroft's feature topic will be "Language and Reality".

A native of Philadelphia, Dr. Wheatcroft first entered Temple University. With the outbreak of World War II, he served three years in the Navy aboard the U.S.S. Wisconsin. Upon returning, he transferred to Bucknell University, and in 1959, graduated cum laude, with honors in English literature. The following year, he received a master of arts degree.

John Wheatcroft

While at Bucknell, he earned a Ph.D. degree, both from Rutgers University.

In 1952, Dr. Wheatcroft came to Bucknell as an instructor in English. Five years later, he became an assistant professor, an associate in 1962, and in June of this year was given a full professorship.

While at Bucknell, he has received special recognition first in 1963, when he was given the Lindback Award for Distinguished Teaching, and second in 1964, the Class of 1956 Bucknell Lectureship.

Besides being a popular teacher at Bucknell, Dr. Wheatcroft is both a poet and playwright. Many of his writings have appeared in popular publications such as the "New York Times". In 1964, "Death of a Clown" was published containing a collection of his poems such as "Rachel On Long Island Sand Dune" and "Jug Band". This volume by Dr. Wheatcroft will soon be on sale at the bookstore.

His one-act play, "The True Tragedy of Patsy and Homer Youmans", was presented at the Yale University Festival of Drama in March of this year. In the previous year, Dr. Wheatcroft, was the author of a prize-winning script, "Ofati the Troll", on the nation's first community-sponsored educational television station, WQUD-TV, for a children's fantasy selected from 600 entries.

"The Third Robin", a three-act play for children, won the playwright award for 1963, at the Community Children's Theatre of Kansas City.

During Dr. Wheatcroft's stay on Wednesday, two workshops will be conducted. The first session in the afternoon, will give the students an opportunity for Dr. Wheatcroft's advice on their individual work and at eight o'clock in Alumni Hall, Dr. Wheatcroft will conduct poetry reading.

To Reflect and Affect

The Associated Collegiate Press Conference in Philadelphia last week, attended by the several members of the Juniata's editorial staff, proved to be an enlightening and stimulating experience. Probably not one of the 1200 student editors representing college and university papers from the entire country left that convention without having asked himself, even though several issues of his particular paper having already rolled off the presses, "So just what is this thing we're producing, 'The College Newspaper'." Most of us have returned to our respective campuses with many ideas and conceptions, ready to assess previous policy, ready to take a new or stronger stand on any and all aspects of our (unfortunately, but necessarily) amateur, journalistic endeavor. For us of The Juniata, the fact that is evident is that generally the college paper can be (and we are inclined to feel, should be) one of the most, if not the most significant and influential elements in the campus. This is not meant to be a vain statement; it is simple, accepted fact on many campuses, the possibility of which The Juniata is exploring and attempting to make a reality.

A matter of concern which comes to the fore here is what this college journalistic endeavor does and should entail; perhaps an elaborate definition of policy is in order. The Juniata has published from time to time a general statement of policy, unfortunately however the statement is general, propounding only the relative position of the paper in the college community and vaguely suggesting its function. The position of the paper is rather clear; bluntly put, we are an independent element. We have taken a legitimately adamant stand concerning this matter of independence and freedom of our press, and have been granted a fairly reasonable amount of freedom, the responsibility if and when we are wrong. We maintain our position of independency as the strictest, most basic, and essential component of policy.

It is not enough for a newspaper to assert its independence; to be sure, that is only the first step in striving towards significance. Policy is a big word, journalistically speaking, and position is only a part of that policy. The function and the rights of the newspaper are for the most part determined by position, but these too must be defined. Essentially what are developing are all kinds of subordinate policies concerning every facet of the newspapers existence. We must first establish precisely what the paper's function is. "The Juniata functions by reporting and discussing campus and non-campus events. . . ." So reads the general statement. This is a rather vague suggestion of a news policy. The question of what is news is probably of no interest to the reader. The paper comes out every Friday and he reads The news. A speaker at the ACP Conference suggested that such items as Homecoming and other such campus news releases are petty and have no place in the paper; the only real issues are Viet Nam and LSD. This seems slightly perverted. We are not about to discontinue coverage of football games in favor of drug investigations; what we are interested in though is broadening the scope of news coverage to include all those items pertinent to and concerning us as college students. It would be foolish to limit ourselves to either side. The essence of the college paper is in the word college; however college does not imply only on campus news. We report on Viet Nam and our football games from a collegiate point of view.

Up to this point it might seem that the newspaper is nothing more than a bulletin board or, only slightly better, a nicely printed collection of interesting objective reports. If this were all there was to a newspaper, how could it ever become one of the "significant elements on campus." The newspaper does by its very nature as a newspaper, serve in a bulletin board and reporting capacity, but more than this, the paper has the right—the responsibility—to take an active stand on an issue, a stand which would hopefully be a reactionary one. Herein lies the possibility for the significance and influence of the newspaper to be displayed. Naturally the position of the paper and the issues which are objectively presented determine what kind of a stand, if any, can be taken editorially. An editorial policy is the logical follow-up after the position and the news policy have been determined. The freedom that can be had here, and of course which is taken advantage of on our part, relate to the quality and influence of the paper.

The Juniata's independence has been established; a broader, yet more definite news policy has been set up. This all means that The Juniata can—and intends to—stand up for Something, one way or the other at its own discretion, when that Something worth taking a stand on comes along (unfortunately at the moment, concerning campus issues, it still seems early in the year).

The college paper can both reflect and affect the personality of its school. To make The Juniata a more respected, more significant, influential, positive asset to its community, we aim to do both.

The Student Revolution

by Linda Ronning

"Every newspaper must be a reactionary." The slender Boston University student editor, speaking intensely of the rights and obligations of journalism seemed typical of the college students gathered in the smoky hotel room for the press conference.

The slight build, dark hair, radical ideas evoked a strong reaction. "The endemic disease of journalism goes under the name of timidity characterized by objectivity."

A South Carolina Negro pondered the existence of student for college or college for student. A black turtle-neck, belonging to a San Francisco men's college, countered. "There are only two choices. We publish the administration's comment or our own propaganda."

The question of censorship arose, an almost inevitable conflict, but with a slightly 1966 twist. "A newspaper can not be a propaganda machine for any interest—playing up SDS (Students for Democratic Society) is as bad as being unpaid public relations managers for the alumni."

Questioning the status quo, a traditional student endeavor, directed discussion. Reality and action appeared the key word on campuses across the country as students and professors urge a halt to meditating in an ideal, abstract world and encourage action in a real world of people and suffering. Leading the movement are the civil rights worker, the student government President who organized an anti-discrimination drive in the college town, the Senior psych major who explored the cool of LSD trips among nameless wanderers in big cities, the conscientious objector, the truly alive, perceptive individual.

True, the student revolution had not struck all campuses. A sizable group of college editors still urged pressing for better food in the dining hall as opposed to investigating drugs on campus. However, a pudgy University of Kansas editor justified the exploratory approach in taboo areas, commenting, "The need to shock people into reacting and feeling a moral compulsion to answer is a legitimate goal of journalism."

Soiree Francaise Creates French Climate At Salute

Parlez-vous francais? Regardless of the answer to the preceding question, everyone will be welcome at the Soiree Francaise to be held from 8:30 to 10:30, Thursday evening, Nov. 3 in Salub.

The coffee house will live up to its name in greeting any students interested in sampling some French folklore, culture and food. Featured on the program are Dr. Robert G. Lewis, head of the French Department, who, accompanying himself on the guitar, will sing traditional folk-songs, and Fred Ibberson, who will sing "Je ne regrette rien," made famous by Edith Piaf. Students will read modern poetry by Guillaume Jacotet and Rene Char in bothC Apollinaire, Jean Follain, Philippe Jacotet and Rene Char in both French and English versions. An added interest will be a sing along in French fest requiring audience participation. Song sheets will be provided for those not familiar with the words.

The French being noted for their cuisine, typical French items will appear on the menu.

Organized by various campus Francophiles volunteering services as cooks, witnesses and performers, the soiree continues the trend started by the creation of the Maison Francaise in providing more opportunities for students to experience vicariously different aspects of a foreign culture. No admission fee will be charged.

Interested In International Relations?

Dr. William Olsen of Columbia Unive sity will be on campus Wednesday, 7:30 p.m. in South Hall Lounge to interview students who might be interested in applying to Columbia's School of International Affairs, of which he is Associate Dean. Any person interested in graduate study in the field of international affairs is invited to meet with Dean Olsen.

series of four vocal selections. The girls quite adequately displayed their musical talents.

Frank Petho was master of ceremonies for the second act. He related his hilarious surfing and water skiing escapades (It must be that trouble just manages to find him.), which held the audience in stitches.

An unusual and beautiful performance was presented by Myrna Laird as she presented the Samurai Dance, a Japanese dance telling the story of a Japanese soldier who boasted of his greatness after drinking saké. A song also dealing with the Samurai, "KoJo No Suki," was played by Myrna on the instrument, the Okoto. (Frank Petho described this instrument as resembling a surfboard. He definitely has a one track mind.)

The oral interpretation, "Three Crazy Women," managed to show the pettiness of three gossip women who seemed to let imaginary beings rule their lives. Mary Ellen Franck, Judy Hershey, and Susan Loose were excellent actresses as they actually assumed the identities of their respective characters.

The Dixieland Band seemed to be the highlight of the entire variety show. The audience thoroughly enjoyed the performance as was shown when an encore was demanded in Oller Hall. The musicians showed deep feeling and concentration in their music which was reflected upon the audience as they responded enthusiastically to the invitation to sing and keep time to "When the Saints Go Marching In." A stirring rendition of "The Old Rugged Cross" provided the audience with the encore they demanded. Quite a few new faces will probably show up at the Coffee House as a result of this performance. There's only one word to describe it — supercalifragilisticexpialidocious!

Examining produce in an open-air marketplace in Lisbon is one way to broaden one's knowledge of the ways of the Portuguese people. News and Views

A request for Senate support of a new student publication and a report on the results of the Communications' campus questionnaire highlighted this week's brief Senate meeting.

Phil Jones and Jim Wermuth asked for Senate approval and support of a proposed monthly magazine to serve as a means of expressing student opinion on non-campus issues. It is felt that there is a lack of student awareness concerning national and international issues. Such a magazine would serve as a sounding board for student ideas and response.

A general discussion followed concerning the purposes and need for such a publication at Juniata. Although there are several student publications in existence, none seems suited to the type of material which would be included in the proposed magazine.

While the senate generally favored the request, there were several suggestions offered as to how to present the issues in a somewhat different format. The use of symposiums, panels, or general discussions were proposed in lieu of the printed magazine. However, it was pointed out that in the printed form the student would be able to read the material in his leisure and have the material available at all times.

This proposal will be investigated by the Chairman of Communications who will present a recommendation at next week's meeting.

A brief report followed concerning the results of the campus questionnaire sent to students and faculty earlier this month. Approximately 400 of the 1100 questionnaires sent out have been returned.

A general consensus showed that students find the existing hours for Totem Inn unsatisfactory. The majority would like to see Tote open on Sunday afternoons.

There is a wide difference of opinion concerning smoking in Tote. With about 50 questionnaires still to be tabulated, 68 favor smoking in Tote as is; 162 would be in favor of smoking if the ventilation were improved; and 176 students are definitely against smoking there.

A majority of students favored the introduction of a WJC news program for both campus and world news. This will go into effect next Friday with a Senate report in the form of an interview being broadcast at 8 and 10 p.m. Each of the senators will take a turn at reporting Senate issues and opinions each week.

The first letters concerning new club charters will be sent out Monday. This marks the beginning of the Senate's investigation and re-evaluation of all campus clubs.

Next week's Senate agenda includes discussion concerning the placing of a personnel dean on the Dining Hall Committee to insure the presence of an administrative viewpoint. The ice skating rink will also be discussed with proposals for its financing and construction. Reorganization will again be discussed after being tabled from this week's meeting.

Juniata's quarterback Don Weiss was, for the second time this year, named as Sophomore of the Week by the Eastern College Athletic Conference. Weiss threw four touchdown passes as he tied a school passing record set by himself in this year's Susquehanna game. Ron Favinger, defensive end, made honorable mention on the ECAC list.

Weiss, who had suffered tonsillitis just a few days before the game, did not start against Lycoming. Freshman quarterback Terry Turnbaugh was given his first starting role at JC. Turnbaugh moved the team into Lycoming territory when Weiss came in. Weiss then quarterbacked the first team long enough to complete 10 passes for 4 TD's and 140 yards.

During halftime ceremonies last Saturday, all of the fans were intensely staring into the blue sky. The reason for this strange behavior was the expected arrival of Juniata's sky-diving sophomore, Jeff Dunkle.

Taking off from Mt. Union in a plan flown by Bud Getz of Mt. Union, Dunkle made his 93rd jump of his career down onto the middle of College Field. This was the smallest area that Dunkle has ever jumped into, and the fact that there are buildings on three sides and a field with scattered trees and fences on the other did not make his task any easier. For this reason publicity was kept to a minimum on the jump until conditions were found to be favorable.

According to Dunkle the conditions could not have been better; with a steady wind blowing the jump was relatively "easy", and he was very happy with his jump. The type of jump he made is normally not very accurate, but his was on Saturday. On some jumps the parachutist has both a forward speed and a downward speed. Because of the type of chute used and the way it was handled, Dunkle was able to eliminate any forward speed at the end of his jump and come straight down. This second method also has less impact and allows for a stand-up landing.

Not only did Dunkle make a good impression coming down, but when he took off his jumping suit he was dressed up in a suit looking as if he had just come from a dance. Toby Dills was the man behind the scenes again as it was he who got the Pep Club to sponsor Dunkle's jump.

Juniata's sophomores (it was the boys this time) won a 8-0 victory in a hard fought battle with the freshmen last Friday in the annual Frosh-Soph football game. All of the scoring came in the second half. Brad Watts hit Denny Creter from five yards out to give the Sophs the margin of victory. Then from QB Joe Fredale was tagged by Bill James in the end zone to pass on a safety to the sophs' score.

The offensive line were:

Freshmen: Larry Becker, end; Gary Snyder, end; Bob Krall, tackle; Stan Stravinsky, tackle; Pete Schyler, guard; Ken Mickelson, guard; Ron Ellis, center; Joe Fredale, quarterback; Craig Eisenhart, fullback; Howard Groove, halfback; and Steckle, wingback.

Coach Trimmer has announced that twenty players remain after last week's tryouts. Those making the team were: Senior, Jim Doyle; Juniors, Jim Biello, Will Brandeau, Ed Herrick, Clair Kenyon, Russ MacIsaac, and John Tussey; Sophomores, Dale Broadwater, Bob Chandler, and Tom Dettore; and Freshmen, Marty Arnold, Bruce Bader, Adam Bornhart, Gene Gahrath, Ron Hendrix, Ken Rookstoll, Bill Stavisky, Jim Wilkes, Bob Wood, Tom Maechler, Joel Delewski, and Jeff Lesnett. Five football players who will possibly be on the team after football season are: Bob Pascale, Senior; Ron Favinger, Junior; John Stultz, Sophomore; and Terry Turnbaugh and Pete Straup, Freshmen.

So far the basketball team has been working hard and many of the returning players have shown improvement over last year. A few of the freshmen may play key roles in the building of a team which may surprise a lot of people this year.

one point. He made the high school record books by booting a 50-yard extra point. After two attempts and two holding penalties, the ball was moved back to the 32 and the kicker booted the ball from the 40. The ball soared through the end zone and hit the crossbar, bounced 10 feet in the air and went through the uprights.

Lancer, Mad Dog Awards Show Coaches' Ratings

Almost every week during football season an outstanding defensive player and offensive player are picked by the coaching staff. The best offensive player is given the Lancer award and the best defensive player is given the Mad Dog Henchman award.

The choices made by the coaches are based on the performance of each player as viewed in the game films. The coaches are like professors who check each answer on a test scrutinizingly. Every player is given a grade for every play of the game and the films do not lie. Each grade is based on 100% and is not a comparison of how well one player does in relation to the rest of the team. For this reason it is possible to have as many as one whole team getting the awards or possibly no one will measure up to the standards desired by the coaching staff.

The Lancer award is for the best offensive player who in the opinion of the coaches has done the best possible job to make the offense go. This choice is made on the evaluation of the grades from the game film. According to Coach Prender this is often a relatively easy choice to make because a back or end might have an obviously good day. This award does not by any means eliminate the possibility of a lineman winning it.

The Mad Dog Henchman award is given to the best defensive player. However, the player with the highest score on the films is not always given the award. The coaches pick a defensive man who plays aggressively with all the effort he can put into the game. He must best typify the true Juniata defensiveness.

Players seem to like this system of award because it is a good evaluation of who does the best. This type of award is not new to JC, but has been used by many other schools.

Two players have won the awards twice. Ron Favinger, defensive end, was given the Henchman award for his performance in the Upsala and

Cross Country Co-Captain To End Four-Year Career

by Jim Hamilton

Juniata's cross country captain for 1966, Tom Creighton, has the build of a long distance runner, but outside of that cannot be called a typical cross country runner.

Prior to coming to Juniata, Creighton graduated from Altoona High School. While at Altoona he played quarterback on the football team. "I was not the first string quarterback, and although we were undefeated in my senior year I did not see much action," Creighton stated.

Because he believes that a person should be well rounded or should develop physically as well as mentally, Creighton decided to give cross country a try when he came to Juniata. Due to his lack of experience and to the number of upperclassmen on the team that year, Creighton did not letter, although he came back in his sophomore and junior years to win two "J's."

So far this year he has been hampered by a sprained ankle which he injured at the Lock Haven meet. The injury has kept him out of action for 2 weeks causing him to miss 3 meets.

His major field of concentration is physics and he hopes to go on to graduate school in business administration and to get a job in a scientific company.

Geneva games. Quarterback Don Weiss was given the Lancer award in the Susquehanna and Lycoming games. (Ed. note: Weiss also was named as the ECAC Sophomore of the Week for those two games.) Also named to the Henchman award list were: Dave Fleck in the Albright game; Nate Mickell in the Susquehanna game; and Chris Sherk in the Lycoming game. Lancers were: Jeff Powers in the Albright game; Ron Shaw in the Upsala game; and Denny Albright in the Geneva game.

This Saturday JC's Indians travel to meet the undefeated Colonels of Wilkes College. Wilkes is currently leading the MAC Northern College Division with a 5-0 record. Their overall record is 6-0.

The Colonels have recorded victories over East Stroudsburg, 10-0; Lebanon Valley, 14-7; Moravian, 10-7; Delaware Valley, 6-0; Ursinus, 24-0; and Drexel, 14-9.

Leading the northern division in defense, Wilkes has held their opponents to just under 4 points per game and has allowed only 120 net yards per game. Their offense, though, has only scored an average of 13 points a game.

Wilkes has kept mostly to a ground game and has done very little passing during the course of the year. After their first four MAC games they were number two in rushing offense with 160.3 yards per game. Their passers have completed only 7 passes out of 33 attempts.

JC's Tribe has now won three games in a row and they will be looking for an upset victory over the Colonels. Juniata has one of the best offenses in the MAC's, but they rank low in total defense. Much of Juniata's chances will rest on the offense's ability to score against the tough Wilkes defense.

Last Saturday, Parents' Day, was a beautiful day for football, and the Juniata Indians took full advantage of it as they romped over a fine Lycoming team by a 47-16 score. Pete Straup intercepted Lycoming's first pass, giving the Indians a chance to score early, but Larry Bieber's 35 yard field goal attempt blew wide. Lycoming then moved to the Juniata 15 yard line before the Indian defense held, and the Warriors were forced to settle for a field goal.

Following the Lycoming kickoff, JC again moved into position for a field goal attempt, but it was again wide. The defense held, however, and on a fourth down play Dave Fleck broke through and blocked a Lycoming punt. Don Weiss quickly went to work, getting the Indians on the scoreboard with an 8 yard scoring toss to Jeff Barnes.

Lycoming returned Bieber's kickoff to the 20, but immediately lost the ball on a fumble, which Ron Favinger fell on. Weiss again hit Barnes, this time from 10 yards out.

With the score at 14-3, the Lycoming Warriors again failed to move the ball and, after a fourth down punt, Juniata offense clicked again. Don Weiss threw his third touchdown pass of the day, hurting Denis Albright on a 20 yard scoring play.

Lycoming again relinquished the ball on downs, and JC directed by Terry Turnbaugh moved down the field on the ground with Jim Hartland taking it in from the 1 yard line. Lycoming finally hit the scoreboard on a five yard scoring pass to Tom Crater, just as the half was ending.

The start of the second half saw Juniata again on the move as Don Weiss threw his fourth TD pass of the day, a 35 yard toss to Denis Albright. Lycoming came right back with a 60 yard scoring play on a pass to Walt Bowler.

Following a Juniata fumble Lycoming again threatened, but Randy Oeffner intercepted a pass and with the help of some fine blocking, returned it 97 yards for a score. Ron Shaw missed his opportunity to realize a lineman's dream as his conversion attempt flew wide.

Juniata was not done for the day, however, for when they got the ball on downs the Indians moved down the field again. Jerry Confer ended the drive with a four yard toss to Greg Houston, and, with Ron Shaw again failing to convert, the time ran out.

JC Harriers Defeat E-town

This past Wednesday Juniata's cross-country team defeated the defending MAC champions from E-town. This 28-31 win evened the Harriers record at 3-3-1 for the season. Ted Bond, senior from E-town broke JC's course record with a time of 24:35. Bond has set a new record on every course he has run this year.

JC's Rick Beard, finishing second, ran the best time of his career on the Indian's course with a 25:32. Dubble and Bauman from E-town finished three and four in the meet, but the Tribe then took the next nine places. Last week a strong, well-balanced Franklin and Marshall team defeated JC, 21-36. In this meet Allan Presby of F & M set a course record which stood for a week, until Bond of E-town broke it. Presby's time was 25:06. Beard finished second with a time of 25:38.

The summaries:

Juniata vs. F & M: (1) Presby (F), (2) Beard (J), (3) Kendig (F), (4) Walter (F), (5) Kniper (F), (6) Sipling (J) and Stanley (J), tie, (8) Quickel (F), (9) Huntegelman (F), (10) Massingham (J), (11) Kuhns (J), (12) Shenk (J).

Andy Adede, JC Alumnus, Returns to Address Student Body at Convo

Andy Adede

One of the main events of JWSF week is to be the convocation Wednesday morning, November 16. The speaker will be Andronico Oduago Adede from Kenya, Africa, "Andy" to his JC friends. The topic on which he will speak will be "The Importance of Intercultural Exchange in College Life." A Juniata College graduate of two years ago, Andy is well-known to many of the upperclass students.

Andy was raised in a rural area; his father was "head-man" of his tribe, a position carried over from the old British colonial administration. He attended a boarding school, founded by missionaries, where the instructional language was English. He then worked for a few years in Nairobi, the capital of Kenya, with a glass-manufacturing firm. During this time he served as secretary to the union of glassworkers. Through his association with this union, he became known to a figure of some importance, Tom Mboya, president of the labor movement when Kenya gained independence. Mboya has served the government in a variety of capacities since then, and is presently on the cabinet.

JWSF Sounds SOS for Funds

This year, as has been announced, JWSF will undertake SOS—the Student Opportunity Service. It is the goal of this project to raise enough money to sponsor a foreign student and a disadvantaged student at Juniata.

The committee hopes to get enough money to support a foreign student for as soon as next fall. It has not been determined, as of now, whether a foreign student will be at Juniata as part of a one year exchange, whether the student will be here for one year without an exchange, or whether he will be here for four years. The committee is presently looking into all these possibilities.

The attempt to help provide an education for a disadvantaged student was initiated by Juniata students last spring and was undertaken by the Education Committee of the Senate. JWSF will be trying to raise enough money to support such a student for one summer of study before he would start at Juniata as a full time student. Mr. Robert Doyle, Director of Financial Aid, has assured the committee that the school and other organizations will be able to supply the student with sufficient funds for the regular school year. The details for this program will be worked out by the Education Committee and the Admissions Committee.

If the student body responds with their contributions, the Juniata World Service Fund will be able to accomplish its goals so that Juniata will see results as early as next fall.

came through the African-American Institute, in co-operation with the Institute of Internal Education in New York (a private organization which acts as the central co-ordinating body of study abroad and of bringing students from abroad.) The IIE is sponsored by individuals and foundations, and is not a government organization. The AAE is a body of professors and individuals in this country interested in having African students study in America. This organization administers a competitive examination not unlike our college board examination. Through this examination Andy won a Scholarship.

The next step was to find a college here which offered through the AAE to be the host of a student from abroad and was known to be willing to grant him his tuition. Juniata College was one of many such schools. The choice was Andy's to make. Since a friend with whom he had attended secondary school was attending Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania, he chose this state. Of the colleges in Pennsylvania, Andy chose Juniata purely by chance.

The support offered by JWSF made it possible for Andy to study here. While the college granted him his tuition, and he worked at various jobs during the summers, he still had a need for living expenses, which were provided by JWSF.

His aim in gaining an education was to serve Kenya in the capacity of a diplomat. Andy's main interests lay in the areas of history and political science, but he was also very concerned with economics and the liberal arts at large. His area of concentration at Juniata was in history. (Dr. Crosby, head of the history department, is also in charge of helping foreign students adjust to Juniata, so he came to know him quite well.)

One of Andy's chief extra-curricular activities was music. He plays the guitar and is fond of folk music. In the student-produced musical presented while he was here, he sang in the chorus. He was also in the chapel choir.

A very outgoing person, he was readily included by the students. For his senior year, he was elected vice president of the student senate, a position carrying with it much responsibility. In this capacity he was chairman of the student judiciary and in charge of the mechanics of the leadership conference.

Upon graduation from Juniata, Andy was awarded a graduate school scholarship from Fletcher School of Long Diplomacy at Tufts University. This is a specialized school in Medford, Massachusetts, which offers graduate degrees in international law to prepare people for work in the diplomatic service.

Coming to us then from Medford, Massachusetts, Andy has his masters and is presently working towards higher graduate degrees, hopefully his doctorate, before returning to serve his native country, Kenya, Africa.

Mazur Print Exhibit To Open In Shoemaker Galleries

The Focus Series will present an exhibition of prints by a contemporary artist, Mr. Michael Mazur. The showing will open November 5 at 4:30, with a reception in Shoemaker Galleries, and run until November 26. Mr. Mazur will be on hand to conduct an informal seminar the evening of November 5, answering any questions which viewers might have.

The artist, recipient of the 1962 Louis Comfort Tiffany Award, is an instructor in the painting department of the Rhode Island School of Design. He has attended Amherst College and the Yale School of Art

Ellis Discusses Financial Status

"Juniata is acquiring a larger circle of friends," said President Ellis as he spoke of the financial program of the college.

Present capital funds, those used for building, endowments, scholarships and departmental maintenance, amount to 12 million dollars. These funds do not come from student fees but rather, from gifts and grants from alumni, foundations, corporations and friends.

The college now has a 4 million dollar indebtedness to the federal government for loans on the dorms and the science center. Interest on the dorm loans is paid out of student room fees but payments on the main loan come from capital funds.

The new $800,000 remodeling and enlarging of the 1915 Science Hall into an academic building comes under capital investment. The college has a $250,000 grant from the government and after raising $250,000 from friends and alumni, another $300,000 will be borrowed from the government. Beeghly Library is to be air-conditioned from capital funds at a cost of $55,000.

The fate of grants and gifts, unless specified by the donor, is decided by the trustees who make all financial decisions pertaining to the college.

The National Science Foundation of the Federal government gives funds for equipment and instruction in the natural sciences. This type of interest is spreading to the social sciences. The last session of Congress approved a similar Foundation in Humanities which is now being used in large schools and universities.

When potential donors consider making a gift or grant to the college, they look at the giving record of the alumni. When those who benefit most directly from the college make donations, a donor more readily contributes.

Senior Susan Loose Voted 1966 Homecoming Queen

Susan Loose will reign as Juniata College Homecoming Queen, 1966. She was elected Tuesday by popular vote of the student body. Approximately 50 percent of the student body participated in the election. Also chosen for the court were Pat Dove, Senior Attendant, and Junior Attendant Carollee Williams.

The girls will have been notified before tonight's Pep Rally, when they will be formally introduced.

The Queen will be crowned next Saturday during halftime activities of the Homecoming game by last year's Queen, Vil Hopcraft. As a memento of this occasion Susan will receive an engraved charm bracelet. Both she and her attendants will be escorted by senior classmates. Later the same evening, she will reign at the Homecoming Dance, "Oriental Mystique."

Nov. 8: Day of Reckoning In Pa. Gubernatorial Race

In compliance with a State constitutional law which limits each governor to one four-year term in office, the Pennsylvania electorate, come Election Day '66, will once again be faced with the selection of one of two tenderfoot gubernatorial candidates to fill the highest office in the State.

The Nov. 8 balloting will mark campaigns which have pitted Democratic Party nominee Milton J. Shapp, a 53-year-old businessman from Philadelphia, against 49-year-old Lieutenant Governor Raymond P. Shafer of Meadville, the Republican Party candidate.

Promotional literature seems to have succeeded in its usual aggrandizement of the respective candidates to the point where the voter, having already been convinced of the relevancy of individual qualifications, can infer that either candidate is no less than a paragon of philanthropy. Slogans, in their search for ingenuity and effectiveness, have exalted the candidates by proclaiming almost everything from "He keeps his word . . . a man you can trust!" to "He's on the move . . . the people's candidate!"

Candidate Shapp makes his claim to fame as founder and developer of the Jerrold Corporation and in-the culmination of political campaigning of the Peace Corps through the late John Kennedy. Candidate Shafer possesses a political background which includes four years as a State Senator and a four-year term as Lieutenant Governor and partner in the Scranton Administration. Analysis of the basic platforms via campaign literature yields Mr. Shapp's appeal, that of sound business techniques in the government at Harrisburg by placing "a businessman instead of a politician in charge of the State pursestrings" and Mr. Shafer's declaration that he intends to "carry on and complete the work of the Scranton Administration." In reality, Candidate Shapp's modus operandi seems to relentlessly itemize the deficiencies of the Scranton-Shafer Administration, while Lt. Gov. Shafer, in his laud upon the coattails of Gov. William Scranton, enthusiastically points to the achievements and accomplishments of the outgoing administration.

Candle Causes Fire In South Hall Room; Mattress Smoulders

A clanging fire bell alerted women residents of South Dormitory to evacuate the building shortly after 10:00 p.m. Tuesday evening.

As local firemen arrived on the scene, Juniata coeds attributed the cause of the fire as a candle burning unattended in a first floor room. When senior Verdean Cage, the room's occupant, returned, she found a mattress smouldering and a small chest beginning to burn. Carol Peters and Pat Simms, present at the time, noted that the clinking noise of Verdean dragging the fire extinguisher down the hall aroused other girls. On investigation, they found Verdean on the floor of her room overcome by smoke, although her attempts to control the fire were apparently successful. Others summoned senior Pete Schaefer and junior John Russell who extinguished the blaze.

Both candidates, each claiming membership in the Governor's Committee of 100 for Better Education, express the concern that no young Pennsylvanian be denied a college education because of lack of financial resources. In order to discharge his "plan to provide free higher education for all high school graduates with no increase in taxes," Mr. Shapp would have the State "borrow the money it needs to finance the program and repay the loan through the increased earning capacity of those who benefit from it," speculating that "in the course of their normal working career, college-educated men and women will return to the government in taxes seven times as much as the government spends on their education."

On the other hand, amid charges that sales taxes would rise, a State income tax would be created, and the State would find itself drowning in debt in the wake of the implementation of Mr. Shapp's proposals, Mr. Shafer suggests the utilization of the Pennsylvania State Scholarship Program, as established by Gov. Scranton, to avoid having the State go around giving money to people who don't need it. Shafer's program would provide the qualified Penna. State Scholarship applicant with a scholarship to satisfy financial need, minus all the competition.

A sidelight of possible interest is Milton Shapp's intent to increase the minimum age for obtaining a driver's license in Penna. from 16 to 18 for three reasons: one, "16 and 17-year-old drivers are involved in a disproportionate share of automobile accidents;" two, "studies show that high school students who do not have automobiles do better scholastically than students who have cars;" and three, "increasing the minimum age for drivers will mean lower insurance rates for everyone." To give Ray Shafer equal time in this area, we must cite his proposal to "require all persons, regardless of age, applying for a driver's license for the first time to successfully complete a driver training course." He notes that "only 60 percent of current license applicants are products of high school driver training courses."

It is in the interest of space that the remainder of the candidates' platforms be reduced or condensed to more or less glittering generalities. Milton Shapp (who purportedly "makes sense") says he will "put the brakes on the high cost of living, stop slaughter on the highways, end the racket in automobile insurance, end pollution (water and air) in Pennsylvania, fight to make utilities pay their share of local real estate taxes, rid the golden years of the aged from financial worries and loneliness, attract new industry and create 1,100,000 new jobs. Mr. Shafer plans to "do more" towards "more jobs for our people, better schools for our kids, a wide-awake government, more highway building, and wiser use of our natural resources."

With the platforms and promises presented, the voter could figure that he won't lose either way. Shapp is an established businessman running against an experienced politician. And Shafer is running against the historical fact that no incumbent Lieutenant Governor has been elected to the governorship of Pennsylvania.

Implications of an Incident

The regrettable and embarrassing incident following John Wheatcroft's poetry reading Wednesday evening involved both students and faculty, none of whom were entirely in the right.

Dr. Cherry related the details of what transpired essentially as they follow here. Dr. Cherry observed that in the Alumni Hall stage area, Professor Maas had lit a cigarette; Jeffery Pooler was about to do likewise. Dr. Cherry warned Pooler that this was illegal and also informed Professor Maas that he was setting a poor example. Jeff Cawley made a remark, in jest, that was misinterpreted by Dr. Cherry. Dr. Cherry turned and struck Cawley, sending him to the floor. Dr. Kaylor appeared on the scene, Professor Maas and Dr. Cherry exchanged some words and the gathering broke up. Dr. Cherry later made personal apologies to those persons involved, and has stated that, "I lost my temper, which I think, was not really uncalled for, and in an uncontrolled fit of anger, I struck Jeff. I accept all responsibilities for the incident and have apologized for my behavior to all those persons concerned."

A faculty member stepped out of bounds, the ridiculous bounds around smoking in Alumni Hall. He was legitimately reprimanded by another faculty member when a student attempted to follow his example. Another student, though in jest, made an uncalled-for remark which elicited a violent response, namely that the faculty member struck the student. It seems that the incident was completely out of order.

It is significant that no one was really in the right, nor totally wrong. It is explicit that smoking is not permitted in Alumni Hall. Cawley's remark was in poor taste, but it was meant in jest. Cherry certainly had the right to be offended, but his reaction is difficult to condone.

The incident carries with it several significant implications. In the first place, should smoking rules, perhaps, be more clearly defined or dispensed with? What are the respective rights of each party in the student-faculty relationship is a serious matter of concern. Is not outright physical violence completely out of order? Should some kind of policy be set up? To what extent should the professor be held responsible? Can this kind of thing be, somehow, legitimately condoned?

To the editor:

The frequency of the "statement of policy" appearing in the Juniatian since the beginning of the semester led me to feel some optimism about the publication of a student newspaper at Juniata—perhaps this will be a strong year for journalism on campus! In reading the most recent editorial, however, ("To Reflect and Affect," Oct. 28), I was struck with the strange irony of it all.

In what seems a rather continuous brooding about "independent status of a campus newspaper" the Juniatian has stated its independent policies but it has not asserted them. If one examines the contents of the Juniatian this semester, it is difficult to find any sign of a significant issue and perhaps, because of that, any journalistic integrity. This fact was excused in the above mentioned editorial for lack of "..." Something worth taking a stand on. . . . The idea of journalism tacitly implied in such a statement is that a newspaper should sit around and wait for something to happen rather than use its unique status to initiate discussion of important issues. There are important issues on campus and it doesn't take too much imagination to think of them. Of what value is a stated policy if it is not actively asserted?

Letters to the editor should be typed, double spaced, and limited to no more than 400 words. Letters will be accepted no later than 5 p.m. Monday. The editors reserve the right to print only non-libelous and responsible content, and to edit all letters and commentaries submitted to the Juniatian. The staff also reserves the right to publish all full signatures, unless the writer can supply very valid reasons for omitting his name.

Campus Judiciary's Future Dubious; Function Defined For Unaware Students

"You state your case; they state theirs; then they state their decision."
"I don't know."
"I haven't paid much attention to what the function of student government is."
"You come before the board for disciplinary action for pretty serious offenses."
"I have no idea."

"Frankly, I don't think that its function is effective enough that it can be valuable. . . . never thought the Senate, Judicial Board, and Men's Government accomplished much except for insignificant decisions, like getting rid of regs."
"What is the Judiciary?"

Students can invalidate acts of fellow students and give the administration an idea of what's going on. The students have a right to express opinions.

"For discipline. I don't really know very much about it."

"I don't really know . . . has to do with legislation."

"To maintain order by use of established laws within the student body."

These are the answers of various JC students when questioned as to what they thought was the function of the Campus Judiciary. It can be correctly assumed that over half of the students have no idea what the Campus Judiciary is, although the Judiciary is adequately described in the student handbook and the college catalogue. Certainly the elections held in March must make the student body aware that it exists.

JUDICIARY'S HISTORY

The history of the Juniata judicial organization was traced in a recent interview with Paul M. Heberling, who has been associated with the group through all but its first year of existence. The Campus Judiciary, founded in Spring, 1956, by the Senate under the leadership of the then-president, James Stayer, may have been in part a reaction by the student body to the attitudes of distrust of the college administration. Dean Heberling stated, "It's my feeling that at least one of the motivations for the creation of the campus Judiciary at that particular time was a student reaction to the long established pattern of complete autonomy on the part of the college administration in dealing with student behavior. I believe that the rather unusual structure of our Judiciary directly represented an effort to wrest away some authority from the administration, although the records show that the faculty also favored a change of emphasis."

ORIGINAL CHARTER REVISED

An illustration of the "unusual" is noted in the fact that, in its initial proposal, the group was to be composed of students only. As subsequent revisions were made, the Dean of Men was added as advisor; then the Dean of Women and an elected faculty member were included. The Judiciary was chaired by the students so that any deliberations were the reflections of student attitudes by students. In comparison with other colleges, Juniata's is quite different. Some have a representation of students and faculty members in equal halves. The majority have faculty administration, and student representation in equal thirds. In addition, the judiciaries are usually chaired by the Dean of Students, or equivalent personnel officer.

The original charter of the Judiciary presented the composition of the Judiciary consisted of four student body members chosen by fellow students, Chairman of the Men's House, Chairman of the Women's House, the Dean of Women, the Dean of Men, and a faculty member chosen by the faculty. The Dean of the College, who was not a voting member, was to preside at the meetings. The Dean of Men or Dean of Women was to preside in his absence.

FACULTY PRESENTS REQUESTS

In response to the presented organization of the Judiciary the faculty presented the following response, "We question the advisability of asking the academic dean to be responsible for handling problems of the student body. The student dean." The faculty felt that a student committee with a faculty advisor could handle student disciplinary problems more effectively since already there was a faculty committee that acted as a court of appeals, and were replaced by two faculty ions. The two deans became advisors.

RECENT REVISIONS

Although the apparent intent of the College had been to allow students some freedom in adjudication, by 1958 the basis of this authority became tenuous as the U.S. Courts began to challenge judicial decisions made by students, especially where those decisions affected the continuation of a student in school. At this point it became important to apply the long-standing principle that only a legally-responsible administrator could carry out disciplinary action.

In 1962 or 1963 the deans re-vote, a-d not their individual opinion had to reflect the majority judicial quested their own removal as voting members, since they had to vote on areas in which they would ultimately have to take action. They members as voting members.

Since 1962 the student dominated Judiciary has apparently been losing authority, prestige, and confidence among the students. Dean Heberling and Beth Clapper, secretary of the Judiciary, presented various causes of this loss of authority and loss of student support.

CAN STUDENTS RULE STUDENTS?

One problem involves students ruling students. The Judiciary can make recommendations on decisions but lacks the authority to take direct action in carrying out these recommendations. If other students, faculty, and administration could not carry out the student recommendations, the Judiciary would be forced to change the decision, or else it could be vetoed. Therefore authority must be defined if the Judiciary should continue.

Students seem to have no idea what the Judiciary is or why it exists, giving a result of no student support. Therefore, the Judiciary cannot adequately serve the students. It can do nothing if the students will not permit it to review their cases.

STUDENT OPTION

The next problem involves the choice of the student to become the Judiciary or a Dean for disciplinary action. When a student has committed an offense he is reminded of this option. If he chooses the Judiciary the Dean contacts the Judiciary Board Chairman, who in turn calls a meeting for that particular day or the day after.

From 1957 to 1962 the student almost always chose the Judiciary to try his case. However during the past five years the student has chosen not to go before the Judiciary. Last year, for example, 68 out of 70 cases were reviewed by the deans. Dean Heberling explained, "The probable reasons for the decrease in the use of the Judiciary have been: 1. A growing, though unwarranted, lack of confidence in the Judiciary. 2. The necessity for a certain degree of exposure and publicity if handled by the Judiciary. 3. The tendency for a prolongation of the process. 4. A general satisfaction with the treatment received at the hands of the student deans."

JUDICIARY REORGANIZATION

This past fall a leadership conference of the present Judiciary was held to discuss future plans and various systems. There were many different present plans (committees, advisory councils, more deans' offices) but not enough information to carry out these plans was available. No solutions could be formulated since their ultimate results were unknown.

The decision was reached to contact ten other schools to get an idea for a workable plan in carrying out the judicial function. The following small coed colleges were chosen since it was thought that they might have systems applicable to the Juniata campus: Elizabethtown, Geneva, Bloomsburg, Denison, Waynesburg, Muskingum, Lyscoming, Slippery Rock, Susquehanna, and Moravian.

EXAMINATION BY COMMITTEE

Currently a committee is conducting the extensive examination of the Judiciary. The question involves whether it should continue to exist in its present capacity since students have chosen to have their cases handled by the deans. Thus the Judiciary is not fulfilling its current function.

Dean Heberling mentioned that the main problem facing the study committee . . . is the conflict between the admitted desirability of direct participation of students in the correction of fellow students and the reality of the legal responsibilities as being affected in repeated court decisions.

Student opinion is definitely recommended in dealing with student misconduct, but a student authoritative group is not possible today. The legal problem involves the ethical use of confidential records concerning the background, behavior, and circumstances of the students, all of which are needed to make a just decision. This material cannot be ethically and legally released to unauthorized persons, or to the Judiciary, as all student records are open only to the President and Personnel Department. Therefore a logically corrective decision on a student by students is difficult and impossible. Dean Heberling said, "As far as we're concerned, if we have to make any changes that involve reduction of student involvement in judicial function it will be done reluctantly."

WHAT IS THE FUTURE?

The Judiciary is not a part of the Senate but wants to take part in the Senate reorganization. When all the information is received from the colleges and a tentative plan is developed, the plan will be submitted to the Senate as a recommendation for the consideration of developing a new one concerning the development Beth Clapper said, "The future is entirely uncertain at this point. We have to make a very thorough examination before any decision is made."

The Social Committee wishes to express its apology about the problems of last Saturday evening's dance. The band had called at 5:00 to say that they weren't coming. Officials on the committee tried to get another band which was impossible.

The Umbrellas of Cherbourg

JC MOVIE NIGHT

Located on the English Channel, Cherbourg, France, is a port town of 40,000 inhabitants. The townfolk derive their livelihood from manufacturing form machinery. Three years ago, Cherbourg became a movie star.

Director Jacques Demy focused mist-covered lenses on the rainy little town and created an impressionist masterpiece of mood and color. The Umbrellas of Cherbourg, the upcoming JC movie, has been criticized as delighting the eye but as giving the mind very little to ponder. The simple plot of "boy meets girl, boy leaves girl, girl marries someone else, boy does the same, boy and girl meet some years later and can not recapture the joy of first love" more than compensates for the film's lack of intellectual depth by its very ingenuousness.

In a never-never-land of whirling colors, the characters sing every word of the dialogue.

Not only did the film captivate the jury at the Cannes Film Festival of 1964 where the production won the Grand Prix, but Charles DeGaulle chose to take it with him on a good will tour of South America, perhaps to prove that a nation with the ability to sing in the rain couldn't be all bad.

Catherine Deneuve, one of France's leading stars, portrays the wistful, sensitive Genevieve, while Nino Castelnuovo is the romantic gas station attendant.

The subtitled version shown in this country allows the viewer to appreciate the beauty of Cherbourg, the real star of the film, without the necessity of concentrating on words.

Programs like Junior Year Abroad cost the college money. There are no special funds for such programs at the present time.

On the other hand, the operating fund is the annual budget of the college. This year it amounts to $2,817,000. These funds come from student fees and cover such things as faculty salaries and classroom aids. The philosophy of Juniata College, according to the President, indicated that "students deserve a faculty based on what they pay."

Education at Juniata costs more than students actually pay but, thanks to the use of capital funds, students have a program in which they have the benefit of the investment of 12 million dollars.

Senate News and Views

by Pru Engle

After a lengthy, yet rather restrained discussion, the Senate decided that the newly proposed campus magazine can only be published as a concession of the Honor Society, its sponsor. The Honor Society must now go through the process of applying for this "concession" which will ultimately be granted or refused by the Senate.

If the concession is granted, the magazine will be published on a trial basis of two issues. It was felt that this would be the only way to determine whether or not there will be sufficient material and whether it would have the success and provoke the student response which is expected.

In presenting the policies and purposes of the magazine, Honor Society President, Phil Jones, stressed the fact that this magazine is not meant as a competitor of any other college publication. The magazine would serve mainly as a means of presenting student writing concerning social, political, and educational issues.

Some contention did develop concerning the editorial policy of the magazine and the distinctions made between the type of material to be used in the magazine compared to that which appears in the Juniata. Although the Honor Society may serve as the direct determiner of the editorial policy of the magazine, there is also a general college policy which must be recognized.

The trend of the discussion seemed to reveal the fact that many of the technicalities of senate operation are not clearly understood and much of college policy is not defined. Many of the issues brought before the Senate this year reveal a lack of precedents and clearly defined policies. Yet, the mere fact that the Senate is dealing with these issues will, perhaps, enable them to solve the difficulties involved.

In other business, Larry Bieber, Chairman of Athletics, reported that the ice skating rink is in a general state of disrepair. Depending on whether or not the area is to be regarded and macadamized, the cost for repairs would vary greatly. While discussing repairs, questions were raised concerning student interest in and support of the skating rink. Although many students want the skating rink, few express a willingness to work for it. The Senate is hoping to form a skating rink committee to investigate action for repairs. Action will be taken only if the students can be found to undertake and support it.

A faculty committee is currently undertaking an investigation of Saturday classes to determine their effect and relationship to campus unity and social life. He Senate is also considering a proposal to undertake an investigation of student attitudes concerning this issue.

While the immediate reaction would be one opposing continuation of Saturday classes, there are many factors to be considered. No Saturday classes could result in a general exodus of students from the campus each weekend. This could threaten the central college unity as well as create many problems concerning scheduling of college events. However, this could also force a more careful consideration of college events in an attempt to encourage students to remain on campus.

Historian Sedgwick To Conduct Talk On Lincoln Conspirators

"The trial of the Lincoln Conspirators" will be subject of a talk by civil war historian, lawyer and Chairman of the District of Columbia Civil War Centennial Commission, and father of a JC sophomore, Karen Sedgwick, Paul J. Sedgwick in Alumni Hall, tonight at 8:00 p.m.

The talk which is sponsored by the Juniata Barristers' Club, has also been given by Sedgwick at Lincoln Memorial University, the District of Columbia Civil War Round Table at the Army-Navy Club and the Chicago Round Table. The talk describes Washington at the time of the assassination of President Lincoln and the trial of the conspirators.

Sedgwick graduated from George Washington University and received a LL.D. degree from American University, College of Law. For the past ten years he has been Professor of Law at The American University School of Law in Washington.

For 35 years a practicing attorney and a member of the District of Columbia Bar Association, Sedgwick has been admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court of Claims as well as the Courts of the District.

A past president of the District of Columbia Civil War Round Table, Sedgwick was also awarded its Gold Medal. He directed the first and second Inaugural re-enactments of President Lincoln at the U.S. Capitol; the Peace Commission; the Battle Hymn of the Republic; the Congressional Medal of Honor; the Battle of Fort Stevens re-enactment; Gen. U. S. Grant's Assumption of the Grand Review Commemorations 1961 and 1965.

Sedgwick has written a book entitled "The Shield" about the defenses of Washington during the Civil War, and "A Study in Patriotism."

A trustee of Lincoln Memorial University in Tennessee, Sedgwick is a member of Delta Sigma Phi and Sigma Nu Phi fraternities.

Eleanor Lawrence

Well-known Musician To Present Flute Concert

A prominent flutist, Miss Eleanor Lawrence, will give a concert Sunday evening in Alumni Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Miss Lawrence will be accompanied by the pianist Miss Albertine Baumgartner in a program which will include the Sonata in F Major by J. B. Locillet, Sonata by Philippe Gaubert, and the Fantaisie by Georges-Hue.

Following intermission the concert will continue with Dance of the Blessed Spirits by von Gluck, Aria by Ernst von Dohnanyi, D'un Matin de Printemps by Boulenger and conclude with the Sonata by Paul Hind-mith.

Miss Lawrence is a native of Boston, Mass., and studied with James Pappoutsakis of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. She received her master's degree from the New England Conservatory of Music. Later she studied with William Kincaid and Marcel Moyse in New York.

The Aria by Dohnanyi, which will be part of the program, was written for Miss Lawrence while she studied with the composer in Athens, Ohio.

Miss Albertine Baumgartner studied in New York under Isabella Vengerova and Rosina Lhevinne. She received her B.S. degree at the Moines College of Music and her M.S. at the Juilliard School.

Activities Chairman Cites Homecoming Schedule of Events

Now that Parent's Weekend is past, Norma Jean Edgar, General Activities Chairman, is looking toward the November 12 Homecoming, her next big job. The weekend's theme is "Oriental Mystique."

She feels that the biggest responsibility of a Big Weekend is coordinating the whole weekend, all of the activities. "Delegating responsibilities is an easier way to accomplish the job, especially with a group composed of Sandie Baer, John Brinker, Pam Haskell, Jim Reber, Bruce Russell, Bob Bechtel, Carolyn Biss, Sandy Boose, Wayne Knickel, Heather Macrae, Anita Smith, Don Ardolino, Ginny Fetter, Sally Riley, Judy Tipton, and Mary Kay Stom." She has chosen such a large group in order to do a good job and to involve more students in college life.

Friday night holds a bonfire-pp rally, organized by the cheerleaders, and a dance featuring "Robin and the Hoods," secured by Marty Utts, Social Activities Chairman. Sunday morning Bob Gray, Religious Activities Chairman, has planned a Jazz Mass. Norma Jean's main concern then is Homecoming Day. A dance, a parade, an art exhibit, campus tours, a football game, meals, and a drama, "Teahouse of the August Moon" will provide a full day.

Changes in Homecoming tradition will be a different parade route and an announcement of the Queen a week in advance. Norma Jean is representing the student body in a large committee dealing with such affairs. For this weekend she is in contact with Glenn Zug of the Alumni Office. Other responsibilities during the year include Christmas, Mid-Winter Weekend, May Day, All Class Night, Spring Mountain Day, and the Spring Carnival. If the students would recognize the amount of planning and work involved in a weekend it could be more appreciated.

In reorganizing the Senate, the General Activities seat, Norma Jean feels, could use a Big Weekend Chairman or even better, a senior chairman and junior assistant for Parent's Weekend when the pressure is the greatest. If the latter plan was followed, the General Activities Chairman could devote more time to Homecoming.

Mrs. Schoenherr Reveals Life, Offering Juniata a Source of World Experience

by Ethel Hesel

Many of the unique aspects of a college community are intertwined with the lives of students and faculty. Such has been the unusual background of Mrs. Schoenherr, one of the English Conference advisors, and wife of Juniata Dean of Student Affairs.

Mrs. Schoenherr had the experience of being the daughter of Presbyterian missionary to Siam. Her father was an evangelist, and her mother was principal of a private girl's school. Mr. and Mrs. Landon moved to the jungle of Thailand in 1927, and remained on the field for ten years. Mrs. Schoenherr was born in Siam, as was her younger brother and sister. After completing her first three years of school in Thailand, Mrs. Schoenherr was able to be placed in the fifth grade of the American school system.

Mrs. Landon wrote of Ann Leono-wens, a non-fictional character of whom Mrs. Landon had heard by the reports of another missionary. Anna had been an English governess who was asked by the King of Siam to teach English to certain members of his court. In the process Anna was able to culturalize the king. Anna had died many years before Mrs. Landon came to Siam, but Anna had written two books of her experiences, "The English Governess at a Siamese Court," and "The Romance of the Harem." The accounts were written in a stiff Victorian style and were not widely read by the public. Through the encouragement of a friend, by doing intensive research and using the information contained in the books, Mrs. Landon was able to publish the popular "Anna and the King of Siam." Since the book was written for the church and a small group of friends, Mrs. Landon never dreamed it would receive the acclaim that it did.

Following World War II, "Anna and the King of Siam" was filmed as a movie starring Irene Dunn and Rex Harrison. This version was not a musical. In 1951 Rodgers and Hammerstein presented the Broadway musical, "The King and I." The stars were Deborah Kerr and Yul Brynner, whose career began with this role. Recently "The King and I" has been filmed as a musical.

Mrs. Landon published a second book, "Never Dies the Dream." The story is of a fictional missionary, India Severn, yet her life was combinations of experiences of Mrs. Landon and other missionary friends.

Mr. Landon is also an author. He has published, "Siam in Transition," "The Chinese in Siam," and "Southeast Asia: Crossroads of Religions."

Does "The King and I" bring back memories to you? It certainly does for Mrs. Schoenherr.

After two weeks of practice, Basketball Coach Trimmer is enthusiastic about the progress his charges have made so far. According to Trimmer everyone has been hustling and they are showing a desire to win. The players still have a lot to learn, but if they continue working, they should be ready for the approaching season. Trimmer is installing a type of basketball which the fans should enjoy. His team will be doing a lot of running and pressing. This brand of basketball is always exciting to watch, whether one's team is ahead or behind. (And we're hoping that JC will be ahead in a lot of games this year!)

Coach Trimmer summed up his pressure system of basketball in the following paragraph: "Pressure will be the key to both our offensive and defensive game. Our general objective will be to maintain constant pressure on our opponent and to force our opponent to play a different style of game than he planned. We know he will operate less efficiently when we force action through aggressive play."

Coach Prender and his staff have announced the Lancer and Mad Dog Henchman awards for the Wilkes game. Chris Sherk was named for the second consecutive week to the list of Mad Dog Henchman. Tri-captain Bo Berlanda was named as the Lancer for his stalwart play last Saturday.

Wrestling coach Bill Berrier's grapplers have started preparations for this year's season. This year's team is young with only one senior, but there are letterwinners back in every weight class, except for 123.

Three sophomores who won "J" letters last year are: Jack Hopper, 130; Ron Hoover, 137; and Jim Fyle, 160. There are three returning juniors with letters also: Chris Sherk, 145; Don Hoover, 152; and Phil Eatough, 177. The only senior on the team is Dick Feigles, Hwt.

Coach Berrier is also hopeful that several overclassmen who did not letter last year and freshmen will strengthen this year's team.

ATTENTION SOCCER PLAYERS
IM Soccer will start Nov. 15. Rosters, minimum 15 men, should be turned in to Larry Bieber, Box 42, 233 Tussy, by Nov. 13 and should include days when the team can't play due to labs. Fellows wishing to play but without a team should contact Bieber immediately.

JC Stopped By Unbeaten Wilkes

Indians To Tackle "Big Bullets" From Gettysburg

JC's Don Weiss (6) attempts to pass to John Ralston (24) but he finds a Wilkes defender (33) in the way. This was the story of the game, as Wilkes' defense contained Juniata's offense.

Spotlight on IMs

by Bob Dum

As the IM football season draws to a close, the Studs (6-0), the Vikings (5-0) and the Vets (5-1-1) are battling it out for first place. The Images (4-2-1) and the 69'ers (1-2) also have a chance.

The two big games remaining to be played are the Vets vs the Vikings on November 9 and the Viking vs the Studs at a later date. Since these teams are evenly matched, these games should be very close. The Vets, the defending champions, are banking on Roy Underwood, who missed several games due to an injury, to help their offense. The Vikings feature one of the best defenses in the league and the pickup of a new quarterback, Jim Murdock, will help them. The Studs are ably led by quarterback Saunders, who can run or throw and is the leading scorer in the league. The Studs have top receivers in Moyer and Bower, a good defense, and good blocking.

Senior Football Players Finishing Final Season

The senior offensive center, Dick Feigles, hails from Hughesville High School in Pennsylvania where he also played football as guard. A sociology major, he plans to enter the Air Force upon graduation. Dick considers the first game during his freshman year his best most exciting football moment. Juniata's upset to Upsala proved to be his biggest disappointment. Although he wrestles in the 177 pound class, manages the baseball team, and is a member of the J Club, football rates highest in his opinion. The only change he would like to see at Juniata is the organization of fraternities.

A Spanish major and future high school teacher, Bob Pascale, plays offensive split-end for Juniata. During his high school years at Bristol, Pennsylvania, he played football, basketball and baseball on the varsity teams. Here he also plays forward on the basketball team, is a member of the J Club and student teaches first and second year Spanish at Huntingdon High School. In 1965, Bob set the record for the most passes received in a season. He caught 36 passes that year. In one game, he tied the record of Barry Drexler by receiving nine passes. Bob feels that Juniata has become much more liberal in recent years.

by Anne Nicklas
and Joanne Ferree
Larry Bieber, Juniata's specialty kicker, is a pre-med biology major who plans to be a general practitioner. He graduated from Solanco High School in Quarryville, Pennsylvania. All three of these seniors, Larry did not join the team until last year, and this he regrets. Three weeks ago he broke the school's MAC record for making the most extra points in the game. Football is not his only activity; he also belongs to the tennis team of which he has been the captain for two years, the Scalpel and Probe Club of which he was president of last year, and the Student Senate as the Chairman of Athletics. Larry's worst disappointment came last year when he missed his first field goal. This year's Susquehanna game was the scene of his most exciting moment, when he made his first tackle. Larry maintains that the role of the athlete is to help the school. Larry also feels that sports at Juniata are excellent and that team spirit is high in all sports.

All three of these seniors have much respect and admiration for Head Coach Prender, and they feel that he has done a lot for the benefit of the team. The coach is the only man who should have the answers.

Juniata's Indians tackle the tough Gettysburg Bullets this Saturday at 1:30 on College Field. This game marks the fifteenth meeting of the two schools with G-burg leading the series 10-4. The Bullets are in the university division of the MAC's so that the game will not count as a conference game.

In last year's game G-burg romped over the Tribe behind the passing of Little All-American quarterback Jim Ward to his outstanding receivers Dale Boyd and Tom McCracken. The final score was 54-7.

This year G-burg has been relying on the passing and running threat of QB Dick Shirk and the running of fullback Steve Brandt, and halfback, Rod Albright and Craig Markel. Shirk, who can pass with either hand, leads the team in total offense with 734 yards. Brandt leads the team in rushing with 315 yards.

The Bullets bring a 4-game winning streak into tomorrow's game. Their over-all record is 5-2. They have lost to Bucknell, 10-16 and Delaware, 0-3; while downing Hofstra, 17-16; Albright, 31-7; Lehigh, 31-13; Kings Port, 20-16; and Lafayette, 19-18. Juniata will counter G-burg with Don Weiss who now has a total offense of 943 yards, and Bo Berlanda, who leads all of JC's rushers with 192 yards. In the receiving department Denis Albright has caught 16 passes for 419 yards.

Last Saturday the Tribe found the going rough against the undefeated Colonels of Wilkes College. The final score of 26-7 does not show the true nature of the game. The Indians were within come-back distance through more than three quarters of the game.

Wilkes' defense, ranked nationally among small colleges, turned two interceptions into touchdowns. Their offense turned in 253 net yards gained, but all of this was on the ground; they gained nothing by air.

JC had one of their poorest offensive games of the year with a total offense of 157 yards. Don Weiss and Terry Turnbaugh combined to pass for 81 yards, while the ground game went for 66 yards. Bo Berlanda made half of that yardage himself with a net of 33.

Wilkes took the initiative in the game when they drove 80 yards with the opening kickoff to score. The big play in that drive was Paul Purta's 62 yard run, which took the ball down to JC's 8. Wilkes' PAT attempt was wide.

JC then fumbled the Colonels' kickoff and WC drove down to JC's one, before the Indians defense rose to the occasion and stopped the Colonels on downs.

Then Weiss attempting to throw from his end zone had his pass deflected by a Wilkes lineman and grabbed by Brinley Varchal of Wilkes. Varchal then stepped into the end-zone for the score. The second conversion was missed by Wilkes and the score remained 12-0 through the rest of the first period.

Juniata came back in the game in the second quarter on a 65 yard scoring drive. A key play in that drive was a fake field goal attempt at the Colonels' 34. Gary Sheppard holding for Bieber's kick, received the center's snap and scampered around right end to WC's 14 yard line and a first down. Weiss ended the advance by plunging in from the one and Bieber kicked the extra point.

Wilkes' alert defense arose to the occasion when JC's Steve Horner tried passing from punt formation on his own 46. His toss was right on target, but WC's Dan Mallow stepped in front of the intended receiver and carried the ball to JC's 8. Several plays later Purta, who led all rushers with 91 yards, carried the ball 5 yards for the TD. Joe Zakowsky, freshman quarterback, kept the ball on a sneaker for the two point conversion.

Juniata began to move again when John Ralston returned Wilkes' kickoff to JC's 45. Two passes of 16 and 42 yards to Denis Albright moved the ball down to the Wilkes two yard line. Wilkes' defense tightened and stopped JC. On fourth down Weiss was dropped almost as soon as he was set to pass, but he still managed to throw before he hit the dirt. His desperate toss, however, was picked off by a Wilkes' defender.

It was Zakowsky who ended the scoring with a 57 yard gallop. Wilkes is now one of two collegiate teams in Pennsylvania with unblemished records. Waynesburg is the other all-winning club.

THE JUNIATIAN

Vol. XLIII, No. 9

Juniata College — Huntingdon, Pa. 16652

November 11, 1966

Amid Tears of Joy . . .

Beauties Reign at Homecoming Festivities

The student body of Juniata College chose Susan Loose as their 1966 Homecoming Queen and Pat Dove and Carolee Williams as Senior Attendant and Junior Attendant, respectively.

"I was very surprised," said Susan Loose, when informed that she was the queen. She feels that she found out about the honor under extraordinary circumstances. All her counselor friends in Brumbaugh Hall waited one and one-half hours in her room so that they could surprise her with the news when she entered. The general consensus of opinion among the counselors was that Sue was walking around campus depressed about a pop descriptive economics midterm. Actually she was having her voice lesson with Mr. Hirsch, who, incidentally, knew of her election as queen. She decided to return to her room before her 2:45 lab to take care of a headache, but only after passing through Tote to see if the Juniatian was out, giving the results of the election.

Her friends surprised her with a bouquet of white mums, a gift from the General Activities Committee, bearing a card saying, "Congratulations to you — our Homecoming Queen for 1966." Word has it that Sue reacted with a few giggles.

Sue, a home economics major, hopes to engage in home economics extension work. She chose Juniata College because it is a small school. Needless to say, her college career has been filled with many and varied experiences. One of her greatest experiences involves her three-year membership in the Juniata Towing Choir. She said, "The choir and things involved with the choir have meant a great deal to me." She particularly enjoyed participating in last year's Christmas Pageant, and is eagerly looking forward to this year's production of "Amahl and the Night Visitors." She considers her freshman counseling position as one of her most valuable experiences outside of studying.

Each life experience has its bad points. She considers her pop descriptive economics midterm as one of her worst experiences during her college career.

As she looked back over her past three years at Juniata she encountered her funniest experience during her freshman year. A few energetic freshman girls initiated their own fantastic plan to oppose the seemingly apathetic freshman men. The freshmen definitely had to whitewash the J.C. sidewalks with slogans condemning the sophomores. By carefully prearranged plans the girls in the hall went outside in small groups to specified areas to carry out their deeds—at 5:00 a.m. The results provided more excitement. In addition to being reminded of their illegal exit from the dorm before hours they had to scrub their slogans off all sidewalks in public areas.

Everyone has his dislikes, and Sue is no exception. She said, "I hate people who are very biased and don't get excited about anything."

Talking about her election as Homecoming Queen, she said, "I'm very thrilled. It makes me happy that the students would want me to represent them."

Pat Dove was congratulated in lab before she was even told about her election as Senior Attendant.

A biology major, she is undecided as to what she wants to do. Her present thoughts center around medical technology and nursing.

Juniata was her choice for her college education because of its church affiliation.

Pat feels that her greatest unforgettable experience here at JC was her participation with the New Century Singers. She said, "The experiences that I had with the group were some of the most meaningful during my four years of college. By working very closely with a small group we learned tolerance of others, self-sufficiency, and a considerable amount of poise."

She terms her physics final as a bad experience at Juniata.

Needless to say, her funniest experience occurred during a performance of the New Century Singers. At intermission at one concert a man brought back a pitcher of water for the group. Since there were no available glasses the group drank from the pitcher. Pat was the lucky one who spilled water on her dress. This put the entire group in stitches, especially when Pat stood behind Bill Brubaker during the remainder of the performance so that the audience could not see her wet dress.

Concerning her election she said simply, "I was very glad."

Carolee Williams was given her flowers without any explanation. By reading the enclosed card she learned of her election as Junior Attendant.

She is an elementary education major, and plans to teach either kindergarten, first or second grade with a preference for kindergarten.

Carolee chose Juniata because it was a small school offering a home economics major, which was her initial major.

Being chosen for the Homecoming Court is Carolee's greatest experience at Juniata for various reasons. Susie Loose is Carolee's big sister. Not only are they in Homecoming Court together, but they were both in this past year's May Court.

She encountered her worst experience during her French II final. She went to the designated testing area in preparation for her exam. It was only after all the tests were distributed that she discovered that hers was scheduled for the afternoon. She was quite upset when she learned that she was present in the French I class instead of her own French II class.

Carolee mentioned one area of intense dislike, "I hate anything phony; I like sincerity."

Regarding her election she said, "I feel that it is a compliment and I was surprised and happy."

Oriental Theme Unifies Full Schedule of Activities

Last minute touches are hurriedly being added in final preparation for the Homecoming Weekend. A busy and enlightening schedule is on tap for alumni, students, and guests.

The Friday evening Pep Rally and Bonfire marks the initiation of the weekend. At this time Bob Gaylor, senior captain of the cheerleaders, will formally introduce the Juniata College Homecoming Queen and her court. In addition, Bob will present the queen with a gift from the cheerleaders—an engraved charm bracelet, which has been displayed in the trophy case in Tote during this past week.

At 8:15 p.m. in Oller Hall the contemporary American comedy, Teahouse of the August Moon, will be presented by students and directed by Professor Clayton E. Briggs.

The big day, Saturday, begins at 7:30 a.m. with Brunch, which will include a continuous serving until 1:00 p.m. to eliminate lines.

The Alumni are reminded to pick up their reserved tickets for the Alumni Dinner at the time of registration in Women's Gym from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 4:00 to 5:30 p.m. offer the Art Exhibit and Open House on campus. The show in Shoemaker Gallery and the College Museum will be open for visitors and students. The art exhibit will feature the graphic works of Michael Mazur, who spoke at the dedication of the Shoemaker Galleries. Mr. Mazur's work was compared with that of Rembrandt and Goya because, "... they were interested in what goes on within the depths of the human spirit, whether noble or degraded, and believed that the way to offer their conclusions to the rest of us was to create legible representations of human beings as revelations of states of mind and emotion."

Mrs. Ruth Heaton of the Development Office will be on duty to serve as guide and to answer any questions for the visitors of College Museum, which offers historical items involving the founding and growth of Juniata College.

New Campus Open House will offer tours of the Brumbaugh Science Center, Beechly Library, and Terrace-Tussey Men's Dormitory. Recreationalists will show the guests through the buildings. In the library the Treasure Room, which houses old books and records, will be open. Mr. David Lee, Director of Men's Residence, is arranging the open house in Terrace-Tussey. Exhibits will be in progress in the Science Center.

The Homecoming Parade to Huntingdon will form at 10:00 a.m. and move at 10:30. The parade route has been shortened upon the suggestions of past participants. The parade will form on Oneida Street along the football field and move to South Hall, where it will turn left to 18th Street, left on 18th Street to Washington Street, left on 14th Street to Oneida and return to the starting point.

The parade will be led by Paul Lenhart, who will be an Indian riding a horse. Besides the Juniata College Band the other participating bands will be the Central High School Band from Martinsburg under the direction of Mr. Jack Schaffer and the Tyrone Area High School Band under the direction of Mr. David Dunlap. Other participants in the parade will be the 1965 and 1966 Homecoming Queens, the 1966 Junior and Senior Attendants, class officers, class floats, and Senators.

The pre-game activities will begin at 1:00 p.m. when the floats and class officers' cars will circle the football field. The final judging for the float competition will take place at this time, the judges of which are six alumni members. The two high school bands will perform and together will join the Juniata College Band in playing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The half-time activities of the Juniata-Moravian football game will get under way when the Homecoming Queen, Susan Loose, and her court, Senior Attendant Pat Dove and Junior Attendant Carolee Williams, will circle the field while the Juniata Band performs. Will Brandau is Master of Ceremonies for the program. Wil Hopcraft Royer, last year's queen, will crown the queen. The crown bearer is Chipper Cherry, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ronald Cherry. The winner of the float competition will be announced during this time.

The evening activities will begin with the Alumni Dinner at 5:45 followed by the drama in Oller Hall at 7:45.

The day will end with the dance, "Oriental Mystique," sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association and the J Club. All alumni and guests are invited to attend the dance, which will be held in Memorial Gymnasium.

The All-College Worship in Oller Hall on Sunday at 10:30 a.m. will conclude the weekend activities. A deviation from the traditional worship service will be offered with the presentation of the Twentieth Century Folk Mass. Student participants are: a folk group; Bill Truitt, liturgist; Wayne Wisler, reader; Bill McClelland, who will deliver the sermon. The sermon, which was written by Murray Wagner II, was delivered at the Brethren Youth Conference, from where this service was adopted, at Cornell University this past summer. This service will definitely be unique to this campus. Bob Gray, Religious Activities Chairman, said, "I will be open for any criticism and good and bad comments on it."

Norma Jean Edgar, General Activities Chairman, concluded, "I hope for good weather and that students, alumni, and guests have a very enjoyable weekend."

Professor Kihl Orients "Teahouse" Actors In Japanese Language Problems, Customs

Young Whan Kihl thinks Lotus Blossom and Sakini speak Japanese very well but he is working with Mr. Sumata, Mr. Omura and Mr.

Hokaida on the correct way to say "Hai" for yes, and "Lie" for no in the rehearsals now for "Teahouse of the August Moon."

A scene from "The Teahouse of the August Moon"

The popular American comedy will be presented Thursday and Friday evenings, November 10 and 11 at 8:15 and Saturday evening, November 12 at 7:45 in Oller Hall.

Professor Clayton Briggs, director of the comedy invited Dr. Young Kihl, assistant professor of political science to help with the frequent speeches in Japanese.

As a native of Seoul, Korea, Dr. Kihl is well qualified to advise. The first seven years of his education were spent in a Japanese school. Among his degrees, he holds a B.A. degree from Kukhak College, Seoul. In the years from 1950 to 1957, he held positions as Administrative Assistant, the United Nations Korea Reconstruction Agency, and Protocol Officer, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Seoul.

Lotus Blossom, played by Sylvia Harris, a sophomore, is having little difficulty with Japanese because she lived in Tokyo for three years while her father was working for the United States Information Agency. Not that she is fluent, Sylvia quickly comments that her command of the language was limited to asking directions.

Is Communication A Necessity?

In regards to issues, past and present, of great concern to the entire JC college community, there has been a phenomenal lack of inter-communication between administration and students, faculty and students, and students and students.

The administration has been as guilty of this communications crime as has the students—though it is through the students that this crime is usually exemplified. Consider a specific example from the last spring term at our college. Students, during this term, questioned the equality of the three college academic divisions and even went so far as to tentatively plan a picketing of the Brumbaugh Science Center. Without a doubt these students were in the wrong, not in their questioning but rather in their actions, for they left the entire administration, most of the faculty, and much of the student body completely uninformed as to their questions not to mention their actions. But, the administration was all but equally in the wrong for not informing the students as to its plans concerning this division inequality. With a little embarrassment this situation was finally resolved—by (all-but-too-late) inter-communication.

It is never pleasant to dig up old skeletons, but such skeletons can act as invaluable precedents if properly used. It is the contention of this editorial that the above skeleton is not being so used.

Presently there are issues of concern to the whole college community being acted upon by each, the administration, the faculty, and the students, and yet is there any inter-communication?

(1) Students are attempting to organize a magazine of news and opinions on the world's political, social, economic, and religious issues and affairs.

(2) The faculty is discussing whether or not to offer pass-fail graded courses in other than the major, the collateral, or the distribution requirements to individual students.

(3) The administration is planning a faculty renovation of academic division II.

These, the above issues are of great concern to the entire college community, yet, has the students, the faculty, or the administration consulted and informed each other?

The Juniatian, WJC, The Wittenburg Door, and student-faculty administration forums are elements of the college community maintained as mass communicators, but, evidence proves that they are not sufficiently being employed as such.

The students have the senate, the faculty has committees, and the administration has the dean and coordinator of student affairs. Should not each of these be functioning as an informing agent to each other through the mass communicators? Are they?

Is communication not a necessity of any community?

Dissent

The dearth of enthusiasm for activity at Juniata is a college trademark.

Infrequent poetry readings on campus called forth proportionally more faculty members than students. Even pep club's "rah-rah" spirit has failed to encourage students despite a healthy season record.

Such an unbugged campus encourages not necessarily conformity but indifference. Dissent is a lost word. Replacing an active exchange between professor and student, the cool hipster is never proven wrong, cool hipster is never proven wrong, since Norman Mailer comments to be tested."

That this apathy is, indeed, an extremely comfortable and secure reaction to life could not be denied. Neither could many quibble that Juniata has an overabundance of inactive people, socially or intellectually. The minority who welcome challenge are certainly uncomfortable and insecure.

The New Left, as such uncontented persons have been christened, seek a definition of their generation in social action rather than through money, power, and suburban homes.

That such students, whether members of Juniata's community or Yale's, are guilty of "naivete, anti-intellectualism, and romanticism" as noted by Jack Newfield of the Village Voice seems less relevant than their obvious intent to question life and act in reality.

Such a search for meaning appears to highlight the Juniata campus leaders who seek to publish a monthly magazine of comment and controversy. Certainly, that these same students overlap in leadership positions of three key groups, Honor Society, Score, and Kvasir, is unfortunate.

Yet their goal is valid and long overdue. A favorable Senate reaction to their proposal seems inevitable if the group's goals originate in such an active concern for debate. The Senate's present consideration remains dependent upon the ability of the magazine's staff to implement the above.

Why didn't they think of this for hazing; Lloyd Maxson, in trying to retrieve Something Valuable from the fires of the incinerator, found the door was locked and decided to use a more direct approach. Trouble is the direct approach isn't always the most fitting. The poor fellow got stuck!

Rights Leader King Speaks On Integration's Future

Ed. Note: On Wednesday, November 9 several Juniata students traveled to Pittsburgh to hear Martin Luther King speak. This is a report of that event.

by Maxine Phillips

Mirrored walls, chandeliers, high ceilings—the scene might have been the court of Louis XIV, but Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., speaking on The Future of Integration to a standing room only crowd of University of Pittsburgh students in the Schenley Union Building this Wednesday was straight from the 20th century. The rich, slightly accented voice rose and fell in cadence, describing the plight of the modern Negro. Tremendous gains, he felt, have been made in the civil rights movement. The battle for the basic issues has been legally won. What remains are the hard core economic issues, the frustration that comes from unemployment, housing discrimination and segregated schools. Of the problems facing the Negro today, King named housing discrimination as the most important. Only when people live together will the myths of prejudice disappear and its other manifestations crumble.

Questioned on the black power slogan originated by SNCC leader Stokely Carmichael, the SCLC head decried the use of such a semantically confusing word combination. Defining power as the right use of strength, he expressed his support of the use of Negro political and economical strength to achieve goals. The term "Black power" denotes black domination instead of black equality. As soon as the American people, black and white, realize that they are tied together, that no separate black or white path to power and fulfillment exists that does not intersect the other, then the goal of the civil rights movement will have been gained.

Reiterating his belief in non-violence as a militant, in the sense of committed, technique capable of winning the fight, he stressed the steadfastness of the conviction in the face of the so called white back-lash. This must be seen more clearly as a front-lash, coming to the surface of deeper, existing prejudices. Now that real concessions are being demanded, concessions that demand a price, then prejudices are apparent. Like a boil that must be opened before it can be healed, this rancor must come out before the wound of prejudice can be closed.

The philosopher Carlyle once stated that no lie can live forever. No nation can continue to live the lie of inequality. Soon the words of the old Negro spiritual must ring true—"Free at last. Free at last. Thank God Almighty."

Satisfaction Comes With Teaching

by Dr. Couch

If the country is to close the gap between the need for teachers and the supply, the majority of all students on college campuses at the present time will need to contribute some time to the teaching profession. Bringing this closer to our own institution it means that five hundred of the students who are presently at Juniata will need to do some public school teaching. It is not beyond reason that your society ask you to do this.

You, today's college students, seem to be seeking for your place as a contributing member to an ever changing society. You are constantly challenging your elders to look to new ways rather than being traditional. What you fail to see is that your society cannot improve unless you help to ready the younger generation to take their place in progress. If you permit the teacher shortage to continue you will be permitting an increase of incompetent teachers who, in turn, will develop incompetent students.

The college student of today who is developing a mastery of an academic area and who has the "knack" of working with young people needs to give serious thought to becoming a teacher. You need not join the peace corp, do social work, or carry placards to improve our society. You need only to turn to teaching and there find the satisfaction that you are doing something to help bring about that greater society that you are seeking.

Goethe's "Faust"

On Wednesday, November 16, the German Department will sponsor a full length, color showing of Goethe's Faust, to be shown, with English subtitles, 7 p.m. in Oiler Hall. This feature is a filming of the famous stage production of the Deutsches Schauspielhaus under the direction of Gustaf Gruendgens.

Letters To The Editor

Thanks For Cooperation

To the Editor:

This is just a note to express my thanks to all whose cooperation, initiative and good sense contributed to lessening the seriousness of the fire in South Hall on Tuesday night, November 1st.

The fire officials were very impressed with the orderliness and speed with which the students vacated the building and permitted those directly concerned with the fire operations to perform their tasks. A special thanks goes to the two gallant "Men-of-the-Hour" who manned the fire extinguishers and volunteered their services at the precise moment when needed.

Mrs. Spillers joins with me in thanking all the students, administrative and the housekeeping and other maintenance staff members for all their help and cooperation.

Sincerely,
Frances Helms (Miss)

Does JC Education Equal $2100?

To the Editor:

I write this in response to an article printed in the November 4 edition of the Juniatian, "Ellis Discusses Financial Status."

Juniata College needs lower tuition costs. Students who enter as freshmen can expect to graduate paying $100 more each year as the cost rises. If the enrollment increases each year and thus there are more students to supply the annual budget, the college should not have to raise expenses. Is this condition necessary at Juniata? I think it is not, and should be remedied for several important reasons.

First, if the expense of attending Juniata were lessened, it would give more students who are not as well off the opportunity of going to school here. I am not referring only to those students who can compete financially, but also to those who are able to compete intellectually. Thus the college would be including a wider range of students—those who have the intelligence but not the money.

Secondly, the students would feel as though they are getting the education they pay for. If knowledge could be measured in terms of dollars, I am sure that I cannot say, "I received $2,100 worth of education last year." Is it worth attending a college with such high costs, if one can obtain just as good an education at a school which is equally good academically, but less expensive?

Tuition could be lowered in several ways. Mainly, the administration could eliminate tuition increase for one year to see if the college can operate on the same financial basis for two successive years. This situation would involve several changes in managing finances, but I believe it could be accomplished.

Secondly, expenses could be reduced by abolishing "extra" costs, which include changing text books each year in many courses, charging $25 for a lost meal ticket, and other conditions such as these.

To quote the article about President Ellis in the November 4 issue of the Juniatian:

"Education at Juniata costs more than students actually pay but, thanks to the use of capital funds, students have a program in which they have the benefit of the investment of 12 million dollars."

I would like to see these investments used directly for the advantage of the students.

Doyle Holds Senior Placement Meeting

Robert A. Doyle, in his role of Director of Placement, will meet with all members of the Senior Class in Alumni Hall at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The purpose of this meeting will be to review procedures for job placement, to explain Juniata's placement program and to answer any questions which may arise.

Seniors interested in teaching, industry and graduate school are especially urged to attend Tuesday evening, although the meeting is for all class members, and attendance will be taken. Mr. Doyle will meet individually with each senior sometime during November and December; prospective '67 graduates are asked to stop by Mr. Doyle's office, located on the ground floor of Students' Hall to make an appointment.

Is There A JC Student Body?

Is It True?

That Juniata students are becoming more enthusiastic toward things extracurricular? Are you kiddin'! Not hardly.!

Time? What is it? Whatever it is, no one seems to have enough of it. Certainly not the football players, the basketball players, the Senators, the members of the various campus publications, the members of the choir, and the members of the play casts, to mention just a few of those students who find themselves, like the Egyptian mummy, pressed for time.

The numbers listed above appear to include quite a large amount. Fact is, most of those who find time to participate in one group still seem to find enough time to be a member of another. The question arises then—Where are the rest??

The pep rally before the Gettysburg game included less than 10 percent of the student body. Witness below. Jeanne Wightman put on a rousing show with those twin fire batons: had there been more than about one fourth of the band there, she might have been spurred to do something really fantastic. The cheerleaders were all there, as well as some of the football players and coaches, all extremely disappointed at the student turnout. If nothing else, it might have been interesting to come down and harass the fireman. Actually, that's about what some were apparently there for. Overheard statement: "That's three cheers in a row that I haven't opened my mouth." And that about sums up Juniata's enthusiasm.

Culture Anyone?

It seems that most college students like to consider themselves cultured; that is, book-learning, appreciative of music, literature, and the like. But the Juniata student is a breed apart. The concert given last Sunday evening by Miss Lawrence drew 150 people, not bad for Huntingdon. Of those listeners, certainly no more than 30 of them were JC students. Culture. Who needs it? Incidentally, another 30 students showed up to hear Michael Mazur speak Saturday after the game. So who's Mazur? Ask Professor Barbash.

But Then . . .

It has been some years since we've had a big J lettered on some opposing football field. There are a few of the older students, and younger faculty, who recall the incident of the Albright pretzel sign of 1960, and certainly the Alumni will remember it as well as the friendly fight at halftime. Those were the days.

A little intercollege rivalry is a good thing. Gettysburg would never miss this sign, but they might mind a bit if we had beaten them and had added to the "Founded in 1832" the words "Beaten in 1966." A great idea. Remember the Albright sign, Alumni of '62? Now let's see—does Moravian have some kind of a dog-?

Lack of Student Interest Hinders Senate Progress, Reorganization "Muddled" According To Donaldson

Senate Position Reviewed

"I wish the Senate would do something." This sentence could perhaps paraphrase current campus opinion about Juniata's Senate. Few people seem to have a clear idea of exactly what the Senate should be doing. The cry is for power, but no one specifies what kind.

In a recent interview, Senate President Jim Donaldson stated his views on Senate purposes, achievements and failures to clarify what can be expected from the Senate.

The general, traditional purpose of the Senate has been in two areas—administration and representative. Its administrative function is to organize and co-ordinate student activities under different chairs. In its representative capacity the Senate should speak on behalf of the student body, transmitting its opinions to the administration, faculty and various student organizations.

Donaldson sees the present, specific purpose of the Senate in terms of reorganization so that it can function properly. Under the present structure, senators must perform administrative duties concerning their respective chairs while at the same time keeping abreast of current student opinion on pertinent issues. None of the senators has the time to devote to both areas. What is needed, then, is a separation of powers, enabling senators to give full attention to their duties. More complete representation would be achieved by election of more underclassmen. At present, only one junior holds a Senate chair. There is no way, other than serving on committees, which does not equal senatorial experience, by which interested students can take part in their government as representatives long enough to completely learn the ropes.

Last year's Senate campaign was based on this theme of reorganization. Donaldson stated that the most significant change since that time has been the realization that it is taking much longer than expected to materialize. Efforts toward reorganization are now at the "muddled" stage. Wanting to lay the groundwork for the most effective plans, the Senate is proceeding cautiously.

A referendum on the issue is expected to appear on the February ballot. Although the Senate could go ahead without student body approval, it feels that students should be informed as to the specific changes to be made. In the past, student response to student government has been lacking. Whether this comes from the fact that the senators do not have the time to be truly representative and do not inspire enthusiasm for Senate workings, or that lack of student interest discourages senators has never been satisfactorily answered.

Another way of looking at the apparent lack of student interest is to view it as a lack of issues to react to. In the administrative domain, things are running smoothly. Criticism could arise only from a breakdown in one or more of the chairs.

Where the objections will and have come from is in the area of representation. If there had been no complaints the Senate would not be reorganizing. Until recently the Senate has been in a state of stagnation. Students have not used it properly to voice their opinions.

Today, the general trend on college campuses is towards outspokenness. Although Juniata, in a recent Senate survey, compares favorably in administrative structure, it is behind many schools in providing increased communication between all levels of the academic community.

The Senate recognizes the need for change. The present system, according to Donaldson, is "definitely not adequate." The student body recognizes the need for change. Somewhere between recognition and resolution will lie the combined efforts of both to function efficiently.

Alfarata Staff Prepares To Meet Early Deadlines

While other activities are still getting off the ground, Alfarata, the Juniata yearbook, has set its first deadline for material to go to the printers for two weeks from now. And, according to Dick Mohler, editor-in-chief, and Karen Greiss, associate editor, the deadline should be met with very little trouble. "The yearbook is coming along well this year," stated Karen, "we have a good staff working and a good division of labor, so that no one person is left with a tremendous amount of work."

Although the yearbook has met no unexpected difficulties, the editors have had to deal with the predictable problem of budgeting. Alfarata has been assigned its largest budget to date, but nevertheless it remains a limiting amount. The editors would like to use more color photography, and also try such ideas as embossed divider pages, but these will depend upon finances.

Besides dealing with the finances to an extent, the job of the editors is, ideally one of supervision, although, according to Karen, "It never works out that way." "Supervision" entails overseeing the work in all divisions and tying these divisions together. Under the editors are the division heads, each in charge of one of nine committees dealing with separate aspects of the yearbook such as classes, activities, sports, or administration. Under these division heads are subdivisions of responsibility, such as a student in charge of the pictures for the freshman class. Positions are given mainly on the basis of experience.

Once the committees are set up, the theme of the yearbook is decided Revitalized student Senate, not merely a reorganized one, must be the goal of Juniata. Restructuring of the organization alone will not solve the existing problems. There must also be an increased awareness and greater initiative on the part of the senators and the entire student body.

The Senate, as it exists now, is almost entirely an administrative body. The nine senators are in actuality nine chairmen, responsible for the many duties which are delegated to their respective chairs. As a result, almost all of their senatorial duties consist of carrying out these chair-related functions.

However, the function of a student senate must also be legislative as well as administrative if it is to play a significant part in the college community. Unless the Senate has the ability to, and in fact, does actively and creatively deal with campus is-suces, it can not hope to command student support and the Administration's respect.

The proposed separation of legislative and administrative duties in a reorganized Senate may remedy the problem to some extent—it will not solve it. There must be forceful and imaginative persons working through the structure if the Senate is to become a representative and powerful campus organization.

As it exists now, the Senate is a rather amorphous body, dangling somewhere between the students and the Administration. Before it will become effective, the Senate must clearly determine and define its powers and prerogatives. When and if this is accomplished, it is then up to the senators and the student body to use these determined and defined powers as extensively and creatively as possible.

One step necessary for creating a more effective Senate is the opening of channels of communication between the Senate and student body. There is a pathetic lack of interest in Senate affairs among Juniata students. This is due, perhaps, to the lack of information they receive. Senate minutes posted in Tote and newspaper reports are not sufficient for providing the necessary link between the student body and Senate. There must be direct contact between the senators and students. Only when students become aware of what the Senate is doing and can do will they become interested in it. With the present set up, the senators either do not or simply can not reach many students. Thus, the action taken and the opinions expressed at Senate meetings, generally are those of the individual senators and do not reflect a consensus of student opinion.

Another reason for the student body's general indifference or outright dislike for the Senate is its apparent lack of authority and resulting inability to deal with important campus issues. This assumption may not be entirely true. Through reorganization, the Senate hopes to gain greater power and a wider sphere of authority.

If this happens, then it will be the responsibility of those serving on the Senate to make it powerful and respected. This will require students who are willing, capable, and free to initiate action, express opinions, and actively and creatively deal with important and meaningful campus affairs. Too often the Senate has simply sat back and waited for issues or problems to be brought to its attention. Too often the members of the Senate have had little to say or have been afraid to express opinions on controversial issues. The Senate must be aware of its potential and must be composed of students who are willing and interested enough to create issues and recognize problems which exist on the campus.

The Senate as both an administrative and legislative body must learn to deal forcefully and effectively with student interests in relation to the Administration.

History Recalls Homecoming Reminiscences

Saturday supper for 45¢, freshmen snake dance, President's Bible class, hootenannies, building dedications, jazz concerts—sound like Homecoming? All have added to Homecoming Weekend at Juniata at one time or another. Homecoming traditions, as they appear in 1966, were not part of the festivities of the first Homecoming, 1924.

In years past, Homecoming has provided the hope of liberation from regs for Juniata freshmen. Saturday morning fresh met sophs for the traditional games of football and hockey and a rousing tug-of-war. Frosh, traditionally favored in the class battles, grudgingly wore regs another week if the sophs proved the stronger, but threw their dinks in the sky with a victory. President Ellis remembers the time when the winning class painted their class numerals on Lion's Back. At half-time these now enthusiastic Juniataans, dressed as redskins, performed a snake dance on the football field.

"Big Dance"

The "big" dance of this "big" weekend has appeared only since the last World War. It was formerly known as the "J" Club Frolic, but is now under the direction of the WAA. The "J" Club has concentrated its efforts upon a luncheon for its former members, an opportunity to relieve that "big game."

Floats and parade are also more recent additions to Homecoming. They came about through previous practices of dorm and hall displays. Several times clubs have participated in the float competition along with the classes.

An innovation this year is the Alumni dinner to be held Saturday evening in Leshner Dining Room. Each Homecoming Weekend the graduates conduct their alumni meetings, but this meal is a chance for them to talk leisurely with each other.

Royal Majesty

A lovely, but relatively recent, feature of Juniata Homecomings, is her royal majesty. The year 1947 saw The Juniata Search for ten all-American type coeds to submit to student vote. Candidates were nominated on the basis of personality, attractiveness and participation in school events. Now the nominating is under the supervision of Men's Government. Betty Kinnote was crowned that first year and after nineteen coronations Susan Loose will reign as Miss Homecoming XIX.

What would Homecoming be without the football game? This is the big event of Saturday afternoon. Dates for Homecoming are chosen on the basis of the football schedule. Before Parent's Day existed Homecoming was early in October, but is now scheduled later in the season, choosing a natural rival, such as Lycoming, Susquehanna, or Moravian, as the Indian's opponent. Haverford was a constant Homecoming rival in Juniata's early career.

"Pee Wee"

"Pee Wee" Wolfgang, having obtained administration and faculty permission and all available funds, in 1920 boarded a train for New York City to purchase football equipment and to launch Juniata on a gridiron career. With an improvised schedule and chemistry professor, Dr. Cecil, as coach, Juniata's eleven won, but one game that first year, but gained necessary experience. Prof. Jack Oliver, a four-letter man, played for the first Indian team.

Four years later Coach Harry Rote's boys played the first Homecoming game, losing to Davis and Elkins, but holding them to 10-0, and to a 21-0 score—a notable achievement," says Alfarata.

Outstanding Events

Juniata has used this Big Weekend to honor "outstanding events at times," declared President Ellis. In 1936, on a snowy afternoon ground was broken for Oller Hall, while in following years students and alumni gathered to dedicate Est. Hall, now Leshner Hall, in 1957; Memorial Gymnasium in 1951; and L. A. Beeghly Library in 1963.

Homecoming Day 1943 saw the inauguration of Calvert N. Ellis as President of Juniata College.

Students dedicated Operation-Recreation, a skating rink and play area, in 1916, marched onto the field in new band uniforms in 1955, and in 1953 shook hands with Susquehanna to inaugurate the IC-SU trophy, which Juniata brought home that year with a 39-0 romp over her opponents.

by Prue Engle

Showing the awareness, initiative, and responsibility so sorely needed in the Senate, Chairman of Underclassmen, Frank Petho, presented at this week's meeting the problem of club classification encountered as his chair began the re-evaluation of club charters.

It seems there are two types of clubs on campus. There are those clubs, chartered by the Senate, which are mainly student organized and considered "general interest" clubs. There are also other clubs, also Senate chartered, which fall under certain departments of the college and are termed "academic interest" clubs. Such clubs include the band, cheer leaders, Alfarrata, and even the football team.

The problem encountered was how to classify these "academic clubs" for if the motion to re-evaluate all campus clubs chartered by the Senate were to be carried out in its strictest sense, all of these other clubs would also have to submit their charters for investigation.

Petho presented several ways in which he felt the problem could be settled and asked for general opinions and ideas. Four choices were presented. There could be a total split, dividing the clubs strictly between the department clubs and the general interest clubs. Another suggestion was to charter the interest groups and ask the various departments to issue a policy statement for each of their clubs. A third way would be to ask both the interest and departmental clubs to submit a charter or constitution for re-evaluation. The final solution would be to have the Student Activities Council charter the departmental clubs.

With Petho stressing the importance of resolving this problem, the question of a solution was tabled to next week's meeting.

In an attempt to make definite strides toward the pertinent issue of reorganization, Senate President Jim Donaldson has divided the Senate into three small groups. During the next week each of these three groups will meet to discuss one main area of the proposed plan for Senate reorganization, the Executive, Cabinet, or Legislature.

Through the use of smaller discussion groups, Donaldson believes that the senators will have a better chance to express their opinions and examine various ideas. General discussions at the weekly Senate meetings often end in debates over trivial points and misunderstandings among the senators.

Hopefully these discussion groups will decide more concretely just how the three proposed Senate branches are to be structured and how they will function. The groups should also deal with the inter-relationship of the three and how each separate branch is to function in terms of the whole organization. Progress reports are to be presented at the regular Senate meeting as soon as possible so that the work of the various groups can be evaluated and assimilated. The Senate retreat, scheduled for December, will also deal mainly with reorganization, so the student body should see some definite results in the near future.

As a matter of old business, the new Honor Society magazine was granted as a concession to that club. Work will begin immediately on this newest campus publication.

Senior Counsellors Help Freshman Girls Adjust

Each evening at 10:30 a certain room on each floor in Brumbaugh-Oneida begins to overflow with a profusion of freshman girls. Tears and laughter creep from the room, as problems or triumphs are related to the ever-listening ear of the senior counsellor.

The present role of the senior counsellor began two years ago. Formerly the counseling aspect was controlled by the group of sophomore girls called the Herians. They were chosen on a basis of personality, academic achievement, and contributions to their freshman class. Dean Low decided that the senior counsellors who lived in the freshman dorms were in a far better position to aid the girls in personal problems. So the Herian society was discontinued, and the present system was initiated.

The purpose of this plan is to help the freshman girl adjust to life at Juniata. It was felt that the girls would feel better talking to a fellow student rather than a member of the administration. She also is an assistant to the Dean of Women and the Residence Directors in helping them to know each girl personally.

This year there are five senior girls who are counsellors and two juniors. The seniors are Terry Armstrong, Wendy Hare, Judy Hershey, Lois Weader, and Susan Loose. Barbara Hay and Ann Kent are the junior counsellors. The girls are paid, but they all feel the most rewards come from the experiences with the underclassmen.

Previously those girls who were interested in the position applied to the Dean of Women's office. Dean Low selected the girls with the aid of the house mothers. It is not certain yet how they will be chosen for next year.

When asked about their personal contact with the counselling job, the girls gave these comments:

Barbara Hay — "The job is very enjoyable, interesting, and also rewarding. The nicest thing is the ability to work with the freshman, who are so spirited."

Tina Smith — "I enjoy being a counsellor's roommate so much that I plan to apply next year for the job."

Susan Loose — "It enables you to see college life through the eyes of a freshman."

Poll Results Prove Ineffective

Even though campus radio station WJC has received the results of the questionnaire distributed several weeks ago by the Chairman of Communications, nothing will be done to change present programming this term. The results were not complete enough to effect an immediate change, according to the station staff.

The aim of the staff is to standardize programming and have certain types of music in certain time slots according to the interest of the students. This is impossible without a record library because, at the present time, the station is dependent upon records supplied by the disc jockeys.

The results of the survey indicated an interest in a World and Campus news report; according to station manager, Terry Wickham, this would require a teletype costing about $1300 a year.

Of the answered questionnaires, most students preferred pop music followed by rock and roll, folk, classical, jazz and Broadway in that order. Two-thirds of those who returned answers indicated that they listen to WJC every day. Largest audiences are, in order, late evening, early morning and early evening.

In special programming, WJC will continue programs for the Epochs department as well as other programs of current interest. Programs using special tapes are in the planning. A discussion is scheduled for next week on the subject "Are Juniata's Student Personal Files an Asset or a Detriment to the Individual?" The panel, directed by Susan Stockburger, will consist of Dean Helms, Dean Schoenherr, Jim Donaldson and Marty Utts.

The station staff emphasizes that their facilities are open to any department who wishes to use them.

Salut will be open Saturday night until 2 a.m. featuring jazz from 10:30 to 12:30 and folk music until closing time. Friday evening Salut will not be open at all.

Sunday afternoon the Chancel Youth and Junior Choirs of the Stone Church will present "Musical Vespers" at 4:00. Refreshments will be served afterwards in the social rooms. All are welcome to attend.

Touring Company Presents Webster The White Devil

A scene from "The White Devil"

The White Devil written by John Webster, will be presented by the Circle in the Square on Thursday, November 17, in Oller Hall at 8:15 p.m. The touring group, being an off Broadway company from New York, will be directed by the tour director, Mark Healey. This company is not unfamiliar to some because two years ago, they came to Juniata and presented Desire Under the Elms.

Among the 37 plays written by John Webster, The White Devil and Duchess of Malfi have been his most outstanding. Many of modern day writers characterize Webster's works as "contemporary in the old language." The audience in his time, was used to good tragedy; however, they wanted something more sensational. The language structure in Webster's works displays a more modern version with stirring metaphors and most of his characters are characterized as corrupt, self-seeking, and depraved people.

In the tragedy, The White Devil, written in 1612, the normal everyday people become corrupted and twisted by the corrupt society which is ready to snap at any moment. Vittoria, who has a secret lover, Brachiano, a duke, is the White Devil. She is considered neither lily white nor a wicked devil; however, she gets others to do her "dirty" work. As the law becomes corrupt, so does she.

For information about The Air Force Officer's training School and Air Force Commission see the Air Force Recruiters as they will be on campus November 16 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Tote Inn.

The yearbook staff will be taking orders and accepting donations for the 1967 Alfarrata at the football game tomorrow. Interested alumni and friends are asked to stop by the table at the game or to write Veasey Cullen, business manager, Juniata College.

1967 Yearbooks will sell for $6.00. A few 1966 books are still available at $4.00.

Advertising costs are $70.00, full page; $35.00, half page; $25.00, quarter page; $15.00, gold patron (three lines); and $10.00, silver patrons (two lines). A professional patron list also will be included with any donation.

JC Students Receive State Scholarships

State scholarship assistance is helping 120 Juniata College students achieve their goal of a higher education according to Mr. Robert Doyle, director of financial aid and placement.

The Pennsylvania State Scholarships are in addition to the substantial Juniata College assistance program and aid from industry and private foundations.

"State scholarship assistance," Doyle said, "now totals $97,850 or about $1,030 per scholarship. There are 95 Juniata students who have received awards."

The Program was created in the 1965 General Assembly to assist qualified students who need financial assistance. All awards are based on the academic potential of the student. Doyle pointed out, as determined in an examination, high school rank in class, or admission to an institution of higher learning.

Need for financial assistance is determined by the Higher Education Assistance Agency. The awards range from $200 to $1200 per academic year.

Operation S.O.S. Is Launched Monday

Candidates for Freshman Queen are from left Nancy Rudewick, Ann Reganus, Carolyn Barwise, Polly Egan, Joan Keller. Voting will take place in Tote all week with the Queen being announced at the Country Fair.

Fund, funds, and gimmicks make up the agenda for November 13-19. The committee for the Junior's World Service Fund, using the theme this year "Operation S.O.S." (Student Opportunity Service) has planned the most exciting week in the history of the student fund drive. The drive officially starting Sunday, November 13, will be crammed full of special projects, solicitations, and even a big Country Fair so that students may have the opportunity to share their resources in our annual student drive. The goal this year is $1850. The committee has vowed that with student support and invaluable faculty backing the drive will be an overwhelming success.

Operation S.O.S. will support two projects this year: (1) a scholarship fund for a foreign student, and (2) the education of a disadvantaged student for two summer semesters. The committee has been aware of the fact that there has not been a foreign student on campus for three years, and they are working hard to clear the way for a foreign student next fall. Steve Herr, the Student Senate Chairman of Education, has done the chores in arranging for a disadvantaged student's education next summer. The success of these two student opportunity services depends directly on the success of Operation S.O.S.

A giant lighthouse, the symbol of Operation S.O.S., will be erected on Tote lawn to flash out the news and progress throughout the week. Some of the events which will be in the spotlight are the following:

Starting Monday and continuing throughout the week five freshman girls—Carolyn Barwise, Polly Egan, Joan Keller, Ann Reganus, and Nancy Rudewick—will be competing for the honor of Freshman Queen. Each girl has decorated a ballot box which will be placed in Tote. Voting will be by gifts, with the girl receiving the most money being named as the queen. The Freshman Queen will be announced during a break Saturday Night at the Country Fair.

Tuesday night the pros will take on a new role in the life of Juniata College. At the evening meal they will serve as waiter and waitresses in the dining halls. Decked out in fancy aprons, and chefs hats, they will spice up the evening with frills, thrills, but we hope not many spills. The object of these services will be for we students to show our appreciation for the services provided by the pros for JWSF by leaving a tip for a job well done. (This will be an especially good opportunity for all brown-nosers and apple-polishers.)

Wednesday will mark the high point of the week's activity. The morning convocation will feature Andy Adede, our last foreign student at JC. He will address the subject "The Importance of Intercultural Exchange in College Life." Wednesday evening students will be personally asked to give or pledge a contribution to JWSF. This is the most important project of the drive and everyone is asked to dig a little deeper so that we as students can reach and go over our goal of $1850.

Everyone knows that giving involves some sacrifice. Therefore on Wednesday and Friday evenings, we students will have the opportunity to sacrifice—dessert that is. The students along with the cooperation of the dining halls will be without dessert at these two meals and the money that is saved will be used to feed a foreign student next year. Surprisingly this is a very profitable venture and will go a long way toward reaching our goal.

Thursday is Slacks and Suits Day. Girls can purchase a pin for 10¢ which will allow them to wear slacks to classes and the days activities. The fellows can be freed from the scratching collar of a white shirt and will be admitted to the evening meal by doing the same. The pins will be sold in the dorms starting Tuesday.

On Friday, 7:00 in Tote, comes the activity we always look forward to—the faculty bake sale and auction. Along with the regular pies, cakes, and cookies, pros will also have for auction the use of their cars for a night, meals in their homes, and even a party for 12. It looks like some real good eating ahead.

Have you heard the gimmick this year for the Penny Mile? If a women's dorm wins, all the girls in that dorm get an automatic 1 O'clock Saturday, November 19. If on the other hand a men's dorm wins, they may have an open house on Sunday afternoon. Anyway you look at it someone has to win, so keep saving your pennies and help your dorm win.

JWSF week will be climaxed by a big Country Fair in men's gym. This will be the night to let down your hair, put on your granny gowns, long skirts, or old dungarees. It just going to be a plain, old fashioned fair. The Country Fair will be set up much like the Spring Carnival last year with lots of fun and prizes. Feature events will include Dean Rockwell and his square dance band, the faculty tricycle race, a prof and student dunking machine, and many many club booths and games. The Country Fair promises to be the biggest event of the week and the most fun for all. We'll see you at the fair!

Dean Helms is already to turn back the clock and give the winning girl's dorm in the Penny Mile a 1 o'clock Saturday night. If however, the men win, the winning men's dorm may have an open house Sunday afternoon.

Tri-Captains End JC Football Careers

JC's football tri-captains, Bob Berlanda, Ron Shaw, and Gary Sheppard will be leading the Tribe in their final game tomorrow against Moravian.

Coach Prender rates all three Philadelphia area boys high in his book: "They're the type of kids that make coaching worthwhile. When you get right down to evaluate football players, those from the high-powered schools have nothing over these boys. They take the game as serious as it could be—and always give outstanding efforts."

The senior offensive fullback is Bo Berlanda from Upper Moreland High School in Willow Grove, Pennsylvania. A history major, he plans either to go into the Navy or become a high school teacher. Football is not his only activity. Bo also plays intermural basketball, throws the javelin for the track team and is in the J Club. Last year's Susquehanna game rates as his most exciting moment when he made his first touchdown. His greatest disappointment was last year's loss to Albright. Smoking rules are the only change that Bo would like to see at Juniata. He feels that students should be allowed to smoke in their rooms and in Tote.

A history and French major, Gary Sheppard, plays defensive back for Juniata. During his high school years at Springfield, Pennsylvania, he played both basketball and football on the varsity teams. Here he also plays second baseman on the baseball team and is a J Club member. An enthusiastic team member, Gary feels that every win is his exciting moment and every loss is a great disappointment. 1964 was a big year for him when he set two records—the most complete passes by a back and the most yards in passing. Gary's greatest criticism is he feels that Juniata students lack school spirit and that many of them are fair weather fans.

Senior Ron Shaw hails from Cardinal Dougherty High School in Philadelphia and plays as the defensive middle guard. As a history major, he wants to continue his education in law and eventually to join the FBI or enter Naval Officers Candidate Training School. Being head president at Terrace and belonging to J Club also fill Ron's time. His worst disappointment was the Gettysburg game last year. The Westminster game four years ago and last year's Susquehanna game were the scenes of his most exciting moments. In Ron's opinion, the attitude of the student body toward sports has declined, but the team spirit has improved more every year. His only criticism is that the social life needs to be stimulated. Aside from this point he feels that Juniata is great and he has received an excellent education.

After Saturday's game with Moravian, there will be more yardage, more tackles and blocks, and more returns to add to the totals of Berlanda, Shaw and Sheppard. But their all-out effort—although not in the records—is guaranteed to be rated high.

"It'll be very hard to replace these three kids," Coach Prender said. "We've had some good players and some with exceptional talent, but we don't often have dedication like theirs—and you can't replace that."

Senior Athletes Find New Role In Juniata Sports

by John Brinker

This year the football team has two students on its coaching staff. These two are seniors, Bill Holland and Jim Sutton. In an interview these two student coaches expressed some of their opinions and ideas about coaching.

They both said that coaching differs from actual playing in many aspects. Sutton explained that as a player one does not see the coaches point of view. Both agreed that as a player one does not see the coach's yelling at the players on the field. As coaches, these two students state they can see why a coach has to say things and do things that at times seem senseless, and also make mistakes just like anyone else. Sutton stated that a good coach can't be loved by his players, only respected for his knowledge and experience.

Both Sutton and Holland emphasized that coaching a team is much more than what the player or spectator sees of him on the field. A good coach will put in twelve hours a day, whereas the player only sees him two hours. Coaching goes from the endless running of films to the actual on-field training. Holland said, "Coaching is patience, time, and endurance."

These two student coaches agreed that even they do not yet have a complete outlook of what coaching really is. They pointed out that it is difficult to coach your own buddies and fellows that you have played with before. They also said that being students takes up much of their time and this limits their getting a deep involvement in their coaching. Naturally if they had a chance to be taken part in full time coaching they would have gained much more experience. They have not experienced the recruiting part of coaching or as Holland put it, "The other nine months of coaching."

Because of coaching, the two students feel that they can view sports at a different angle and with greater depth than before. They pointed out that they can see the reasons for some of the different plays on the field. Sutton feels that every player should be a coach for a day.

Holland and Sutton both agree that this year has been by far the best team since Coach Prender has been at Juniata. Sutton said this goes as far as size, material, and individual talent of players. Holland summed it up simply by saying, "There is talent galore on the field."

Chess Club Hopes To Improve

On not too infrequent an occasion you may have noticed a huddled gathering of people looking over a chess clock and scattered pieces in another battle of wits is in progress! The sponsor of such bellicose activities is the chess club which, now beginning its second season, is as active as ever. Attempting to better its losing last season record of one win, seven losses and one tie, the chess team has four returning veterans and a host of new players. The home match with Altoona, a sweeping 5-0 upset, prevented an otherwise winless season. This provided the necessary momentum to generate this year's enthusiasm.

Some of this season's plans include a 5-round Swiss club challenge tournament, board challenges, and intercollegiate matches. Each week the chess club meets for informal matches and a lecture series.

This coming February Juniata is to hold a United States Chess Federation affiliated Pennsylvania Individuals Collegiate Championship on campus. The next time you see a battle of wits taking place, stop over and watch a while. You might be drafted for the next match.

A Female's Interview With A Male Tennis Ball

by Janine Everhart

One often looks to game statistics or player opinions for information about athletic contests, never thinking of the completely unbiased opinion that could be obtained by simply approaching the ball. Women's sports might prove to be even more interesting than men's due to the fact that not as much emphasis is placed on them.

For instance, one could inquire of the tennis ball just exactly what went on around the courts this fall.

"Due to the division of the Women's Tournaments into three flight plans, A, B, and C, I was able to experience the talents of advanced, intermediate, and novice tennis players. Believe me, I soon developed a preference for flight C with the beginners. While they were chasing after me, I at least got a chance to breathe. Those girls in the A and B groups kept me spinning with their mastery of the various strokes. Really, I guess I didn't mind all that much, since it was so much fun to see all the enthusiasm and vigor.

"With the close of the tennis contests, I knew I would soon have to don a different outfit for the oncoming hockey season. This was going to be even more strenuous. Every day I was beat around for an hour and a half of vigorous practice. Slap, knock, dribble, drive—from one end of the field to the other. After five official games and many scrimmages with the Men's Hockey Team, I thought I'd never be the same or get my strength back. Too bad I can't say the same for the girls. They always had so much spirit and energy, even in the rain or freezing cold. Although their record wasn't one to brag about, they still fought on to win the last game. By this time I was ready to jump back into the bag for a rest, or should I say

'hit the sack.'

"My rest wasn't a very long one, for soon basketball practice was in full swing and I had another change of clothes. This would be the final test of my endurance, for here spirit really ran high. But as it turned out, the girls worked just as hard as I did at their two-hour daily practice sessions. The taps, exercises, and drills really kept them stepping. Since we've only been working together a week, I'm anxious to see if we'll both last the season."

There are many aspects in the field of girls' sports. The thrills and excitement of a tough game must sometimes be interrupted when in the heat of battle a warrior falls.

JC Felled By G-burg Rally, 33-21

Tribe To "Chase" Greyhounds Saturday

John Rolston (24) makes his way through the Gettysburg defense. The Indians lost their second straight game; G-burg emerged victorious 33-21 scoring three TD's in the fourth quarter in a come-back effort.

This Saturday Juniata's Indians will entertain the Moravian College Greyhounds before a Homecoming crowd on College Field.

The Greyhounds come into tomorrow's contest with a 3-3-1 record. Their victories have been over PMC, 27-7; Lebanon Valley, 12-7; and Upsala, 28-22. Their losses have come at the hands of Delaware Valley, 27-31; Wilkes, 7-10; and Albright, 6-13. They played to a scoreless tie with Wagner.

Moravian is led by four captains this year. Two backs and two linemen were selected to lead the Greyhounds through their '66 campaign. Hank Nehilla, All-East Fullback, who led the northern conference of the MAC's in rushing last year, is one of the backs. The other back is Bell Dry, a veteran halfback, who did not play due to an injury last year. The year before, however, he was second in MAC rushing.

The linemen, Ron Berta and Gary Fox, who were pegged as captains, play both defense and offense for the Greyhounds. Berta, a 185-pounder, was given All-East and Associated Press Little All-American honors last year.

JC goes into the game with a 3-4 record. This will be the last game of the year for the Indians who will be bidding for a 500 season. They are currently on a two-game losing streak, losing to tough Wilkes and G-burg.

Last week Juniata's defensive forward wall held G-burg to only 67 yards rushing on 34 attempts, but the Bullets completed 15 of 30 passes for 204 yards.

The Tribe's tri-captain Bo Berlanda, out rushed the whole G-burg team with a net 85 yards rushing.

Berlanda has rushed for 277 yards this season with 4.7 yards per carry. Last year the Indians defeated the Greyhounds 35-13, and in the 19-game series between the schools, JC has won 12 while losing 6 and tying one.

The Indians lost a bitter and spirited battle last Saturday to Gettysburg, 33-21. JC led through the first three quarters, but were felled by a three touchdown fourth quarter rally by the Bullets.

The Tribe took the opening kickoff and scored in three plays. On a third and one situation, Don Weiss faked a handoff, rolled out and flipped a pass to Jeff Barnes, who was all by himself on the sidelines. Barnes took the pass for a 62-yard TD play.

Following a quick-kick by G-burg, JC fumbled and the Bullets took over on Juniata's 35. Twenty yards in penalties helped move the ball closer to the goal line for G-burg. On a fourth down play, Dick Shirk, the Bullets QB, hit Rod Albright for a TD.

Following a series of punts, the Indians started a 66-yard touchdown drive. Bo Berlanda and John Rolston did the bulk of the running with Jim Hartland and Steve Horner getting some key short yardage. Only three passes were thrown, but two went for key first downs. Weiss capped the drive with a 1-yard sneak for the TD.

After an exchange of punts, JC's defense forced a fumble by Shirk and the Indians recovered on G-burg's 5. In two plays, Horner went 2 yards over left tackle for JC's last TD. Bieber, as usual, made his third consecutive PAT.

The Bullets took JC's kick-off and marched 71 yards for a TD. The big play in that drive was a 48-yard

Shirk pass to Albright that went to JC's 20. Steve Brandt carried the ball in for the score. G-burg's attempt for a two point conversion was unsuccessful.

The Indians had one more chance to score in the first half when Harry Gicking took G-burg's kickoff and raced to the Bullets' 40. Two passes to Rolston and Horner moved the ball to the 16. With only a few seconds left, Larry Bieber's field goal attempt bounced off the crossbar.

Early in the second half, the Indians drove down to the Bullets' 24. A key play in this drive was a fourth down 12-yard pass to Jeff Powers on a tackle eligible play. Bieber tried another field goal from the 30, but the ball bounced off the goal post again.

After a scoreless third quarter the Bullets started rolling. G-burg started moving from the Indians' 41. A 19-yard run by Shirk moved the ball to the 15 and two passes later, Rick Masin took Shirk's pass for the score. The two-point conversion was good on an end around play by Joe Egresiz.

In the next series of plays, G-burg's Bob Nye picked off a Weiss pass at JC's 37. On the next play Shirk hit Albright for the score. The kick was no good.

Juniata had one more try, but they ran out of downs on their own 29, where the Bullets took over.

G-burg was not satisfied with just a win. On their next play, Shirk dropped back and hit Masin who carried the ball down to JC's 13. Several plays later Shirk sneaked across for the TD as time ran. G-burg, point hungry, tried for the two point conversion, but failed.

After running one lap around the track, JC's and G-burg's cross-country runners headed into the last four miles. Bob Meares of G-burg and Rick Beard, Juniata lead the way. Right behind those two are Juniata's Aubrey Shenk, Tom Berkley and Cid Lansberry.

FROM THE TEE-PEE

Glenn Aston-Reese
Sports Editor

The fourth-quarter jinx has hit Juniata football this year. Every game (except for Wilkes) that they have lost this season was a come-from-behind by their opponents in the final period. And in each of those games the Tribe scored first, maintained the lead well into the third period, and was held scoreless in the entire second half. Even against Wilkes JC was unable to score in the second half and they were in the game until Wilkes broke it open in the fourth quarter with two TDs.

Named for the second week in a row to the Lancer award was tri-captain, Bo Berlanda. Berlanda out-rushed the whole G-burg team with 85 net yards. Dave Fleck was named as the Mad Dog Henchman. This was the second time this season for Fleck. He was also given the award for his play against Albright.

Patches in the shape of a gold shield with Lancers and Mad Dogs on them have arrived. Coach Prender instead to give each award winner one to put on his jacket.

More Juniata football records have fallen these past few weeks. In the Wilkes game sophomore QB, Don Weiss smashed the career record for passes completed. Ron Poruban 1959-62, had the old record of 112 completions. Weiss after seven games this year and last season, has a total of 136 passes completed. Weiss also broke the yards-passing-in-a-season record. The old record of 1005 yards, held by Pat Tarquinio, 1955, was surpassed by Weiss, who, after seven games this year, has a 1009-yard total.

Larry Bieber got into the record books again when he kicked three PATs against G-burg last Saturday. This gave him a season total of 22, which ties the record held by Joe Veto, 1954. Bieber has missed only two PATs all season. Both came in the Susquehanna game; one miss was caused by a fumbled snap. Bieber picked up the ball and tried to run with it, but he was soon smothered by the Crusaders' line.

Bieber, although accurate on PATs has been having trouble making field goals. His record in that department is one out of eleven. Most of his kicks have been close, two against G-burg hit the goal post, and have been tried from as far away as 63 yards.

Speaking about records, several have been made in cross country this year. JC's cross country course record has been broken twice this year and tied once. Allan Presby of Franklin and Marshall was the first to set a course record this year with a time of 25:06. That record lasted for exactly one week. Ted Bond of E-town holds the present record with 24:35. And last week Bob Meares of G-burg tied Bond's record.

On JC's cross country team everyone bettered his best time in a losing effort. Sophomore Rick Beard ran 25:01 which was 31 seconds better than his previous best time.

A few JC students made a new addition to Tote for the game against G-burg Saturday. Several pulled the "all-niter" to traverse down to Gettysburg College to borrow a sign near the front gate that read, "Gettysburg College, Founded 18..." (Whatever the year was, I don't recall.) Unfortunately the sign was attached to a post which had to be cut down to get the sign. The sign was then decorated with blue and gold crepe paper and balloons.

The sign is now safely back at home. Dean Schoenherr transported it back while attending a meeting in that area.

JC Harriers End Season; Next Year's Outlook Bright

by Bob Dunn

In their last meet of the season, the harriers lost to St. Francis, 26-29. Rick Beard was first; Phil Sipling, fifth; Aubrey Shenk, sixth; Kerry Stanley, seventh; and Jim Massingham, tenth.

Against Gettysburg on Saturday, the harriers had their fastest meet of the season. Although eight Juniata runners had their lowest times of the season, this was not enough as the experienced Gettysburg team won, 17-38. Bob Meares of Gettysburg was first and tied the course record of 24:35 set by Ted Bond of E-town. Although Beard only finished fourth, he lowered the course record for a JC harrier to 25:01. Also placing for JC were Stanley, seventh; Shenk, ninth; Merle Lansberry, tenth; and Joe Rizzotti, eleventh.

In a tri-meet versus Susquehanna and Delaware, JC dropped both meets. Delaware Valley edged Juniata, 26-29, while Susquehanna narrowly squeezed by JC, 28-29.

The harriers' overall record fails to tell the whole story. This year is a building year, since most of the team is composed of freshmen and sophomores, many of whom have not participated in cross country before. This lack of experience has hurt Juniata. "However," Coach Snider said, "all the boys have worked hard and have continued to lower their times."

On November 14, the cross country team will hold an intersquad handicap to prepare for the MAC's on November 18.

Kuhns Ends Short Career

Experience, usually a pre-requisite for a good performance in any sport, was not one of Bob Kuhn's strong points when he came out for cross country this fall. The JC senior had never run cross country before this year, but in the meet with F & M he lettered and has since scored in several of Juniata's meets.

Bob, who spent his freshman and sophomore years at Messiah College and played soccer there but did not run at all until last year. He first became interested in running when his roommate invited him along on a late night jaunt over the country roads behind Sherwood dormitory. From this brief introduction, Bob gradually came to like distance running and so tried it competitively. His success serves as an encouragement to all who might have some such here-to-fore unknown talent.

Spotlight on IM's

The closing week of IM football was hindered by bad weather but one important game was played. In a battle of the unbeaten, Studs (8-0) vs. Vikings (7-0), nothing was decided as the game ended in a 19-19 tie. The Studs scored first as Mel Wakefield recovered a blocked punt in the end zone for a TD. Then Stud QB Jim Saunders ran for a TD before the Vikings scored on a pass from Murdock to Riegles. At half time the score was 12-7 Studs. The Studs started off with a TD pass from Saunders to Mayer, but the Vikings came back with a run by Murdock and a TD pass to Forney to tie the score at 19-19 before the game ended.

The Studs now have a sure spot in the championship game to be held Friday afternoon at 3:45. Wednesday the Vikings tangle with the 3rd place Vets (6-1-1) for the right to meet the Studs in the playoffs. On Monday the all star team will play against the league champs.

New Academic Center Planned For Humanities

Plans have been announced to build a large Academic Center for the humanities, according to John Fike, vice president for financial affairs and treasurer, who said that bids have been called for remodeling of the Old Science Building which will more than double its present size.

The move reflects the expanding needs of the Social Science and Humanities Divisions, Fike said, and by adding two large wings to the present building, facilities will be created which will greatly improve the scope of the courses offered in the two divisions.

Fike stated that bids will be received on the basis of specifications and drawings now available and will be opened December 16 at 3:30 p.m. On the 17th of December, the executive and finance committees of the Board of Trustees will make a final decision on the construction.

Support for Humanities
In commenting on the plan, Dr. Donald M. Rockwell, acting dean of academic affairs, said that at Juniata the humanities, social sciences and the natural sciences are the essential elements of its liberal arts education.

"We are concerned," Rockwell continued, "that all the humanities receive the solid support they deserve in order that they may hold their place of significance in an increasingly scientific world, and we are moving to provide them with adequate facilities."

The building which is expected to cost $800,000, will contain a total of 17,784 gross square feet of new construction as compared to the present 13,328 in the Old Science Building. The College has found that the original structure is sound and will require little basic change. The completed building will contain an estimated 133 percent increase in floor space.

Federal Grant
A green light for the construction was given by a recent Federal Grant of $248,233 under Title I, Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963. Previously the plan for the building was cleared by the State Commission on Academic Facilities of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Architects Hunter, Campbell and Rea of Altoona, Pa., have designed the structure in the style described as "contemporary colonial" with a combination of stone and brick which will harmonize with the new Brumbaugh Science Complex (1965) and the L. A. Beeghly Library (1963).

New Facilities
There will be 13 new classrooms, 2 instructional laboratories and 20 faculty offices in the remodelled older section, and the new wings will be designed for 19 classrooms and 2 instructional laboratories. The entire building will be air-conditioned.

Featured will be a modern language laboratory with a library of tapes, a recording studio and monitoring equipment. Space will be available for 70 students (double the current capacity of the language department) and sufficient, it is believed, to accommodate the projected Juniata College student population of 1250.

The present language building, the I. Harvey Brumbaugh House, will be white painted brick with a terrace extending from one wing to the other at first floor level. The doorway will be framed by white pillar, and a small balcony will project over the main door.

Faith in Liberal Arts

Dr. Howard H. Crouch, newly appointed chairman of the Social Science Division, said the new building provides an important psychological boost to his faculty.

"We are pleased at the tangible support for our work which this building signifies and we look forward to a much better student-faculty relationship because of the new classrooms and offices."

Laboratory facilities, Crouch said, will be available for Economics, Psychology and Sociology with opportunities offered for the first time to conduct controlled experiments. "We hope to establish broader programs in our research," he added, "and plan to strengthen our Psychology department next fall with two additional faculty members."

Dr. Earl Kaylor, chairman of the humanities division, feels the new building illustrates the faith of the college in the liberal arts. He pointed out that the completion of the Academic Center will create a campus grouping in the humanities which includes the Carnegie building with its studios and the Shoemaker Galleries and the L. A. Beeghly Library.

Projected for the future and rounding out a ten year building program will be a College Center and a new Women's Dormitory.

Rockwell Announces Crouch To Replace Cherry As Div. II Head

Dr. Howard H. Crouch, associate professor of education, has been appointed chairman of the Division of Social Sciences (II). In announcing the appointment, Dr. Donald M. Rockwell, acting Dean of Academic Affairs, said he will replace Dr. Ronald L. Cherry, who has resigned.

As a statement from his office, Dr. Rockwell said, "We accept with the greatest regret Dr. Cherry's resignation from the chairmanship of Division II and from the faculty council. We appreciate the vigorous leadership which Dr. Cherry has given both the council and the division, and will miss his valuable contributions to the work of both."

The new division chairman earned his B.S. and his Ph.D. at The Ohio State University and his M.Ed. from Westminster College. He has been a member of the Juniata faculty since 1963.

Dr. Cherry, who has been chairman of Division II for three years offered the following statement concerning his resignation: "I think I was correct in offering the resignation and the administration was correct in accepting it. . . . Division II has been having growing pains. . . . A division head has to give proper representation between administration and faculty. . . . He must be actively involved. . . . The incident in Alumni Hall, though not directly involved, made me aware that I was too emotionally involved. (It would be best to sit on the sidelines for awhile)."

JCF Tutorial Program Pleas For Volunteers

A plea is being issued by the JCF tutoring program for tutors for the remainder of the semester. Nancy Pentland, the program's director, is asking for volunteers. "At the moment, there are more children than tutors," Nancy said. "The kids are asking for tutors. They are desperately needed. We especially need more boys, for many of these kids are from broken homes that lack a father image."

She reviewed the purpose and goal of the program as she said, "Most of these children come from a totally different moral background and this gives them an exposure to a more desirable kind of atmosphere, while at the same time helping them make academic progress."

Tutors are needed mainly for Mondays and Wednesdays. Tutoring takes place from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. downtown at the Salvation Army headquarters. Since Nancy says, "I prefer volunteers, rather than recruits," anyone interested may contact her through intercollegiate mail, box 384.

Registration Period Nears; 21 New Courses Slated faculty and students prior to pre-registration counselling.

It is required that each student complete his schedule of courses under the supervision of a faculty adviser or departmental chairman. Each degree student by this time has received a card indicating his registration adviser and a time period during which the student is to meet with his adviser. At this conference a schedule card is to be completed listing the approved schedule of courses for the spring. The Registrar's Office emphasizes that care should be taken to enter the correct registration number for each course as the registration procedure is often hindered by incorrect numbers.

A normal program consists of from 11 to 17 hours (or to 18 hours if consisting of only five courses). Any course in the College is open to any student having the stated prerequisites. Preference, in case of overcrowding, will be given to students for whom the course is a curricular requirement. Otherwise, priority will be in order of class rank.

A registration deposit is required of every student planning to register for the spring semester. Upon payment of the deposit, a registration card and a receipt will be issued by the Business Office. No student will be admitted to registration without both the completed schedule card and completed registration card.

The Office of the Registrar will be open for registration by class each day from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon and from 1:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. on the following schedule:

Seniors
Monday	December 12, 1966
Juniors
Tuesday	December 13, 1966
Sophomores
Wednesday	December 14, 1966
Freshmen (A to J)
Thursday	December 15, 1966
Freshmen (K to Z)
Friday	December 16, 1966

Anyone unable to register during the scheduled day may register at a later time in the registration period; under no circumstances may a student register with an earlier group. A late registration fee of $10.00 is applicable to any student failing to register during the regularly scheduled registration period without valid reason.

Early in October Dr. Donald M. Rockwell, Dean of the College, in Hollinger, will be distributed to the

Masque Hosts Dramatics Festival

Last spring 10 colleges were invited to participate in the first play festival ever to be held here, to be sponsored by the Juniata College Masque. Albright, Delaware Valley and Elizabethtown Colleges had accepted, but recently Delaware Valley had declined.

Now, as final plans were being made for the three colleges to participate in the festival, Elizabethtown has notified the Masque that they will not be able to attend. Hopefully, this may be corrected; President Morley Mays of Elizabethtown has been contacted and is being asked if they will please attend. Word has not been received as yet, so the plans are tentative, pending Elizabethtown's decision.

If Elizabethtown comes, the festival will be presented as originally planned with competition and cash awards. Elizabethtown will present The Bald Soprano by Ionesco; the Albright group will present the recognition scene from Anastasia. Juniata will stage "Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad" which was presented before a standing room only crowd on campus recently.

Each college was instructed to stage a 45 to 60 minute student directed presentation. Judges from the Huntingdon High School English Department would present a $30 prize, the combination of the three $10 entrance fees.

If Elizabethtown does not come, Albright and Juniata will present their respective plays with no competition and no cash awards, the purpose being what has been called an exchange of ideas.

Let's Have Some Respect

A simple, off-color, spot check for improper sign-outs has caused an explosion of student concern over issues with much broader moral implications.

An official statement issued from the office of the dean of student affairs reads as follows:

Because the offices of the dean of women and the dean of student affairs has evidence that some of the girls were signing out improperly, the deans called the parents of all women who had signed out to go home, Saturday evening, November 5, to find out whether they truly did go home. We felt and still feel this action was in order when we learned that a number of girls had been involved in activities the night of November 5 without properly signing out. Two girls were apprehended for improper sign-out, the others we were not able to identify. We tried.

Dean Schoenherr had, at first, emphasized that the sole concern was in checking for improper sign-outs, to insure that the sign-out system is not being exploited. If this is the case, then the spot check, essentially a questioning of the women's integrity, is not totally uncalled for. Dean Schoenherr has stated that, "We had evidence that you as students could not be trusted." The action was taken, and has been administratively justified in that Juniata is a private, church-related, "value oriented" institution, and as such maintains a right to see that students are attending to moral ideals. If the incident had been nothing more than this, and had implied nothing more than this, it would be easy to dismiss the matter, however, further related action, strategically poor on the administration's part, has caused further questions to be raised.

In the first place, though we do condone the purpose of the action when stated so logically by the authorities, it is impossible to condone the method by which this purpose was carried out. Are "sneaky" phone calls made without the students knowledge the way to carry out a spot check? Certainly this is questionable and a bit unethical in itself, and cannot, and has not been adequately justified. Personal confrontation would have been less insulting, to be sure more ethical, but the administration preferred not to consider this at that time. Though a statement has been made by the deans that this spot check was not carried out with the best diplomacy, no assurance has been given that it will not happen again. Dean Schoenherr has stated that, should similar circumstances again arise, a spot check will again be warranted. This incident is indeed detrimental to student-dean relations and a backward step in the trend that was emphasizing personal responsibility. It has demonstrated a lack of respect and trust on the part of the administration for the students.

Concern has increased over a second question of moral and legal implications. The dean of women strongly advised three Senior counsellors, who were 21, with blanket sign-out permissions not to go to a motel party (whether "questionable" or not). They took her admonition as a refusal of permission for them to go. Dean Helms's basis for her argument was that it is the college's role to make the students aware that "human nature will respond in certain ways . . . questions come up," and that the administration wished to help keep the student from "getting in over her head." We certainly would hope that the administration could presuppose these girls awareness of Dean Helms's "notions"—for one must remember that they are 21, they have blanket permissions which are granted by their parents. Respect is lacking!

Now the student body, both women and men, is questioning the legal, moral, and ethical right of the college to determine the students' personal moral codes. Dean Helms's admonition is an example of the imposition of a moral code upon individuals who have every right to determine and be responsible for their own codes. Dean Schoenherr has stated that the image of the college is pro morality, though this morality has never been publicly defined. A definition is in order, since the idea is "accept (this policy) or leave (this college), because alteration of the (college) image is out of the question." So, every member of the student body may examine what the college's idea of morality is, and every member disliking it may leave. So, when the student body disappears . . . "Ubi est collegium Juniatis?"

But is alteration out of the question? If anything, we have witnessed a few backward steps, in what was hoped to be a rather progressive trend. Surely Juniata is not so steeped in tradition as to adhere to something that many responsible students cannot accept. If it does, then the "if you don't like it leave" philosophy is suicidal. We demand some kind of statement from the administration that adequately defines and justifies its stand against us.

Unfortunately these moral issues were never the basic ones—the deans never felt that their actions would arouse the students so. Perhaps this was lack of insight and understanding on their part. But the students are aroused, and demand treatment that is reasonable, logical, and in the concern of all.

However one important factor must not be overlooked. Though the administration has been at fault, so have the students. The students are demanding something, but no one really knows what. It is something more than simple respect, but it needs to be clearly formulated. A united effort with efficient leadership, backed up with support and information, clear cut direction, and understanding of what the effort is for will get the desired results. We demand a statement not only from the administration, but a statement from the students.

The administration is confused, it has contradicted itself and has stepped out of bounds from time to time in trying to justify its action. This administrative failure has brought about all the student action with which it must now contend.

The students feel that a lack of respect and trust of them is present on the part of the administration. A similar lack of respect and trust of the administration is present on the part of the students. Both parties concerned have been at fault; both parties merit some criticism; both parties deserve consideration. Perhaps when a feeling of mutual respect and trust, and an efficient communication system are established through the efforts of all involved, then some headway can be made.

Letters To The Editor

Telephone

To the editor:

About those telephone calls!

Their purpose was to learn if students signing out for home for November 5th did actually go home so that we could eliminate the belief by too many people concerned with the college that our students were exploiting the sign-out procedure to deceive the college.

President Ellis was aware of the calls to be made. Indeed, such a check is the immediate responsibility of the college when the college's name or that of its students is involved. Each Dean making the calls (1) identified themselves, (2) asked only if the students had indeed arrived at home as stated on the sign-out cards, (3) gave information that this was a blanket check of all women students signing out for home for that night, and (4) provided any answer regarding why the check was being made. Parents of students who had signed out for motels or other destinations were not involved since motels were not the destinations questioned, per se, but the signing out for home. It was felt more harm than good would result from involving the housemothers or students not suspected individually of falsifications.

At the end of the weekend we felt assured the fears regarding widespread dishonesty or exploitation of the sign-out for home could be refuted.

I want to commend the students for coming to me with their questions and their feelings, for only in this way can I represent them and communicate to them and to all concerned as to what the problems and feelings are. I will always do my best to plea with and for the students, and while I can never promise that their will—or even mine—will always be done, I will continue to work with all concerned to help them sharpen their wits and strengthen their judgment in evaluating and coping with this world of ours.

I have every confidence that each of you is vitally concerned with becoming independent from your families intellectually, emotionally and financially in a way that will reflect favorably on yourself, your family and your college. If when you leave Juniata you can live and make decisions with an awareness and acceptance of possible outcomes and responsibilities, then your independence will be complete. If the matter at hand has served toward that end or toward making you more aware that your actions do have a bearing on your college and your parents, we will all be better people for it, and becoming better people is what education is all about.

So be it — and thanks again —

Questioning Questions Of Integrity

"We went there to talk to them, to try to understand their view, but they didn't want to try to understand us." During the discussion, several women walked out of the meeting in disgust.

Indignation was not limited to the immediate results of the telephone spree. Repeatedly students asked, "what justification has the administration to impose a moral code which has not formally been defined? Why does college action so often conflict with policy? Why do the deans combine prosecuting and judicial powers when these processes are separated, traditionally in government? On what grounds do the deans feel the situation necessitates college precedence over parental teaching? How far does college authority extend? Does the image of the college take precedence over the individuals, students, and faculty, of which it is composed?"

In response, the group of over 75 women including leaders of Senate, Judicial board, and Women's House was told by Dean Schoenherr, "It is time, perhaps to sever (your) college relationship if the policy is not compatible with (your) personal beliefs," i.e. transfer.

Smoking

To the Editor:

It would seem, friends and neighbors, that we have reached the bridge that we are always going to cross when we come to it. It's about time we start crossing it. The multitude of well-guarded ambiguities which compose the bulk of our Puritan and archaic conduct rules have finally grabbed us by the scruff so to speak. SMOKING: People smoke pipes, cigarettes, and cigars and to some this is a shocking fact, mainly because they are supposed to be shocked and not because they have any particular moral purity. SEX: People have sexual intercourse and those dirty choose to share this with DRINKING: People drink alcoholic beverages. Those who choose to do this illegally risk legal action but it is their decision as to whether or not they will risk it.

In the above topics it is a sad fact that these are sometimes taken to extremes but this quality of extremism is not unique to these topics alone. A quality that these three have in common is the fact that these actions are initiated by individuals with individual moral limits and boundaries. This is a round about way of saying that it is impossible to legislate mass morality. The U.S. Congress has tried many times and failed: E.G. Prohibition.

What has really kicked the cat off the barrel is some of the extremes I spoke of earlier. The administration has stepped over the line to what I would call wholesale intimidation. A WJC news announcement which was of obviously indirect interest to the majority of students is a fine example of some administrative terror tactics or in other words "This can happen to you!"

To restate all of the gross unreality which are our conduct rules would be a wasted effort because we all are aware of them and the way they have of stifling many valuable forms of maturation, education, and experience: those things with which we will eventually have to deal. I speak on a broad scale not limited to sex, drinking, and smoking.

Since the administration likes to investigate things, it might be wise for them to find out why it is necessary for a morbid, if not perverted, reference to a morgue must be included in a note admonishing students to stay out of a freshly painted room because of possible noxious fumes. It also might check into the active campaign to discourage cars on campus when travel is a major adjunct to a broadening of one's cultural ion will experience great difficulty in working with a student body whose views they do not attempt to understand. Trust, even in an administrative student relationship, is voluntary. It can not be coerced.

Mature individuals do not automatically accept the status quo as dictated, they question, examine and then decide.

As a guide for action consider the following:

"Notice of Standards of Conduct Expected of Students. Disciplinary proceedings should be instituted only for violation of standards of conduct defined in advance and published through such means as a student handbook or a generally available body of university regulations. Offenses should be as clearly defined as possible and such vague phrases as undesirable conduct or conduct injurious to the best interests of the institution should be avoided. Conceptions of misconduct particular to the institution need clear and explicit definition."

The above is an excerpt from the American Association of University Professors' 1965 Statement on the Academic Freedom of Students, compiled by college and university professors throughout the country.

background as well as giving an individual an outlet from the college pressures which today are the most severe they have ever been and will get worse. Even the staunchest Juniata patriot could not stand to be on campus from the first day to Thanksgiving with no change of scene. Make no mistake, this is actually what has been proposed. If a student's grades are suffering he is responsible and it is no place for the Administration to step in and legislate academic efficiency. Unreal doesn't begin to describe these actions.

The saddest fact is that this paper has to be written at all, but once again in a short period of time Juniata has shown that it must dwell on the little small-minded issues as the worthwhile things of life slip through our fingers.

Thanks For Cooperation

To the Editor:

I wish to express my personal appreciation to all those who helped to make last weekend a memorable Homecoming! So many of the faculty, staff, and students contributed so much! One cannot name them all but to mention a few, the football team, the cast of the "Teahouse of the August Moon," the band, the classes who made the floats, the Food Service, the dance committee, those who planned the All-College Workshop, and the Homecoming committee who directed it all. Our congratulations and gratitude for a job well done!

Individual Rights

November 14, 1966

To the Editor:

Individual rights are a topic of much student discussion at the present time. Although Juniata students have often been accused of apathy and ignorance of world and national affairs, we do have some understanding of what it means to be basically an individual. Though we do not often show this, the time has now come for all women students to take stock of their status on the Juniata campus. What are our responsibilities as upperclass women to ourselves and to the school? What is the responsibility of the office of the dean of women to these upperclass women and also to the school?

Last year parents of women students were given the opportunity, even encouraged in the opportunity, to allow their daughters the freedom and accompanying responsibilities of blanket permissions — freedom for these girls to attain overnight permissions (regardless of destination) at their own discretion. This permission was deemed necessary by the former dean of women because prior to this time Juniata women could not use their own judgment already established through mutual understanding with their parents.

Now, presumably in response to the misconduct of several women calls have been made from the office of the dean of women to parents investigating whether or not their daughters had been home as signed out. The fact that many of these women had been given blanket overnight permissions by their parents seems to have been disregarded. Admittedly the reprimand system requires that 2/3 of a reprimand be given for improper sign-out. If the validity of a woman's "sign-out" is questioned, it seems to us that the ensuing action must begin with personal confrontation. Should the woman's response be deemed inadequate, all further action should be made either in the student's presence or with her knowledge. Not only does checking behind the woman's back appear unethical, it also casts a shadow of mistrust on her parents as well as on the woman student. This action often leads to unwarranted apprehension and concern on the part of the parents.

It has now become obvious that Juniata women are not considered responsible individuals since the administration feels they must monitor and approve the activities of the women students. As individuals we find that insulting and degrading to both the women students and to the school.

Writing Conference Questions Answered In "Straight Talk" by Director Hunter

Richard E. Hunter
Director of Writing Conference

Although the temptation exists to slack off a discussion of the Writing Conference Program, in order to allow those Sophomores still in it at least to laugh at something they cannot love, it is perhaps kinder and wiser to come out with straight talk. Therefore this article will cope seriously with several questions both asked and implied.

1. Has the program always been fair in the past? No. Though the examples of a bad shake are fewer than cynics would suggest, unquestionably there have been cases in which Student A, a fairly decent writer, has not gained exemption, while Student B, a mediocre writer, has. What victims of this inequity do not realize is this: many advisors have been quite upset by such a situation; they are not callous minor deities, floating along on Olympian clouds, heedless of the plight of poor mortals below. They are as anxious as you are to remove the flaws in the machinery.

2. Is the program fair now? As fair as we can make it. The flaws existed because of an unbalanced judgment system. Now each paper which serves as a basis for exemption (Epochs final for Freshmen; a special paper for Sophomores) will be read by 1) an advisor other than your own, 2) your own advisor, and 3) the Program Director. Moreover, the first reader of Advisor A's papers will be Advisor B; some of A's papers will be read by B, some by C, some by D. This system comes as close as is humanly possible to the avoidance of preconceived pro or con factors; further, since the Director reads all the papers, the system should avoid completely the ranking of an inferior paper as better than a superior paper. You may still feel that our standards are too easy or too hard, but you will not be able to say that they are inconsistent.

3. What happens to the student who does not cooperate with the program? Not enough to ruin his chances but enough to put a crimp in them. The Sophomore who comes up for exemption must write on a solid C (75) level. However, for every failure to turn in a paper, for every missed conference, he receives a penalty of one point. This means that the student who avoids participation for the whole term has ten points registered against him and therefore will have to write on a solid B (85) level to gain exemption. Although to do so is far from impossible, one would be foolish to push his luck. Many people who gain A's in composition courses write more than one B-minus on their way to Nirvana. Since you can cut yourself with a safety razor, I would not advise shaving with a sword.

4. How will students be tested for exemption? Freshmen deemed capable by their Advisors of writing on a solid B level will be tested at the end of this term on the basis of their Epochs Final. Their advisors will inform them that they are up for exemption in advance; I have asked the advisors to include in this group those students who "could make it on a good day." Although this will mean that several of those tested probably will not gain exemption, we wish to bend over backwards in affording people a chance. Any of this group who write on a solid B level will make the grade. All Sophomores and Transfers in the program will be tested. In the early evening a week before finals, this group will be gathered and given a short mimeographed essay to read; they will then be asked to write a paper answering any one of three questions that are asked about the essay. Time limit for the whole operation will be an hour and fifteen minutes; suggested length for their paper will be 400-500 words. Papers will be judged for their avoidance of wordiness, their ability to sustain a coherent approach, and their ability to use language precisely; these are the three standards emphasized repeatedly in the conference sessions. Mechanical errors (spelling, punctuation, grammar, diction) will affect the grade only if they are outstandingly bad and frequent.

A solid C will mean "pass" for anyone who has not penalized himself into being subjected to a more rigorous standard. At the end of the school year all students still in the program will be tested, this time with a "75" level as the requirement for Freshmen as well as Sophomores and Transfers.

5. How competent are the Advisors? Although I have heard growling about this, let me reassure you as to the competence of the Advisors. It is true that many of them were not English majors, but this is consistent with Juniata's policy that English majors should have no monopoly on clear and sound writing. Furthermore, most objections run like this: last year Advisor A told me one thing, but Advisor B, during the second term, gave me completely different advice. Let me reiterate that we are all hammering at avoiding wordiness, writing coherently, and choosing words with precision. The grossest variations last year came from the lack of a clear policy as to what we were looking for; this lack of policy no longer exists. If a student still sees, from his viewpoint, qualitative differences between advisors, one can only point out that at no college—not even Harvard University—are all members of the same department equally talented or equally appealing to all students. That's just a fact of life.

6. What is the Director's relationship to the Students? Indirectly, I must be responsible for fairness and consistency in the program. Directly, I am available to talk with anyone who makes an appointment. My phone number is 643-3726. My house is at 1606 Moore Street; I prefer to see students at the house. Almost invariably I have free time on Tuesday and Thursday morning and on Wednesday and Friday afternoon. Although I do not like to be dropped in upon, I strongly encourage sessions set up in advance. I do not assume that all your troubles stem from your mother not understanding you. It could be your older brother. Incidentally, any student who does not gain exemption may make an appointment to go over his paper with me.

7. What happens when you haven't? You are back in the program until the end of your Sophomore year (a bit later for some transfers). If, by then, you still have not been exempted, you may either leave Juniata or pass with a C or better a summer composition course at another school. It is absolutely untrue that "nothing will be done," though it is true that the Summer course can be your personal Rescue Mission. So do not take the program lightly; although it is designed to give you every chance to make the grade, it is not a paper dragon.

I believe we have taken a program, fine in intent but flawed in practice, and helped it back onto its feet. You cannot be sure you will go through it without setbacks, but you can be sure that your treatment will be fair.

by Prue Engle

A crowd of over 100, including students, housemothers, and deans, attended last night's Senate meeting concerning the action taken recently in an investigation of signout procedures in the women's residences.

Senate Vice President, Toby Dills, read a petition, signed by 450 students, which expressed student dissatisfaction with the action taken by the deans and asked that the deans issue a joint statement "clarifying the college's position on the moral conduct of its students," and "defining and defending their role in relation to that policy."

President Jim Donaldson, representing student opinion, stated the concern and misunderstandings which have arisen over the immediate issue of women's regulations and the broader issue of the college's obligations and responsibilities to students and parents. It seems that the College claims authority in areas in which the students feel they should be free to act as responsible and mature individuals.

Replying to the student position, Dean Schoenhierr read a prepared statement expressing the requirements and expectations of Juniata for the student body. The statement contained such nebulous phrases as "any behavior which reflects discredit upon the college" and "conform to the ideal of Christian character." Discussion then centered around attaining a more exact delineation of college policy and spheres of authority.

The discussion also made it evident that the policies of the College and the general attitudes of the students are quite different and there must be an attempt made to understand and work out these differences.

Summing up the discussion and sorting the many ideas presented, Dr. Cherry, Senate advisor, proposed two basic questions. Because no individual is an entity entirely to himself, but one that must function in a larger society, what aspects of the individual's life should belong to the collective will of the society? It must be determined to what extent the community can reach into the individual's life. Another question pertinent to the discussion is what means of control or "feedback" would the students consider legitimate as a means of checking?

Because of the recent incident, it remains of primary importance to restore the lines of communication between the students and Administration. The incident has clearly shown that there is a very basic lack of communication concerning very important issues and attitudes at Juniata.

An "ad hoc" committee has been established by the Senate to consider and propose a policy expressing student ideas concerning student regulations and the extent of the College's authority in various spheres of social activity.

Sharp jutting coastlines and icy seascapes will be featured scenes in the works of contemporary artists living and studying in Maine. Surrounded by rocky coasts and fishing vessels, these artists display their talents which are soon to be viewed at Juniata.

Assembled by Christopher Huntington at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, the exhibit includes both prominent artists who are recognized universally, and lesser known figures who have worked closely with Maine subjects and scenes.

Landscapes are shown by such popular artists as George Bellows, Rockwell Kent, Walt Kuhn and Andrew Wyeth. Still life paintings are represented by John Laurent and others. Also included in the collection is a sculpture by Robert Laurent and one by William Muir.

Many of the works are not for sale and lent by private persons or galleries. Subjects vary from "Autumn Brilliance," by Hans Moller, and Eric Hudson's "At Sea," to "Island House, Ogunquit, Maine" by Walt Kuhn.

Of the artists included in the collection, some of them live in Maine, while others go there to study and paint the rugged scenery. Christopher Huntington comments on the exhibit saying, "Maine's artists continue to look in wonder at nature and interpret their reactions in a thousand different ways." It is their representations of scenery and emotion which make the Maine Exhibition exciting and enjoyable.

Goldovsky Company To Stage Rigoletto For Focus Series

Rigoletto, Giuseppe Verdi's opera, will be presented in Oller Hall, Friday, December 2, at 8:15 p.m. by The Goldovsky Grand Opera Theatre. Much to the advantage of Juniata students, the famous Victor Hugo play on which Verdi and librettist Francesco Maria Cavallotti founded their masterpiece, Rigoletto, will be presented by the Goldovsky Company translated from Italian to contemporary idiomatic English.

The Goldovsky Grand Opera Theatre, obtained by Focus on Art and Life, is a company of 50 singers, orchestra and chorus. Known as Mr. Opera to millions of listeners of the Metropolitan Opera broadcast, "Opera News on the Air," Boris Goldovsky supervises every detail of this fully staged performance, with specially designed sets and costumes.

The Goldovsky Opera Theatre will perform the opera in English as dictated by the Company's principal purpose of presenting great opera as living theater.

Boris Goldovsky, under whose direction this production of Rigoletto has been readied for its present tour, has his own conviction that when an audience understands everything an operatic cast is singing, then it becomes far more critical of the action, stage business, and character portrayals, and the performers may no longer relax their dramatic standards behind the protective screen of language incomprehensibility.

"In our scheme of things it seemed even more important on the other hand that the language of performance be native to the singer than it be native to the audience," Mr. Goldovsky explains. "For one could not expect the performer to act convincingly or to realize the subtle nuances of the musical dialogue in a tongue which he had learned by phonetic role and with which he had only a superficial acquaintance."

The Goldovsky Opera Theatre's translations are specially prepared for the Company. These strive not for literal renderings but for English phrases that will sound in performance as if the composer had actually written the music to fit the new English words.

Boris Goldovsky points out, "No one has summed up the central idea of the plot of this opera better than Victor Hugo himself." This masterpiece is the story of the court jester to the Duke of Mantua, whose only purpose in life is to protect his daughter, Gilda, from the intrigues of the court. Rigoletto is portrayed as a cripple, an ill man, and at the same time the court jester—a triple misfortune which makes him bitter and wicked. He hates the Duke because he is a nobleman and the courtiers because they are courtiers. Also, he hates all men because they are not crippled. He takes much pleasure in causing as much unhappiness at the court as he possibly can, encouraging the Duke to seduce the wives and daughter of the nobles.

Rigoletto hides Gilda from everyone, keeping her well protected in the midst of the depravity and debauchery of Mantua. Now, the Duke, whom Rigoletto had encouraged in his lowest instincts, the very man who seduces Rigoletto's daughter. When, to avenge this deed Rigoletto plots to murder the Duke, it is Gilda who loses her life instead.

Students Survey M'burg Minority

Two Juniata College students from Dr. Duane F. Stroman's Racial and Cultural Minorities course are conducting a survey in McConnellsburg to determine the status of a racial minority in a non-integrated community. Robert Stump, Lloyd Maxon, George von Hacht, Jean Whitman, and Richard Foltz will also be working in cooperation with the Federal Economics Opportunity Program in administering a Household Interview Survey in the community to provide pertinent information.

An immediate area of interest is a small community of more than 80 Negroes living just outside of McConnellsburg in a section ignored by the townspeople, known as "The Ridge." Twelve households, living mostly in two or three room shacks, exist on relief payments. Less than 15 of the inhabitants have part or full-time employment. Until two years ago the community had no running water, but is now almost completely served by three outside faucets. The water supply is at the moment being investigated by the State.

Other Juniata students, working with Father Wolf, a McConnellsburg priest, and Mr. Gerald Witt, assistant director of the government's Economic Opportunity Program in the tri-county area, have become interested in the welfare of the community. Students have attended meetings of "Ridge" residents where the needs of the settlement have so far been expressed in terms of better housing, jobs, recreational facilities, and educational aid.

Accordingly, a tutoring program for grade and high school children has been established on Saturday afternoons. At the last session, more than 15 children were on hand. Volunteers for this program are needed. Those interested in such a project should contact Rick Foltz, tutoring program co-ordinator.

Seniors Complete Student Teaching In Area Schools

Twelve Juniata seniors returned to campus last Friday afternoon having concluded eight weeks of student teaching. These students gained actual teaching experience in secondary schools throughout the surrounding area.

The students will spend the remaining part of their professional semester attending specially prescribed courses in education. These courses include Audio-Visual Education, Teaching of Reading, and Principles and Techniques of Education.

Judy Muir, a 1966 Juniata graduate, was also involved in the program as an on-the-job student teacher. Although actually doing her required student teaching, she was also filling a teaching position at Juniata Valley High School and will continue teaching there for the rest of the year.

The other student teachers who have completed their teaching assignments are Sandy Andoniades, Marilyn Deane, and Bob Pascale at Huntingdon Area High School; Trudy Grose and Carole Heisey at Mt. Union High School; Darla Houseman and Marcia Highhouse at Keith Junior High School, Altoona; Christine Bailey and Sharon Morges at Tyrone Area High School; and Bobbie Edwards, Carolyn Smiley, and Jean Wermuth at Hollidaysburg Area High School.

On various Wednesdays throughout the rest of the semester, small groups of the student teachers will be visiting the high schools as part of their course in Principles and Techniques of Education.

Utts Relates Chair's Duties

Marty Utts

"I think my responsibilities are to take care of all college social functions."

Marty Utts, a senior sociology major, related her responsibilities as Social Chairman and the functions of the Social Committee itself. The committee's responsibilities are limited to the Saturday night dances, the Friday and Saturday night movies in Oller Hall, and the Wednesday night dances. To many students these activities may seem trivial, but Marty explained that there is more work involved than it seems.

The Wednesday night dances present their share of problems. Previously these dances were a big tradition and were well attended. 1948 marked the onset of dancing at Juniata College with the form being dancing after dinner. Marty related the official policy concerning dancing. "We were to remember that dancing is a privilege and not a right." Plans call for the traditional Wednesday night dances to be quietly discontinued unless there is student opposition.

Needless to say, various steps must be taken to improve the social life especially in relation to the Saturday Classes question. One idea involves the encouragement of clubs to initiate activities that would attract not only the club members, but also special interest groups. An illustration of this idea was the recently held French Night at the Coffee House. Clubs should definitely be encouraged to take charge of weekend activities.

Marty stated that the social functions must include more students to make the social life more enjoyable. She said, "The college is expanding and the only way we can have a good social life is for the clubs to take the initiative. I think we have the basic fundamental social structure with movies and dances. They should appeal to the kids. But we need more."

Marty attributes her lack of opposition in her election as Social Chairman to politics. She said, "It was just that no one would run against me."

Jim Laskaris, last year's chairman, initiated quite a few improvements for a revolution in Juniata's social life. He greatly increased the budget and stressed the importance of Saturday night dances.

Jim backed Marty for the chairmanship and requested that no one run against her.

Even the Saturday night dances have presented their share of problems. Because there is no admission charge for the dances, the allotted funds limit the choice of bands. $100.00 per band per night does not attract the best ones. Therefore, starting December 10th, the college will be an admission charge for non-college students.

The Social Activities Committee is in charge of securing big name entertainment for the big weekends, i.e. the bands for both the Friday night dance and the Homecoming Dance this past Homecoming Weekend. The Friday night dance before the Midwinter Formal will feature "The Pair Extraordinaire," a jazz-folk pair consisting of a bass player and a singer. They have appeared on television with Merv Griffin.

Marty stated that every week little things can go wrong. This can be exemplified by the recent last minute Saturday night band cancellation. She said, "It's hard to have complete control with little things."

Students are expected to have criticisms concerning the social events. Marty said, "Students don't come to me with criticism." It cannot be overemphasized that it would be very helpful if they would criticize openly. Usually Marty hears of criticisms through the grapevine.

Marty said, "As far as reorganization, which is probably the biggest issue this year, it's definitely time that we reorganize." Marty, instrumental in the group that advocates strong control for the new Senate, is in favor of an Executive Committee or Senate on top with control over every student organization. She stated, "I'm in favor of a student Senate that would be a leader of students rather than a weaker one that would not have as much influence."

Marty summarized, "I think that probably the biggest thing is that Juniata is growing. We have lots of new administrative positions on the staff and we have not learned how to work with them for a really effective social life. I think, in a few years, if we work with them instead of fighting with them and orient them to Juniata's needs, together we could do a lot."

Juniata Football Team Ends Season 4-4

Tricaptains Bo Berlanda (33), Gary Sheppard (14), and Ron Shaw lead the spirited Tribe in their game with Gettysburg. JC's try for an upset bid was spoiled by a G-burg 4th quarter rally, who won 33-21.

This was a familiar sight during the course of the year at JC games. Sophomore QB, Don Weiss broke 12 passing and total offense records. (see page 6 for list)

Larry Bieber (26), with Gary Sheppard (14) holding, puts another PAT through the uprights. This one came in the Lycoming game which JC won 47-16. Bieber also broke several kicking records. (see page 5 for list)

Dennis Albright gets ready to snag another Weiss pass. Albright led all JC receivers with 17 receptions for 427 yards.

JC Downs Moravian To End .500 Season

Bo Berlanda (33) reels off some yardage against Moravian. Berlanda had a good day for himself with 120 net yards rushing and 39 yards on 2 pass receptions. It was a "good" day for JC also as the Indians downed the Greyhounds 30-22.

Last Saturday the Juniata Indians ended their season on a winning note by defeating the Moravian Greyhounds 30-22. Our Indians thrilled a capacity Homecoming crowd at College Field with two last period touchdowns that iced the game and evened their 1966 record at 4 wins and 4 losses. Coach Fred Prender's squad rebounded from two consecutive defeats by Wilkes and Gettysburg to make the victory over the Greyhounds a memorable one for six seniors who have seen their last football action at J.C.

The victory also shattered the "jinx" quarter jinx that has plagued Juniata all year. In three of the Indians' four losses, they have entered the fourth period leading; only to lose both the lead and the game. But on Saturday it was a different story. After enjoying a 17-14 halftime lead, the Indians showed signs of tiring as they were held scoreless in the third period. But, in the fourth period the team came to life. Don Weiss directed two scoring drives that clinched the game. Both TD's were on 13-yard drives by Weiss and fullback Bo Berlanda.

Berlanda, senior fullback from Upper Merland, Pa., enjoyed his best day as a runner as he ran 20 times for 120 yards, caught 2 passes for 38 yards, and scored twice. This game capped an impressive season for tri-captain Berlanda. It gave him close to 400 total yards rushing and showed what kind of a job he could do if given the chance to run the ball.

Berlanda and the rest of the Indians caught fire early in the fourth period, just when it seemed that Moravian would march in for a score. After a series of 15-yard penalties (one on Coach Fred Prender) forced Juniata into a punting situation, the Greyhounds wound up with the ball inside the J.C. 50-yard line. This is where our defense really took command. Playing inspired ball, our big defensive rush of Nat Mitchell, Dick Stoutland, Dave Fleck, and Ron Favinger forced the Greyhounds to fumble on the Juniata 39-yard line. Ron Favinger came up with the loose ball and our offense started rolling.

Quickly Don Weiss hit Berlanda with a 35-yard pass to put the ball deep into Moravian territory. After several plunges into the line by Berlanda, Weiss dove over from the one for the score. Larry Beiber kicked the extra point and the Indians were ahead 4-14. Still wanting more, the Indian offense, led by Berlanda, went 7-yards for 5 plays, so score when they got the ball again. This time Bo plunged over from one yard out to get the six points.

Moravian scored on a 17-yard pass from quarterback Grey Seifert as the game drew to a close. But it was too little too late as Juniata held onto their 30-22 lead to win.

The first half was a different story as both teams scrambled to 2 touchdowns apiece. Only a 40-yard field goal by Beiber, as the half ended, was the slim margin for the Indians. Juniata scored first as Don Weiss hit Steve Horner on a 31-yard TD pass with less than 5 minutes gone in the game. Again, it was Berlanda who drove out the yardage when it counted. However, early in the second period Moravian bounced back with a 94-yard drive to tie the score at 7-7. The scoring play came as Moravian's star fullback Hank Nehilla crossed over from the one yard line.

The Indians rebounded back into the lead on Berlanda's three yard run. Moravian continued the topsyturvy first half by scoring on a 76-yard pass from Jim Dietz to Eltringham. Again the score was tied — this time at 14-14. The half ended with Beiber's field goal and Juniata's two TD's in the fourth quarter finished the Greyhounds.

Juniata's Don Weiss finished the afternoon with 9 of 14 completions for 126 yards and an additional 50 yards rushing. This sophomore sensation stands a good chance of breaking many records during his football career at J.C. and he will be a big factor in our offense next year.

Head Basketball coach Russ Trimmer unleashed his revived Indian squad against the Gettysburg Bullets in a scrimmage last week. The Indians looked tough with everyone hustling, especially on defense.

Trimmer opened the game with a starting five of Jim Doyle, Will Brandeau, Bob Chandler, John Tussey and Tom Dettore. Also seeing a lot of action were Dale Broadwater, Jim Bello, Ed Herrick, and Russ MacIsaac. In addition to these over-performers, three freshmen played: Marty Arnold, Bruce Bader and Adam Barnhart.

Cross country coach Mike Snider will be taking seven runners with him to the MAC championships at Fairmount Park, Philadelphia the 18th. Those who will be going are: senior, Tom Creighton; junior Jim Massingham; sophomores, Rick Beard and Phil Sipling; and freshmen, Aubrey Shenk, Kerry Stanley and John Snyder.

The five mile course at Fairmount is described as rough and hilly. It will be the toughest course the JC barriers have faced this year excluding the atrocious seven mile Lock Haven course.

The cross country team held an intrasquad meet and also voted for next year's captain. Sophomore Rick Beard was chosen by his teammates to lead them through their 1967 campaign. The results of the intrasquad meet showed Joe Rizzotti, first; John Snyder, second; and Rick Beard, third. The race was a handicap affair with the runner with the highest average time leaving first, followed by the next highest and so forth. Beard broke his own record for the course by 9 seconds.

In last Saturday's contest with Moravian, several Indians were running out of their shoes. Bo Berlanda, who had one of the best days of his career with 10 yards rushing and 2 pass receptions for 39 yards, frequently lost his shoes. Don Weiss ran about 100 yards laterally and 50 yards downfield without one shoe for half of that distance. Unfortunately the run was nullified by a penalty.

Berlanda was named to the ECAC weekly team as first team fullback. He had been nominated three times before. Ron Favinger and Dave Fleck received nominations this week. Both Fleck and Favinger have received 4 nominations.

For those dedicated football fans who are looking hopefully into the future, the 1967 schedule has been released. Only 7 games have been scheduled and JC has an open date on October 28 which Coach Prender is trying to fill. The schedule is as follows: September 3, Westminster, home; September 30, Albright, away; October 7, Lebanon Valley, away; October 14, Geneva, home; October 21, Lycoming, away; November 4, Susquehanna, home; and November 11, Paul Pesty who spent the 1961-62 year at Juniata was an alternate on the U.S. modern pentathlon team which competed for the world pentathlon championship in Melbourne, Australia.

Anyone ever hear of Harry Schiefelstein? No... well, he has the largest collection of official football programs in the east. His collection totals over 17,000 programs and JC football programs are part of his collection.

Juniata College — Huntingdon, Pa. 16652

Campus Christmas Season Officially Opens As Student Holiday Activities Begin

The Christmas spirit has invaded Juniata College as many busy students are hurriedly preparing for the Christmas holiday. In addition to the individual room decorations the Christmas spirit is being reflected by various campus activities.

The main activities involve the class decorations. The freshmen will be decorating Oller Hall; the sophomores, Founder's Porch; the juniors, inside of Tote; the seniors, outside of Alumni Hall. The winners of the class decorations will be announced during halftime at December 10th's basketball game.

The Christmas banquet and dance are scheduled for December 3rd.

The sophomore class is taking charge of arrangements for the dance, the theme of which is "Merry Olde England." Kathy Wiggins, chairman of the Decoration Committee, noted that the mezzanine of Memorial Gymnasium will not be used. The side entrance of the gym will be the main entrance for the dance. In complying with the theme the couples will enter the big hall of a castle. Lanterns, a Christmas tree, a fireplace, and a mural of carolers will add holiday spirit to the theme.

Kathy added that help will be greatly appreciated Friday evening at 6:00 and Saturday, the days scheduled for decorating.

On December 11 in Memorial Gymnasium, PSEA will sponsor its annual Kids' Christmas party, complete with refreshments, Santa Claus, games, and presents. The party will begin at 2:00 p.m. 150 kids will be the honored guests with two students serving as hosts for one child. Anyone interested in helping to make someone's Christmas a little merrier should sign up in Tote.

A Christmas Story Reading and Carol Sing will take place on December 11 at 8:00 p.m. in South Lounge. Dr. Doyle will read "The Christmas Carol." Mrs. Faust will be pianist for the carol singing. The evening will be complete with refreshments afterwards.

On December 15th and 16th the Department of Music will sponsor "Aman and the Night Visitors," a one-act opera written by Gian-Carlo Menotti. Many people have been preparing to make this presentation an unforgettable experience. The main participants are: King Kasper, John Batchelor; King Melchior, Tom Conrad; King Balthazar, Dave Gould; The Page, Richard Stahl; Amahl, Susan Loose; Mother, Marjorie Hirsch.

The Juniata College Concert Choir members constitute the Shepherds Chorus. The Shepherd Dancers are Kirstin Miller, Bill Brubaker, and Kay Steele. The orchestra consists of members of the Altoona Symphony Orchestra and JC students. The opera is staged by Dr. Esther M. Doyle and directed by Professor Bruce Hirsch.

One is able to see the overactive imagination at work in the mind of the young boy Amahl, crippled since birth. This imagination is certainly present in today's children's minds upon their anticipation of the Christmas season with their imaginations of Santa Claus and all the excitement of the season.

The high dramatic point begins when Amahl's mother cannot understand why the three kings are taking gold to a child they have not seen. She compares the attributes of the Christ Child to her own son: He was born poor into a cruel world.

When she steals the gold Amahl helps her by telling the kings that he is the one who lies and steals; his mother is good.

The gold is returned and Amahl wants to give his only gift—his crutch. A miracle occurs; Amahl walks. Amahl's wish to personally present his crutch to the Child is granted.

Opera Comes to JC Tonight As 'Rigoletto' is Presented

Verdi's memorable opera masterpiece Rigoletto will be presented tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Oller Hall by the Goldovsky Opera Theatre during its twentieth gala anniversary tour.

Of the many great operas which Giuseppe Verdi wrote, Rigoletto remains one of the most popular and has become a staple in opera houses all over the world since its premiere in Venice in 1851.

Rigoletto marked a turning point in Verdi's career; with it he began a new creative period. Prior to this opera the earlier works of the composer served as the apprentice works of a master, but following Rigoletto he produced a series that included the most extensively performed and best loved Italian operas of all time.

In addition to Rigoletto, Il Trovatore, La Forza del Destino, Don Carlos, and Aida were written during this period of creativity. What distinguished these operas was not only their exceptional lyricism, but their pronounced dramatic quality. Verdi was an artist who knew the theatre and knew how to meet its demands through music, characterization, climax, and at times, a profound humanity.

An analysis of the plot of Rigoletto has been provided for the Juniata Focus series by Boris Goldovsky, the Artistic Director for the forthcoming presentation of the opera here, whose trenchant commentaries on operatic trends and source materials was a familiar feature of the weekly Saturday matinee network broadcasts from New York's Metropolitan Opera House.

"No one has summed up the central idea of the plot of this opera better than Victor Hugo himself," Mr. Goldovsky points out. "The author of the play on which Verdi's opera is based describes Rigoletto as a cripple, an ill man, and at the same time the court jester—a triple misfortune which makes him bitter and wicked."

Since the premiere of Rigoletto in Venice in 1851, this opera has become world-popular, and it marked the first of Verdi's operas to become part of the permanent repertoire of opera houses all over the world. When it is presented here in English, it will be given a production rich in brilliant costumes, scenery and vocalism.

The performance is open to the public.

Rowe's Play To Be Discovery Production

The Discovery Theatre at Juniata College will present its first original dramatic production December 8 and 9 at 8:15 p.m. in Women's Gym. The two-act drama, Carmen Among The Trees, was written by senior Gary Rowe. Rowe is also directing the production which will be performed in an "arena" theatre setting.

The cast of Carmen Among The Trees includes: Paul Hower, Phil Green, Barbara Rowe, Rich Buchman, Pat Simes, Robert Fryinger, and Douglas Quick. The stage design is being done by Roy Heinz, lighting by Robert Stump, make-up by Lynne Zurzolo, with costume supervision by Sue Rittenhouse and properties supervision by Mary Ellen Frank.

The two-act drama will run approximately ninety minutes in performance. The play contains elements of the "new theatre" in its dramatic format. It dis-establishes elements more traditional of "imitation" theatre in the way that the questions of space and time are handled, thereby more strongly emphasizing the emotional impact of the dramatic action. Elements of classical drama are also used, particularly in the chorus-like lines that build the emotion to a dramatic climax in the final sequence of the play.

Focus Exhibit Features Maine Artists

The orange packing crates carefully lettered, Fragile—Works of Art, in the normally empty area of Shoemaker Galleries had come from Missouri and are scheduled to leave here in a few weeks for another school. Heavy by 2703 pounds, when filled, they contained paintings, water colors and sculptures that make up the newly opened Focus exhibit—Maine: 50 Artists of the 20th Century. Urban blight may be destroying much of the United States, but this exhibition is an artistic homage to an unspoiled part of the country.

Forty five works of art by painters and sculptors who have lived and worked in Maine comprise the exhibition which is being circulated throughout the nation under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts.

Assembled at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, by Christopher Huntington, formerly Museum Curator, the exhibition includes both prominent artists universally recognized, and lesser known figures who have worked closely with Maine subjects.

Maine's landscape is depicted by such artists as Rockwell Kent, Walt Kuhn, John Marin, Henry Varnum Poor, Fairfield Porter and Andrew Wyeth. Among figure and still life paintings are examples by John Heller, Philip Jamison and John Laurient. Robert Laurent and William Muir are represented, each with one sculpture.

Mr. Huntington comments in the catalog, "Each artist who has come to Maine has written an individual page in the unequalled story of the art of a region in America—the unaffected land and sea of Maine."

As he began the gallery, Steven A. Barbash, associate professor of art here, commented that this particular exhibit contains more well known painters than any ever shown at Juniata. Covering the 50 most active years in American painting, these "history book type" artists have each caught and recorded an impression of Maine. While none of the works may be considered typical of the latest art trends, they form a good representation of what has been and continues to be quite popular.

As with all the exhibits that must be fitted on the walls of Shoemaker, Barbash was forced to eliminate pictures for which no space remained. Future plans call for partitions to provide additional hanging surface, but at present, choices have to be made about what is truly representative and should take precedence.

Co-ordinating over 40 paintings that were never meant to hang together brings problems of how to make them "cohabitate" so that the strong will not overpower the weak, if the visual elements in one detract from those of another. The result, an enjoyable New England excursion, is open to the public Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 12 noon and 2 to 5 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.

Gift Horse Becomes A White Elephant

by Dick Mohler

Last November, Juniata College was given, without cost, the J. C. Blair Building, an industrial complex consisting of seven units in downtown Huntingdon. This property is still in the possession of the college, and up to the present time, the Administration's plans for the property have been rather obscure. Since there seems to be considerable monetary value involved, Mr. Fike, Vice-President of Financial Affairs, in a recent interview, outlined the Administration's plans for this property.

Mr. Fike has estimated the value of the buildings from $150,000 to $200,000. Presently, this property provides the college with an income of $25,000 a year in rent from the Owens-Corning Fiberglass Company. However, approximately $25,000 a year is required to heat and maintain the buildings; thus, at this time, the college is neither making a profit nor losing money on them.

"It is unfortunate," Mr. Fike pointed out, "that this balance is only effective for several years." After this, the cost of maintenance will increase since major repairs would be necessary to keep the building in running order. Thus, the aspect of renting the J. C. Blair Building indefinitely would be unprofitable.

The other possible choice is to sell the property. Mr. Fike stated that "we are ready, willing and able to sell—if the offer comes along tomorrow." This seems to be the trouble: no one wants to buy a "white elephant"—no matter what the price. Ranging in size from four to eight stories, the buildings present a bad investment to most industries who perform one-story complexes which greatly reduce internal transportation costs.

Perhaps, the adage "never look a gift horse in the mouth" is applicable here.

Fireball Faus, Champion of last year's tricycle race came out victorious again over his competitors in this year's heat. The race was featured as the main event at the JWSF Country Fair which culminated the activities of the fund raising drive. Will Fireball hold his championship perennially? We'll wait 'til next years race to find out.

Women Can't Win

College women live in a dream world, says the Daily Texan, University of Texas. For four years they are equal to men. They compete with them for grades, for honors, for recognition. They can even become student body presidents or newspaper editors.

Many women graduate expecting to find careers in which they can use their education, where they can be "fulfilled." "Me? A mere housewife? Never!" they say disdainfully. Most will find that while their understanding of Eliot and Tennyson and Kierkegaard may make life infinitely richer, it may not make them materially as well off as a few courses in shorthand and typing.

A lucky few will snare positions in which they can make good use of their education and intelligence. We are warned, however, that careers may not be as attractive in the flesh as they seem in one's imagination. Of course, many men, too, are subject to post-graduate disappointment.

Still, more men are successful than women. Some persons still insist that women simply are not as intellectually agile as men. That's why there have been no female Tolstoy's or Beethoven's or Nietzsche's, they argue. They haven't been any Negro Beethovens either, but that doesn't mean there won't be.

On the other hand, we were told during childhood that if one can touch her left elbow with her left hand, she will change sexes. Now let's see...

Don't Let Yourself Down

Has that heated policy-morality controversy witnessed just prior to Thanksgiving recess experienced a quick, quiet death? No longer, it seems, is every student tongue wagging over the "biggest thing to hit this campus in years." Vacation apparently sent administration and students back to their respective corners to cool off during a complacent, calming holiday.

So who cares now? While most of the student body seems to have become bored with the whole issue, having already had its foot stomping fling in a hasty, beligerent, (but not completely illegitimate) assertion of independence, a too small group of individuals are involved in SCOPE (see Comment, this page) born of the Senate and being nursed by some conscientious and sincere Student Leaders.

Wonderful! But where are the followers? Once again we expect that the student body will let down the student body. Juniata has a multitude of complainers, sometimes with rather decent gripes, enough thinkers, but just too few doers who, as a matter of fact, do just about everything. This inaction is only the most recent example of a case where universal concern, even though at first just a bit irrational (which gave it all that beautiful fire), has dwindled, only to be the latest issue to be added to the Juniata Gripe List.

SCOPE comes out of a mature outlook on the problem, is under mature leadership, and can and should have mature and far-reaching results. However, only if the whole student body is aware of, desires, and takes an active interest in what SCOPE is for, can anything be done. The students have to (and should, we feel) give it their whole-hearted support, actively and immediately.

The question is, will they? We bet, reluctantly because we'd love to have total faith in the students, that when the time comes for SCOPE's next meeting, most everybody will find some excuse (probably academic—that's always the good one) for not taking any active interest. It is tragic to note that when interest is lost, for example, this adamant interest in the rights question that developed two weeks ago, soon also to be lost will be the right to complain.

But then again, would it make any difference? Perhaps this is "what's wrong with Juniata."

Comment . . .

The Morning After

Signs no longer line the walks. Christmas decorations have taken their place. Yet, student response to administrative policy is far from dormant.

SCOPE, Student Committee on Policy Evaluation, resulted from creative thinking of students during a time of stress. Now, after the wave of anger has subsided, the core of frustration remains.

SCOPE was designed by the Senate to evaluate these frustrating policies concerning student conduct on or off campus, and then act, action to create a policy based on student freedom governed by student responsibility. Such goals encompass an area as far reaching as the committee's name, yet SCOPE offers an effective answer. Ably co-chaired by Dave Gould and Paul Morse, the committee seeks to consider policy objectively, to stand apart, and yet represent student thought on the issue. Obviously, college officials need reminded of present student opinion.

SCOPE will actively formulate policy. Implicit in discussion lies the assumption that students are individuals and citizens. College is not meant to be merely a four year endurance run, but a time for growth in self-government and self-expression. Juniata College is not, primarily, a name or an institutional image of prestige; the college is a community of individuals. Action must begin with the individual, his position as student, his status a citizen.

Symbolically, SCOPE met off-campus in the coffee-house Tuesday evening to develop a statement of purpose and machinery to implement those goals. The ad hoc committee's discussion is open to all interested individuals. Frequent meetings at least once a week, point toward a systematic examination and thoughtful proposal for future policy. As one senior commented, "Change will come. The key is persistence." True to its mood of creativity and refusal to blindly accept established policy, SCOPE will reconvene Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Tussey Lounge (recently opened to women students on weekends.) Students are urged to attend—the future is theirs. (See editorial, this page.)

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

Frequently the faculty hears complaints from students that since you chose a small college in order to have more contact with the faculty, you are disappointed that the opportunities do not occur. Do you really want them? On several occasions I have invited students to my home for coffee and chat, for a TV performance and refreshments, for afternoon tea, for strawberry shortcake, for supper, even, and have found myself with an overabundance of food and far fewer guests than I had prepared for. Let me quote a few figures: (1) 45 invited, 4 appeared; (2) same 45 invited again; 5 appeared; (3) 14 invited, 1 appeared. I tried personal written invitations. (1) 17 invited to afternoon tea; 3 sent regrets so I prepared food for 14; 3 appeared. (2) 9 invited to supper; 2 sent regrets so I prepared for 7; 4 appeared. I began to feel I was not wanted! Now I find it is not only I. The other evening, I was asked by a new professor on campus to drop in after Phaedra in order to meet some of his students. He had invited four classes totalling more than 80 students. The table was filled with good things to eat that his wife had taken time and trouble to prepare that day, enough for all who might come. Four students came.

Are you really interested in meeting your professors socially, seeing how they live, talking on subjects other than those we discuss in the classroom? Are you so busy that you can't take a half-hour break to accept courteously an invitation courteously given? Or send your regrets so that you won't be prepared for? This is a situation that has long puzzled me. One reason we faculty members teach in a small college is the same one you give for coming here—we want to know you. Do you really mean what you say? We do—else we wouldn't invite you.

Sincerely,
Esther M. Doyle

Hours Victimize Coeds

(ACP)—Coeds living in dormitories have long been victims of an hours policy which treats them as immature children who cannot be expected to use their time responsibly, comments the University of Minnesota Daily.

They are denied the rights of coeds living off campus and working girls in this age group to do whatever they wish with their time. The Daily continues:

In all fairness to the administration and to Dean of Students E. G. Williamson it must be pointed out that women's hours at the University of Minnesota are more liberal than at most large universities and certainly more liberal than at most smaller private colleges.

And the trend at the university is toward even less restrictive rules. 1960 there have been no restrictions on women over 21 and recently Williamson approved a policy granting junior and senior women in three dormitories permission to regulate their own hours.

But the "stifling paternalism" (a phrase coined by Williamson) of the university toward women dormitory residents will not cease until all women's hours are abolished.

There is no evidence indicating that coeds will suddenly become irresponsible if they are granted freedom. At Comstock Hall, for example, junior and senior women use the no-hours policy an average of only twice a month.

And current policies, ironically enough, do not prevent a girl from staying out late if she really wants to. Instead of returning late and risking a penalty, she simply stays out all night.

University officials are worried about public reaction to a no-hours policy, especially if it is granted to freshmen. The public is "not quite ready for the shock" of giving total freedom to freshmen, Williamson said last year. "There's still a little protectiveness in our culture."

Yes, there might be some adverse public reaction if all women's hours are eliminated, but hardly as much as administrators fear. The public has shown itself to be remarkably tolerant in other controversial matters. Besides, the university should take the lead in correcting society's weaknesses—overprotectiveness certainly is a weakness—and educate the public on them. We hope the administration will seriously consider the abolition of women's hours this year.

'Round Campus

Several sophomore girls discovered the hard way that a car doesn't always get you where you're going fast. Upon setting out for the "Hole" at 9:30 and arriving there at 9:55, the girls have a word of advice to offer: One often has more success in starting a stalled auto or pushing the car into the street when the emergency brake has been released.

Frederick Nagle, Jr., assistant professor of geology obtained his Ph.D. degree in Geology from Princeton University by passing his final dissertation on the subject of "The subject of his thesis was 'Geology of Puerto Plata Area, Dominican Republic.'" Dr. Nagle earned his B.A. from Lafayette College in 1958 and his M.A. from Princeton University in 1961.

While being generous in donating all their pennies to the Penny Mile and taking the "Grand Prix" of a free late, the girls in N.J. House, Commons House, and Faculty Club exhibited their ingenuity in using this bonus late. Following the Country Fair they set up a record player, radio, and guitar on Oller Lawn for a "swingin'" party from 12 to 1 a.m. with cider and donuts as refreshments.

With Christmas fast approaching, many will be awaiting a visit from that round, jolly old fellow, St. Nick. Perhaps this Christmas season will also bring a long desired visit to the library from another friend. But, we must all be good boys and girls, mustn't we, Willie!!

The recent controversy on campus brought many expected reactions from students and faculty. However, one unexpected reaction was the appearance of a little old man in the vicinity of Tote hastily snapping pictures of student signs and posters as fast as they went up. No one seems to know where he came from or to what place he returned.

A lesson in true friendship was observed on third level last week when two roommates accidentally overheard a conversation. One girl and blew a fuse and then let all the blame be placed on their two "lame-o" neighbors with a high voltage desk lamp. To show their concern even more they conveniently reminded the girls next door of the possible results that can occur from using such a dangerous lamp. Every hall needs a pair like these two.

In a third meeting with the Altoona Campus of Penn State, Juniata chess team scored a win 5½ to 1½ victory. Those members of our teams scoring wins were Larry Bieber, Paul Leber, Jim Myers, Darwin Kenep, and Bob Knuth. John Smailer forced a draw against his opponent while Toby Dille was mated by Altoona's John Pettit.

Quite a disturbance arose on third level Monday evening when an unidentified male was caught "pussying" around the halls. Mrs. Brownlee was immediately notified and the intruder was escorted to the exit. Somehow he appeared again on fourth Brumbaugh and caused a further disturbance. He soon learned that mere anger was frowned upon in girls' dorms—even if he is a cat named Sargon.

Class competition is in the air again as the spirit of Christmas descends upon us all, and the various classes set to work decorating the campus for the holiday season. I'm sure the freshmen, sophomores, and juniors aren't going to let the seniors walk off with all the honors this year after their triumph at Homecoming.

A talk entitled "Jurimetrics," the decision making process of small groups of people, was the subject of the lecture by Dr. Herbert Solomon Wednesday evening in the science center. Prior to this lecture, Dr. Solomon spoke on the subject "Random Packing Densities."

Among the many activities in the typical study program of three Juniata College juniors enrolled in the UN Semester at Drew University are spending sessions listening to UN representatives, studying the working of the world organization in action at the UN Secretariat two days a week, and meeting statesmen, diplomats, and politicians from other countries. Mark Faulkner, Joyce Rosenberger, and Paul Baker also carry a normal load of academic courses at Drew University, Madison, New Jersey.

Perhaps the Biology department and the Food Service department are working in collaboration to gather samples for dissection. However, it is not probable that the Biology students will find it easy to work with the small specimens of worms (from noodles) and bugs (from cookies) found recently in the dining room.

Juniata's debate team traveled to Elizabethtown November 18 and 19 for a meet with 20 other schools represented. Accompanied by Dr. Kihl, the varsity team scored 2 wins out of 4 while the freshman novice team A scored 3 wins out of 4 and novice team B achieved 1 win in 4.

Home Ec, Music Departments Experiencing Restriction

Participating in an apparent trend among liberal arts colleges to restrict their course offerings in order to improve the quality of their instruction, Juniata College is realizing the elimination of the home economics department as a field of concentration in Division II and the "phasing out" of the music and home economics sections of the education department of Division II.

On the basis of an extensive study of home economics on the liberal arts campus in which they found that many colleges were abandoning the home economics curriculum, Juniata's Board of Trustees decided to discontinue the home economics department as of 1969, after the graduation of the present sophomore class. Evidently the Trustees had two reasons in mind when making their decision: 1) there are a limited number of persons preparing to teach home economics at the college level, and the number of doctorate degrees conferred nationally in home economics is infinitesimal; 2) the teaching of home economics is becoming more specialized and technical, thus lending itself to the university and large state college level. Although Professor Gertrude L. Butler, chairman of the home ec. department, seemed to think that enrollment was on the way up when the decision was made, President Calvert N. Ellis concluded that "less students are interested in home economics than there used to be." President Ellis emphasized, though, that the department is being given up reluctantly because "some of our finest alumnae are graduates in home economics."

Originated in 1919, Juniata's department of home economics was accredited in 1928 for the preparation of teachers of vocational home economics. The year 1947 saw the department commander as "temporary" quarters a World War II surplus medical unit, which, incidentally, has remained the headquarters of all home economics activities to this day. One home ec. major (there are presently 28) traced the phasing out of the department to the College's unwillingness to "invest the large amount of money which is needed to rejuvenate the department." As concerns the sufficiency of the particular sections of study, she related that "a home economics education major can get an adequate background here, but to specialize in certain sections is simply impossible due to inadequate courses."

With the deletion of the home ec. department three areas of study will be continued in other departments. Courses dealing with child development will be carried over into the psychology department; the present sociology course entitled The Family will cover material referring to such; and consideration is being given to maintaining some instruction in interior decoration, with possible location in the art department.

Courses leading to the B.S. degree in music education will be abandoned after 1967-68 with the exception of Elementary School Music which will most likely be transferred to Elementary Education. Although Juniata will no longer offer the preparation necessary to gain a teaching certificate in music, it is felt that those students who want to teach music, after earning their B.A. in applied music, may take advantage of graduate programs elsewhere which will enable them to be teaching while earning the master's degree necessary for teaching.

Although a music ed. major with a B.S. degree may be able to get a job immediately upon graduation, Assistant Professor Bruce A. Hirsch of the music department pointed out that such students are too often unprepared in their field. He suggested that students should "know their subject rather than be taught how to teach it," i.e. it is preferable that students know "more about music and less about education." According to Mr. Hirsch, an ideal situation would be a department which included music ed. and applied music, although such a possibility is hampered by a lack of students (at present there is one Juniata music ed. major). Students nowadays more often attend a conservatory to obtain their performing degree and then turn elsewhere to meet any necessary music ed. requirements.

Correction

Re the statement in last week's Registration article that "a registration deposit is required of every student planning to register for the spring semester": although such a deposit is required for the fall registration, it is not needed in order to register for the spring term.

Third Texaco Grant Received By College

Juniata College has again been selected as one of the privately-financed colleges in the United States to receive unrestricted grants under the Aid-to-Education Program of Texaco, Inc.

President Calvert N. Ellis announced the grant of $1,500, which was presented by Richard M. Langdon of the Thousand Hills Petroleum Company and the Texaco District Wholesale Sales Supervisor, J. L. Stanley. Awarded for the academic year 1966-67, this is the third such grant received by Juniata from Texaco.

Pres. Ellis announced that the grant will be applied where most needed by the College Board of Trustees.

Placement Aids Seniors

The Senior Placement Service, under the direction of Mr. Robert A. Doyle, is fully prepared to serve senior students. The purpose of the service is to help students find jobs. Mr. Doyle's placement theory is actualized in bringing firms to the campus and in making students aware of available positions and opportunities in their fields of concentration.

For each senior there is an individual placement file, which includes three personal evaluation forms of which two are completed by professors and a third filled out by the student's summer employer. They provide the employer with honest and realistic evaluations of the student.

The service was initiated by Dean Heberling when he came to the campus in 1957. After Dean Heberling accepted the full-time position as Dean of Men, the placement service was organized under Mr. William Martin. In the fall of September 1966, Mr. Doyle assumed the position as Director of Placement and Financial Aid, and thus the service falls under his jurisdiction.

When a senior makes his interview with Mr. Doyle, he is given either an Education Folder or an Industry

Folder, according to his field of concentration. The Education Folder applies to those students who are planning to teach and the Industrial Folder pertains to majors in history, sociology, business, science, etc. The folders include questions the students should ask at a job interview, characteristics which the employer may look for in the student and other helpful information.

The Placement Library in the basement of Students' Hall is well-equipped to aid the seniors. Including brochures from 85 to 90 firms, it offers available information on job opportunities. The library also contains applications for teacher placement in New York, Maryland, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Application forms are sent to the college from these areas as the openings become available. The library is open Monday to Friday 9:00 to 4:00 and Saturday 9:00 to 12:00.

Each senior is given a copy of the College Placement Annual. This book contains a listing of the major employers across the country, with a reference to the Canadian Placement Index. The firms are listed in alphabetical order, including the address of the firm and place to write for application to the director. There is an index by occupation and a third index by geographical area to help seniors find the particular job and location in which they wish to work.

The Placement "season" begins February 1, 1967, and continues to March 22. Having representatives from the firms come to the campus gives the seniors an opportunity to ask questions and become acquainted with opportunities in their fields. Mr. Doyle and his staff are looking forward to a successful season with 40-firms and 10 school districts coming to campus.

JC Movie Features Juliet of the Spirits

A wild, weird trip to the world of the senses awaits those who will see Juliet of the Spirits, Tuesday, the next JC movie night. Without the benefit of psychedelic drugs, Italian director Federico Fellini probed the mind of one Guilietta Masina in her search for peace following discovery of her husband's infidelity.

As Juliet, the real life Senora Fellini communes with spirits who open to her the repressed memories of the past, the sensual delights of the present, and the certainty of the future.

Coming after such successes as La Dolce Vita and 8 1/2, this, Fellini's first full length color feature, has been praised as being the highest expression of cinematographic art and damned as a "stunningly decadent freak show" void of inner meaning.

Winter Sports Teams Open Seasons Away

Basketball Team To Battle F & M

Juniata's basketball team opens the season this Saturday against Franklin and Marshall College at F&M. JC's first home game will be December 7, against Delaware Valley. The Indians will be led by co-captains, senior Jim Doyle and junior John Tussey.

Jim Doyle, 5'11", lettered in basketball his sophomore year, but did not participate last year. He is an excellent ball handler and floor general and plays on-the-ball defense. Doyle's best shoot is a 15 foot jumper.

John Tussey, 5'9", has been a surprise to everyone so far this year. Tussey played little varsity ball last year, but he will be in most of the action this year. Tussey is a 100% hustler and does a good job on defense. In pre-season games this year he has been shooting well also.

Will Brandau, 6'7" junior, will be a likely starter at center. Brandau has been the leading rebounder in pre-season scrimmages and was second in rebounding last year with 151 and an average of 10 a game. He has worked hard on his moves in the pivot and has shown that he wants to play basketball.

Clair Kenyon, 5'11" junior, injured his knee in the first week of practice this season, but is ready to go against F&M tomorrow. Kenyon is one of the better shooters on the team and a good ball handler. Last year Kenyon scored the most points on the team with 231 and a 13.5 average.

Tom Dettore, 6'3" sophomore is one of the best offensive threats on the team. Last year as a freshman he had the best field goal percentage with 42.1 and the best game average with 14.1. Dettore is not always consistent, but he can be as good as he wants to be.

Jim Biello, 5'8" junior, is a 100% hustler. He will see a lot of action this year. Biello is a good ball handler with a good shot from the top of the key. He led the team in free throw percentage with 73.7.

Dale Broadwater, 6' sophomore will be seeing a lot of action this year. He has a good job on defense and a good job on the boards for his size.

Bob Chandler, 6'3" sophomore also will be seeing a lot of action this year. He does a good job on the boards and defensively. Chandler is a good shooter in the key area.

Ed Herrick, 6'2" junior has worked hard this year. He is 100% on attitude and hustle. Herrick has been a definite asset to pre-season work.

Russell MacIsaac, 6'2" junior is a good outside shooter and could be an important asset to the team against zone defenses.

John Stultz, 6'2" sophomore will not be able to play until after Christmas because of a knee injury suffered in football.

In addition to the eleven listed upperclassmen there are three freshmen who are pressuring the starters. These three, Martin Arnold, 6'2"; Bruce Bader, 6'3" and Adam Bernhart, 6'2" have all looked good so far and should see a lot of action during the season.

This Thursday evening a duplicate bridge tournament will be played in Women's Gym at 7:00 sharp. The winners of this tournament will represent Juniata at an Eastern Regional Inter-collegiate Tournament. All bridge players are urged to join in the fun.

Another duplicate bridge tournament was held last week with 4 students and 4 faculty pairs competing. The real battle took place in the East west division as Paul Shaffer and Bob Knuth tied with the Bowers for first with 16 1/2 points, followed closely by Steve Werner and Al Burkett. In the North-South grouping the Berriers showed their mettle by winning with 19 1/2 points. Jack Gilbert and Larry Bieber finished second with 18.

Tom McAuley, a freshman from State College, won the fall tennis tournament in the first all frosh final ever. His final victory came over Carmen Jay Pettie, another freshman who hails from Altoona. In a tournament plagued by bad weather and forfeits, McAuley defeated last year's winner and this year's first seed, John Solis-Cohen, in a hotly contested 3 set semi-final match. Pettie got to the finals by defeating 3rd seeded Al White in a three setter and getting by second seeded Dave Newcomer who had to forfeit due to injuries. This set the stage for the all frosh final which McAuley won with a close 6-4-7-5 score.

I.M. soccer got underway before vacation with a record six teams in the action. Only 4 games were actually played; the others were won by forfeits. A good freshman team, the Water Walkers, led by Mike Regard's total of 7 goals defeated XI Phi Psi 3-1 and the Bums 6-1. But they met their match in the all-Senior Spastics who have won the past three years. Paced by Bieber's 3 goals the Spastics won 5-1. With Stan Miller scoring 3 times the Sewer Rats beat the Bums 6-1. The standings before vacation were: Spastics, 2-0; Barons, 2-0; Water Walkers, 2-1; Sewer Rats, 2-1; Bums, 1-3; XI Phi Psi, 0-4.

Women's IM Basketball To Form

A faculty-staff women's basketball team is being formed to participate in the women's intramural program. Now all that's needed are some teams of women students to make the program operate. It could result in some interesting action. Those interested should see Miss Kopac or Sue Coe.

Grapplers To Participate In Shippensburg Tourney

The Tribes' wrestling team opens up its 1966-67 season December 3 and 4 at a tournament at Shippensburg College. In addition to Shippensburg and JC, West Virginia University and Western Maryland University will participate. The first home meet will be against Washington and Jefferson College December 6. The outlook for the coming season is bright with 9 returning lettermen from last year's 5-5 season.

The grapplers will be led by senior captain Dick Feigles who will be wrestling at 167 pounds this year. Feigles wrestled unlimited last year, winning 6, tying 1 and losing 1. He scored the most points on the team with 26.

Junior lettermen on the team are: Chris Sherk, Phil Eatough, Don Hoover, Lloyd Maxson and Bob Butz. Sherk won the most matches last year with 7 while losing 2. He wrestled at 145, 152 and 160 pounds last year. Eatough finished last season with a 3-3 record in the 177 pound division. Don Hoover wrestled at 160, 167 and 177 pounds and finished with 2 wins, 3 losses and 1 tie. Maxson ended the season with 1 win in the unlimited class. Butz wrestled at 160 and 167 and lost 3 matches.

There sophomores who lettered last year are: Jack Hooper, Ron Hoover, and Jim Pyle. Hooper wrestled at 130 pounds and finished with a 3-6-1 record. Pyle finished 4-5 while wrestling at 160 and 167 pounds.

Five sophomores who did not letter last year but are trying to make the team are: Jim Biggs (123), Clay Moyer (130), Dick Wieler (137), Glenn Wotring (160), and Bob Heisch (UNL).

Nine freshmen are out for the team this season. They are: Dave Brown (130), Mike McCartney (130), Tony Imperoli (137), Tom Light (137), Hank Tujague (137), Ken Michaelson (177), and Peter Schuyler (UNL).

Eliminations for each weight class have been held to decide who is going to Shippensburg this weekend. The wrestlers who will represent JC in ten weight classes are: Jim Biggs (123), Jack Hopper (130), Tom Light (137), Chris Sherk (145), Ron Hoover (152), Jim Pyle (160), Dick Feigles (167), Phil Eatough (177), Lloyd Maxson (191) and Pete Schuyler (UNL).

Denny Albright, junior, tight end from Ephrata, and Regis Schivley, junior center and linebacker from Elizabeth, were selected as co-captains of the 1967 Juniata Indians Football Team. Both are three year letter winners.

Since JC had one of the best offensive teams in the MAC's, they might not have had one of the two best at each position, but surely quite a few would have at least been listed number three.

Maybe this complaint is petty but when handing out honors why should an organization like the MAC or ECAC be stingy in naming only a few of the best and be unfair to the other few who rate some recognition?

It all comes down to a matter of having more categories in both ECAC and MAC. That is having a first and second team defensive and offensive unit and an honorable mention. This is the way many athletic post season honors are distributed and seemingly the fairest way. The more players that receive honors (without making it ridiculous) the happier everyone involved is.

Most of the injustice in the distribution of MAC and ECAC honors can be attributed to the limit these organizations have put on the number of players who receives awards.

For example, the ECAC picks only one team, a sophomore of the year and a kicking specialist. They do not have separate defensive and offensive units, so that this year a linebacker for Wilkes was listed as an ECAC tackle. This is certainly unfair to all of the offensive tackles.

Looking back at the season, it seems unjust that several other Indians were not given the honors they deserved. The Tribe had one of the best offensive teams in the MAC's, yet no one made first team offense.

Two big guys on defense for the Indians were Ron Favinger and Dave Fleck. Both of these boys performed well throughout the year as can be seen by the number of times they were nominated to the ECAC weekly teams. They both received four nominations.

One of the most steady players on the Tribes' squad was tackle Jeff Powers. It amazes most of the people who saw all of JC's games why he did not receive any recognition for his play.

JC Judo Club Hosts Collegiate Tournament

Representatives from five other colleges and universities will be on campus tomorrow to compete in an Invitational Judo Tournament hosted by Juniata College. The schools that will be represented are Princeton University, Columbia University, Stony Brook College, Newark College of Engineering and Cornell University. Each team will consist of eight men of all ranks and weight classes. A total of forty-eight judoists will compete.

The Judo Black Belt Federation is supplying judges for this tournament. These experienced judges, all black belts, will conduct the competition under AAU and JBBF regulations.

Competition will be man-for-man without regard to rank or weight. The matches will last three minutes. In the event of a tie between two teams after all team members have contested, the winning team will be determined by a single contest between a representative selected by each team. Teams will be placed into two pools. This will insure each team of at least three matches. The top team or teams of each pool will compete for the Championship in straight elimination.

This tournament is one of the preliminary matches our club plans to have to prepare them for the Eastern Collegiate Championships, which will include teams from Puerto Rico to Maine, to be held at West Point in March. The Judo Club under the direction of Professor Fisher, now in its third year, last year competed with Cornell University and Penn State. The Club also competed at the Eastern Intercollegiate Judo Association Tournament last spring at Newark, New Jersey, with such teams as West Point, Rutgers University and University of Puerto Rico.

The tournament this Saturday will begin at 12 noon in Memorial Gym. Competition will be exciting and fast moving. The teams will compete to determine the winning team and most outstanding competitor, both of which will receive a trophy.

Juniata will be represented by Leroy Mell, senior; Peter Shaffer, senior; Paul Freeman, freshman and 5 others that have not been named by Professor Fisher.

College Releases General Plans For Summer Study

Juniata College announced plans today for the establishment of an annual summer program of non-western studies and, at the same time, offered all summer classes at a new reduced rate.

"We are particularly anxious," said Dr. Earl C. Kaylor, director of summer sessions, "to make it possible for students to accelerate their education during the summer months and for public school teachers to achieve certification."

Refresher courses for teachers are a necessity, Dr. Kaylor feels, if they are to maintain professional growth. "Juniata is also anxious," he declared, "to meet the urgent need for understanding of the non-western world and in general to provide an education which is both vital and useful."

The new rate for all courses in the two summer sessions will be $30 a credit hour. The first session runs from June 19 to July 21 and the second from July 24 to August 25. The courses are equivalent to those of the regular school terms and a student may earn up to 12 credit hours or more during the summer.

Plans for non-western studies in Chinese and Japanese civilization, are still being formulated. However the history of Japanese and Chinese Art will be offered by Steven A. Barbash, associate professor of art who majored in Oriental Art at Yale University. Extensive use of films, music, and art exhibitions is planned. It is expected that a course in Japanese language will be offered.

Besides the needs of the teachers, Juniata will have a summer program designed to meet the needs of undergraduates eager to complete their college education at the earliest possible date, secondary school students who wish to enter college immediately, and transfer students from other colleges and universities.

Two courses which are basic to the Juniata College curriculum will be offered. They are "Great Epochs of World Culture," a freshman course which examines in depth the works of art and literature of selected epochs, and the senior course "Integration of Art, Knowledge and Conduct" which brings together the various fields of knowledge studied in the educational process.

A full and varied social program is being offered, and the students will live in modern dormitories on campus. Plans are well advanced for the air-conditioning of the L. A. Beeghly Library, and all classes will be held in the air-conditioned Norman Brumbaugh Science Complex.

Chess Team Enters Tourney

The Juniata College Chess Team will hold a match with St. Francis College at Loretto, Pa., Saturday November 10 in the first intercollegiate tournament for the "A" team.

Juniata team members who are making the trip include: Glenn Aston-Reese, Allan Burkett, Paul Shaffer, David Crider, Darwin Kenepp and the advisor Mr. W. C. Fagot, associate professor of mathematics.

The Juniata team is looking forward to a busy season of intercollegiate tournaments.

Rigoletto Succeeds as Operatic Experience

by Dr. Wilfred G. Norris
The souvenir program sold at Rigoletto represents Boris Goldovsky as having at one time despised opera, considering it as the lowest and stupidest form of musical expression. I. Goldovsky many times. The occasion of this review has forced me to analyze my feelings, however, and to become more explicit about the shadowy conceptions I have had.

The fact is, I have seen, I suppose, nearly a dozen operas and have almost always enjoyed them. My negative feelings have been aroused almost invariably by isolated excerpts—the traveling tenor in the local concert who puts in an aria from this or that, with the result that one is unprepared by the development of the plot to appreciate fully the content of the aria, or the radio opera where the total sensory impact is lacking.

Therefore, an opera, for me to enjoy it, must be a sustained, unified experience of music and drama. Anything that detracts musically or dramatically spoils it. From this point of view we can look at the performance of Rigoletto.

As far as the composition of the music is concerned there is very little I shall say. Verdi is not a Beethoven in inspiration nor technique, yet for his purposes the music in Rigoletto is more than just adequate. He fitted the music to the scene in such a way as to enhance the feeling of the scene, yet it was not obtrusively descriptive music. For example, in Gilda's giddy aria following the Duke's departure, her light-heartedness is emphasized by an oboe doubling the melody, a subtle humorous device.

More important for this review is whether the actors performed their musical task well. As far as voices go, the entire cast of principals was of high quality. An apparently universal choice for excellence was Rigoletto as played by Alexander Gray. The Duke and Gilda tied for second and I put Monterone in last place although some of my colleagues siting in another part of Oller Hall placed Monterone higher than I did.

The musical technique cannot be divorced from the dramatic element to judge it properly. Good drama requires good acting and good staging with adequate technical support. The singers were not uniform in their acting. Rigoletto far surpassed the others in creating a real character. Gilda seemed at times merely a pawn in the plot. In spite of a nice voice, she was not strong in her support of the development of the story. The Duke also showed little imagination in his acting, using for the most part stereotyped gestures.

The staging was potentially very good but was ruined by poor technical support. In particular the lighting was what one would expect of a professional company. The folly of reliance almost exclusively on the ceiling spots was shown immediately in the first act when the Duke mounted the throne and was beheaded by the darkness. As the soul poured forth from the shadowy heights, the body below went through its hand waving.

Finally, if music and drama are of equal importance then we should understand the development of the plot. Mr. Goldovsky apparently believed that understanding is essential for he translated the next into English. Yet not all his singers carried through his ideas. Gold stars go to Rigoletto, for hardly a word was lost. Even the Duke after Act I where he was warming up was understandable in the remainder of the performance. Sparafucile and Maddalena came through clearly. Monterone was mushy. But Gilda in many places could well have sung in Italian. I had to use my dollar program at least a dozen times with her to find out what was going on.

In spite of these shortcomings I still felt that the few dollars per seat required to bring the opera was well spent. Rigoletto said afterwards that the audience was responsive and appreciative. I am sure that only a few can say they were not entertained, or moved to sympathy, or if this was a first opera, that they learned nothing.

Music Dept. To Present Amahl Opera

Singing opera under the baton of her husband is nothing new to Margorie Hirsch, nor was she surprised when he tells her to act meager and scold more. It's all part of the role in Amahl and the Night Visitors.

The Juniata College Department of Music is presenting the one-act opera, Thursday and Friday, December 15 and 16 in Oller Hall, 8:15 p.m. The 45 member Juniata Concert Choir will be assisted by a 22 member orchestra. The public is invited.

Amahl will be sung by Susan Loose, King Kaspar is John Batchelor, King Melchior is Thomas Conrad, King Balthazar is David Gould, and the Page is Richard Stahl.

Conducted by Bruce A. Hirsch, assistant professor of music, the show is being staged by Dr. Esther Doyle, professor of English and the choreography is directed by Kathleen Miller.

As Amahl's mother in the popular Gian Carlo Menotti opera, Mrs. Hirsch will be relying on her experiences in community theatre and her opera training at the University of Southern California.

"Amahl's mother is an interesting role," she says of her assignment, and she quickly points out that since the part is entirely singing, it is operatic. This calls on musical and dramatic talents to portray the somewhat mean woman who scolds and, at the same time, deeply loves her crippled boy.

"You have to think of the role from the point of view of Amahl—see the mother through the boy's eyes," Mrs. Hirsch says, and she goes to agree with Tony Randall, the movie actor, that the greatest dramatic experiences are found in opera where music, drama and theatre "can't be beat."

Her own experiences include opera workshop in California where she sang in Verdi's Macbeth, in Stravinsky's Rites of Spring, and in Briga-doon with Long Beach Civic Light Opera.

Mrs. Hirsch is not the only performer who is not an undergraduate at the college. Charles Redenberger, concert master of the Altoona Symphony Orchestra and a Juniata alumnus, will play in the orchestra as will Marco Branda, principal cellist of the Johnstown Symphony Orchestra.

Amahl, which was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company, was first televised on Christmas Eve in 1951, and has been presented each Christmas since. Prof. Hirsch points out that the live version is more dramatic since there are more people on stage and the action moves more freely.

Convocation

Next Wednesday's convocation will feature The Reverend Douglas A. Lund, Administrative Assistant at the San Francisco Theological Seminary, speaking on "Christmas 1966: Season For All Men."

Students are also reminded that only the Thursday night presentation of "Amahl and the Night Visitors" will count as convocation credit.

'Round Campus

All those that missed the Discovery program's "Carmenita Among the Trees" last night will have an opportunity to see it again tonight. The play, an original, written and directed by Gary Rowe, will be presented in the Women's Gym at 8:15.

An interesting lesson on how to get along well with your neighbor can be learned from an example given in one psychology class last week using chickens as subjects. It seems that, around the chicken yard, one hen is the big boss while another hen is at the opposite end of the ladder, with the others falling somewhere in between. This "pecking order," as it is called, helps us to see the depth of the chicken's mind in realizing that not everyone can be a leader.

In keeping with the theme "Merry Olde England," the honored guest at the Christmas dance was none other than William Shakespeare himself. Now the library is running smoothly again since Willie has been returned to his own pedestal. Several senior and sophomore girls were immediately quieted by a clever house mother after a rousing hall gathering for a demonstration of the "North Carolina Stomp." She informed them that "Santa will put coal in your stockings for this kind of activity."

Susan Burkett, a Juniata freshman, won a $500 scholarship at the 45th National 4-H Club Conference in Chicago, Illinois. Among six national winners in the 4-H Horse Program, Sue was selected on the basis of her replies in a competition booklet and other 4-H skills. She is a native of Portage, Pa. and has been a 4-H member for 9 years.

JRE

Tribe Hoopsters Score 1st Win

The Juniata cagers had a successful home opener as they defeated Delaware Valley 83 to 79. The Indians, effectively utilizing a pressing man-to-man defense, opened up a 13 point bulge at halftime. That lead gradually increased to as much as 22 points until Delaware Valley began a press of their own. This press, in addition to a cold spell, gradually cut the JC lead; however, two clutch jump shots by John Tussey, some fine defensive plays by Will Brandau and John Stultz, and several foul shots by Jim Doyle staved off the opposition's rally. Doyle led all scorers with 20, but Clair Kenyon (17), John Tussey (16), and Dale Broadwater (13) also hit double figures.

Letter to the Editor

In response to the article of December 2, 1966, by Paul Keely concerning the home economics and music departments: At times people tend to accept the opinions of others without attempting to obtain facts, even when they are readily available. In some cases "opinions" are tossed about as though they were in actuality "facts." Such is the case (in my opinion—no pun intended) with the whole aura surrounding the decision of the Board of Trustees in relation to home economics on the Juniata Campus.

To quote the Juniata article: "Evidently the Trustees had two reasons in mind when making their decision: 1) there are a limited number of persons preparing to teach home economics at the college level, and the number of doctorate degrees conferred nationally in home economics is infinitesimal; 2) the teaching of home economics is becoming more specialized and technical, thus lending itself to the university and large state college level."

Concerning point one, aren't there a limited number of people preparing for any area at any level at any given time? If the term "limited" is used in the sense of "too few," then I would suggest that this is more conjecture than fact. The number of doctoral degrees conferred nationally in home economics, "per se" is irrelevant for two reasons. First, the only degrees conferred in home economics are those in home economics education. The others are, of course, in particular subject areas such as, child development, family relationships, and nutrition, just as doctoral degrees in the sciences are conferred in the candidate's major such as, chemistry, or geology. Second, and perhaps more important, is the fact that home economics in its liberal outlook draws individuals with doctorates from other fields. For example, consider P.S.U. Represented in the College of Home Economics are degrees with doctorates from psychology, sociology, chemistry, economics, and art.

Concerning point two, many areas are becoming more specialized as more information becomes available. I am not sure of the appropriateness of the connotation of the word "technical."

Enrollment in our department of home economics was in fact increasing when the Trustees made their decision. The enrollment from 1960 to 1965 was, in order—30, 30, 41, 35, 44, 49. This hardly shows fewer students interested in home economics. And this despite the fact that the department has not been promoted by the Admissions Office for the past three years.

The department attracted large numbers of non-majors before the biased collateral regulations. Even after these restrictions were imposed our courses have continued to hold appeal for non-majors, when they could afford to take them. Obviously there is a great deal of potential interest here.

The present program in home economics has made it possible for majors to specialize in depth in the areas offered. It has been very rewarding to me to see the continued interest in my department from both majors and non-majors.

Grapplers Win 1st Dual Meet Take 3rd Place In Tourney

Two Indians Undefeated

Juniata's grapplers took third place in a tournament last weekend at Shippensburg. Shippensburg won the tournament with five undefeated wrestlers while West Virginia University with three undefeated wrestlers placed second. Western Maryland finished last.

JC had two undefeated wrestlers: junior Chris Sherk at 145 and captain Dick Feigles at 177. Sherk scored 24 points to his three opponents' 3 points. Feigles, Western Maryland opponent could not finish his match with the score at 5-0 in Feigles favor. Feigles downed his West Virginia opponent 4-3 and then wrestled to a 2-2 draw with his Shippensburg counterpart. This match had to be forfeited by Shippensburg, because their wrestler was overweight.

Two of JC's wrestlers had two wins, sophomore Ron Hoover at 152 lost only to his West Virginia opponent, 1-3 and freshman Tom Light at 137 lost only to Shippensburg 2-15.

JC Downs W&J, 17-11

Juniata's wrestling team opened their regular dual-meet season with a 17-11 victory over Washington and Jefferson. The meet was a see-saw affair with JC and W&J exchanging wins for win in the first six matches. After that, however, JC managed to get a tie and two decisions to clinch the win.

The meet was highlighted by JC's wrestling team captain Dick Feigles pairing up with W&J's captain Al Lindsay. Feigles won, 1-0, on the effort of a third period escape.

The Indians will be away for the next two meets and will not wrestle at home until after the Christmas vacation. The Tribe will be at St. Vincent this Saturday afternoon, December 10, and at Gettysburg next Wednesday night, December 14.

The Summary:
123 pounds: Tom Benic, W&J, decided Mike McCartney, JC, 7-2
130 pounds: Jack Hooper, JC, decided Jim Eisenburg, W&J, 4-2
137 pounds: Pat Benic, W&J, decided Tom Light, JC, 10-7
145 pounds: Chris Sherk, JC, decided Chuck Ives, W&J, 9-2
152 pounds: Jack Phelan, W&J, decided Ron Hoover, JC, 10-9
160 pounds: Jim Pyle, JC, decided Bill Young, W&J, 2-4
167 pounds: Bob Butz, JC, tied Dick Nelson, W&J, 1-1
177 pounds: Dick Feigles, JC, decided Al Lindsay, W&J, 1-0
Unlimited: Phil Feigh, JC, decided Charles Murphy, W&J, 9-0

Reorganization To Create Three Bodies In Senate

by Prue Engle
Senate Reporter
Senate reorganization is becoming a reality.

"There will definitely be a change," said Senate Vice President Toby Dills after last weekend's Senate retreat at Green Hills Mansion, Barre, Pa. "We have rounded the corner in our discussion." The basic framework for the reorganized Senate as well as a definite timetable for campus ratification of the new Constitution and campus elections have been determined.

The new plan calls for a Senate composed of executive, legislative, and administrative bodies. The executive body will be made up of a president, vice president, secretary, two treasurers, and one or more persons responsible for Senate publicity. Both the president and vice president will be selected by campus-wide elections. The secretary will be selected from the legislature by the members.

Following an entirely new idea, two treasurers, preferably one senior and one junior, will be hired and paid to take care of all financial aspects of the Senate. Because of the difficulty and exacting nature of the treasurer's work, both treasurers will be trained for their office. Each year the junior treasurer will move up, thus assuring a continuation of capable students for the office.

Likewise, one or more students will be hired to handle all Senate publicity. This will relieve individual senators of the responsibility for publicizing their separate activities and will insure coordinated publicity for Senate events throughout the year.

The legislature will consist of members from the senior, junior, and sophomore classes. The question of freshmen representation and the exact number of legislators has not yet been decided. Several plans are also being considered concerning election of legislators. One proposal advocates regular campus-wide elections for all legislators. The "Petho Plan" calls for each class to elect its own candidates. A compromise, the "Dills Bill" combines both ideas. Each student would be allowed to vote for 5 legislators but a specified number, 3 out of those 5 for instance, would have to be from the voter's own class. This would insure adequate representation from each of the classes but would also allow students to vote for members of another class whom they felt were especially qualified.

Dills stressed the fact that any representational division of the Senate is arbitrary. The senators are striving for the best division possible, realizing that no way they decide upon will be perfect.

The Senate Cabinet will be composed of various chairmen responsible for specific campus activities but functioning as a single administrative body. One definite change in the administrative body as it now exists is the removal of Men's and Women's Houses from the Cabinet proper. These two campus organizations have existed practically autonomous for several years. They have theoretically been subject to the Senate but have had no occasion to bring any matter before the Senate. In the new plan, the Houses will continue this loose relationship with the Senate but not be actually represented on the Cabinet.

Individual senators are now working on the various areas of reorganization which have not yet been clearly determined. All areas are to be brought together and combined into a complete plan by January 5. The new Senate Constitution will be presented to the students in the Juniatian February 3.

Projected plans call for a general campus referendum to ratify the Constitution on February 9. Campaigns and elections for the executive, legislative, cabinet, and class offices will follow. Move Up Day is scheduled for March 15.

Besides the definite progress made toward Senate reorganization, the Senate also examined and evaluated the nine resolutions made at last fall's Leadership Conference.

Some effort has been made "to more actively support Student Government in its efforts to represent the student body." However, in many instances the apparent lack of student support for the Senate has been a disappointment.

The Senate has had definite success in its own reorganizing and is also pursuing plans to revamp the student Judiciary to make it a more effective and better regulated body.

In academic affairs, the Senate has as yet received no reply from the faculty to the Memo sent last year. Interest in the ideas expressed in that memo seems to have disappeared to some extent this year. However, the Senate has actively supported the Education Committee in raising money for the creation of a student sponsored scholarship fund for disadvantaged students.

The investigation and re-evaluation of all campus clubs has been completed successfully. The Senate questionnaire to assess student opinions concerning various campus facilities and policies has been circulated and evaluated. However, the Senate has made little progress in its efforts to support and encourage the Coffee House program and to strengthen student interest in Totem Inn through the Totem Inn Commission.

The Senate very strongly and successfully supported the program of JWSF in this year's operation SOS. They recognized the necessity of changing the program to support new projects and have given JWSF authority to investigate possibilities for bringing a foreign exchange student to Juniata.

Twenty-two Students Represent Juniata In Overseas Study

by Maxine Phillips
Last year 15 Juniata students studied in France, Germany and Spain. This year 22 are abroad. They go either through the Brethren Colleges Abroad program, other nationwide programs, or on their own, joining thousands of other students from all parts of the United States. Not all are language majors and the obvious benefits to be derived from exposure to another culture cannot be measured in an academic sense.

When it comes to a listing of those benefits, words like freedom, independence, appreciation, honesty and reality come to the mind of last year's group.

"I never realized how sheltered we were," said one girl. "The world of Juniata is so artificial. It was a shock to suddenly be in the real world and have to do things on your own." The lack of close supervision, the freedom to make decisions not dictated by an administration, the experience of living independently were felt by the students to be among the greatest assets of the past year.

Made possible by the European system of education which does not exert as much pressure as the American, Heckman has now entered the final stage of action. The committee is presently working with the International Institute of Education in New York City, to bring a foreign student to Juniata next fall. Steve Herr, Senate chairman of education, is taking care of arrangements for the Disadvantaged Student Program. Although the drive only reached the 75% mark of the goal of $1850, the committee is going ahead with all plans.

As compared with last year, JWSF showed increased participation in every project except student solicitations which were only 56% as much as last year. Several new projects were tried this year with the Faculty Waiters being the best received.

A run down of results shows the following: Freshman Queen contest, $56.55; Faculty Waiters, $125.00;

Christmas Pageant Exhibits Many Talents In Concert

"I always feel like a boy anyway," declared Homecoming Queen Susie Loose. Her role in Amahl and the Night Visitors calls upon Susie to become Amahl, a poor, crippled boy. People's embarrassment upon vowing "you look just like a boy" is only flattery to this girl's ears—she has played a convincing role.

Susie was told, as play practice started, that she would have to cut off her long hair, but she is now much happier since she can keep her hair and wear a wig.

This year's Christmas pageant is much different from those presented in the past. Two previous themes, Merry Old England and The Gospel According to St. Luke, were not the dramatic opera to be presented this season.

Mrs. Hirsch, whose field is opera, will be singing the part of Amahl's scolding yet loving mother. Students working with her consider it a valuable learning experience.

Amahl is the story of a poor, crippled shepherd boy who tells wild tales and of his mother whose dearest wish is to do something for her son. Through the visits of shepherds and kings, mother and son learn the meaning of Christmas and see a true miracle of the Christ child.

The major characters have been practicing in small groups since school began. Mr. Maas has lent the practicing singers his piano accompaniment.

Last Sunday evening was the first run-through with the orchestra, many of the members being professional musicians. The total effect "shocked" Susie Loose after so many rehearsals minus an orchestra.

Sue Eschleman, Barb Shavely, and Terri Armstrong have been busily working at their respective jobs. Sue and Barb have been sewing up a storm and have also ordered elaborate, but heavy costumes for the three kings. In the meantime, prop girl, Terri says she has no problems except a car full of hay and kerosene. She admits that she took the job to be able to work with Mr. and Mrs. Hirsch.

Working on such a worthwhile project and being part of a real team effort have been the rewards for this crippled shepherd "boy," Susie Loose.

JWSF Releases Drive Results

The Juniata World Service Fund, this year under the direction of Lynn Kagaris, Marjorie Hemmerly, and Donna Heckman, has now entered the final stage of action. The committee is presently working with the International Institute of Education in New York City, to bring a foreign student to Juniata next fall. Steve Herr, Senate chairman of education, is taking care of arrangements for the Disadvantaged Student Program. Although the drive only reached the 75% mark of the goal of $1850, the committee is going ahead with all plans.

As compared with last year, JWSF showed increased participation in every project except student solicitations which were only 56% as much as last year. Several new projects were tried this year with the Faculty Waiters being the best received.

Contributions including student solicitations, $600.10; Slacks and Suits Day, $37.00; Sacrifice Desserts, $116.10; Bake Sale and Auction, $200; Penny Mile Contest, $175.09; Country Fair including the Tricycle Race and Popcorn stand, $83.96—adding up for a grand total of $1393.80. Expenses were $160.91 leaving a net balance of $1232.89. JWSF would like to thank these following organizations for their special contribution to the drive: the Juniatian, radio station WJC, Student Senate, and the twelve clubs which had booths or games at the Country Fair. JWSF also graciously thanks all persons including students, faculty, and administration for their participation in the events during JWSF week. Any person or group who wishes to make further contribution to this worthwhile fund may do so by sending their gift to JWSF care of Lynn Kagaris: Box 268, Juniata College.

Family Style, Out of Style?

The Dining Hall Committee does exist! (See adjacent news story.) In reviewing the situation, they've come up with a recommendation to reestablish and make more stringent an old policy, that of using hosts to restore order to the "mess hall." They've supposedly resolved a problem that everyone talks about, but that no-one wants to admit is worthy of discussion. (It's petty!) Hosts may help, for the moment, but more effective changes could be made.

Apparently, the student's behavior during the evening meals has proven to be absolutely deplorable, both to the waitresses and to other students. This may be true. These problems could be solved by, essentially, eliminating their source.

Eventually, much to everyone's dismay, the family style meal is going to become passe'. When this happens, and it's not completely undesirable, cafeteria meals will be universal. Therefore, there would be no dress problem, no time problem, and no "manners" problem. And if a method of students returning their own trays in Oneida were developed, there wouldn't even be any waitresses to insult!

We suggest that the committee consider these possibilities. If family style meals are to continue, a change in dress regulations may be called for. It's not really fun to change clothes just to go to dinner. Also, a method should and can be developed in Oneida for returning trays, now. And finally, students might just remember that they are college students, and act thusly.

Life around here would be a bit less confusing if we didn't have to bother with eating. Why don't we make it a little easier by erasing some of the difficulties arising out of senseless tradition and formality.

Keely Defends Article Against Default's Attack

It is in the interest of my journalistic reputation that I respond to some of Mrs. Dufault's points of contention as brought out in her letter to the editor. First of all, she reacted as follows to my report of the circumstances and reasons surrounding the Trustees' decision to delete the home ec. department: "At times people tend to accept the opinions of others without attempting to obtain facts, even when they are readily available. In some cases opinions are tossed about as though they were in actuality facts."

Let me say that my article, as a news article (regardless of the byline), was committed to the personally unbiased conveyance of the facts and intentionally avoided any tendency to express my own opinion. I can't and won't deny that I included the opinions of others in order to intensify the issue, especially in the case of the home ec. major I quoted. But I do resent and deny Mrs. Dufault's implication that I tended to "accept the opinions of others without attempting to obtain facts, even when they are readily available."

Professor Butler, although admitting that "some people feel that home economics doesn't belong on the liberal arts campus," was very reluctant to provide any information. She felt that "now is not the time for publication of the matter," and thereupon referred me to the administration, namely, to the President of the College. Feeling that, if the chairman of the home ec. department herself wouldn't give me the information I wanted, it would be extremely inappropriate to pursue the issue with her subordinates (Mrs. Dufault and Mrs. Lois Fox) I visited President Calvert Ellis. It was the president himself who provided me with the information, exactly as stated in the article, defining the Trustees' position and the reasons for it. In her letter, Mrs. Dufault, though speaking of my reporting, refuted the President's statement that "less students are interested in home economics than there used to be." In this instance of my reporting, I did not dutifully accept the President's statement as fact, but I entered some Comment on . . .

Christmas Sounds

Families open their homes to Christmas. The largest possible evergreen bushes the living room ceiling, cookies baking and fudge making lure excited children in kitchens to properly oversee the holiday preparations. Elsewhere, the exuberant crunching of Christmas presents, betrays older sleuths investigating gifts on the sly. Even adults break character and laugh merrily, tinkling glasses in the background.

Another sound, the jingling of cash registers, spells a booming year for merchants. Forever intriguing, the toy exhibits press old as well as young noses against store windows carrying each into the fantasy world of rockets and spies.

Low sung chants and shimmering candle light services bring the Christ Child's tale to all. Bells from the church steeples ring out peace, good will to men. And amid the silence of the gentle snowfall, few hear the far away sounds. And a recent New York Times editorial saw the situation as follows:

"Kill and main as many as you can up to 6 o'clock in the morning of Dec. 24 and start killing again on the morning of Dec. 26. . . Do your damndest until 6 a.m. Dec. 31 and again after Jan. 1, 1967, when it will be all right to slay, to bomb, to burn, to destroy crops and houses and the works of man until 6 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 24, 1967."

element of doubt through Professor Butler's impression that enrollment was indeed on the way up when the Trustees' decision was made.

Because the Trustees supposedly did conduct an extensive study of home economics on the liberal arts campus in general, I can accept the two reasons for their decision as valid only as reasons in themselves. That is, both conditions may very well be factual, but I can't see them as a basis for eliminating a whole department of study at Juniata. The Trustees do own the College and do have the prerogative to do as they see fit with its courses of study as long as they do nothing to detract from the right of the paying customer to receive what he (or she) is paying for—a liberal arts education, an education characterized by breadth and depth, as is the College's policy.

Dining Halls To Have Hosts Again

Acting on a resolution from the Dining Hall Committee the office of the Dean of Student Affairs has re-instated and reinforced the previous policy of having dining hall hosts present at family style meals.

The resolution was made due to the committee's and individual's complaints concerning student's behavior, and manner in the dining hall in general and actions regarding waitresses. It was determined that such behavior stems from the fact that there is a lack of authority in the cafeteria. Consequently, the prime responsibility of the hosts will be to represent this authority. Their duties will not be limited to simply seating the students as in the past, but to help create "a pattern of conduct in keeping with proper manners."

The hosts, who will be officially be established immediately following the Christmas recess, will check dress and "keep an eye on" dining hall behavior, having all power to exert their authority.

The Dining Hall Committee is considering further recommendations on other matters.

Carmenta Among The Trees

A mood was set in the Women's gym, disguised for the Discovery Theatre's presentation of Carmenta Among the Trees by Gary Rowe, as "Concerto for Orchestra," Beta Bortok's masterpiece played as background music.

And very impressive it was. Rowe handled in the writing, a modern theme in a definitely modern way with, at least better than amateur, theatrical finesse demonstrating significant talent and a good dramatic sense. Rowe's own direction proved to be effective enough, however it is perhaps questionable as to whether a playwright should be his own director.

The acting for the most part was good, amateur acting. Overacting, or more correctly, obvious acting is probably the greatest fault that can be committed in such productions. Generally speaking, the actors were all of equal stature. Bob Frysinger was excellent, mostly because the role was well cast, and Frysinger was least guilty of obvious acting.

An experience that too few people took advantage of was Carmenta Among the Trees. The Discovery Theatre is making an admirable attempt in the area of campus dramas and deserves the support and interest of the entire student body, (and of course, students can gain as well as the participants, as drama is a two way affair.) With this production of Carmenta Among the Trees, we witness one more forward step—a very big one—in the Discovery Theatre's activities. Total student production has previously been the major emphasis; with the student production of a student written play a precedent has been set. This is indicative of a healthy trend towards a more creative atmosphere for Juniata. We anxiously await the next Discovery program.

Research Effort Grows

There will be twice as many students in 10 years as there are today. This will result in more faculty, more administrators, and more research personnel. In the last ten years the research effort has grown ten-fold and prospects for the future are equally bright. The University of Pittsburgh presently employs 1,250 laboratory assistants on its twenty-two million dollar annual research effort. The need for able people is growing constantly. They are particularly looking for seniors majoring in Biology or some related field with a Chemistry minor. If you are interested in a career as a Research Assistant or in continuing graduate study while acquiring well paid professional experience, there are opportunities at Pitt for you. A Washington hand press recently presented to Juniata College by Mr. Blair Bice, publisher of the "Morrisons Cove Herald" of Martinsburg, Pa., successor to the "Cove Echo," which was printed on this press beginning in 1872. The press was owned by Henry B. and J. B. Brumbaugh who were founders of Juniata College and briefly published the "Cove Echo" before moving to Huntingdon, Pa. and establishing the college.

'Round Campus

Holding true to form, the members of the senior class walked away with another prize by winning the Christmas decoration competition with a total of 57 points. Following close behind the seniors with 51 points was the class of '68. The three judges based their decisions on originality, unity and overall appearance, atmosphere created by the decorations, and adaptation of the decorations to the location. Each category was based on 15 points. Congratulations seniors, you've done it again!

Any unknown outsider who visits the women's dorms, would feel certain he was in heaven just watching all the "Angels" flitting around. These mysterious, secretive creatures surprise their "Mortals" each day with gifts, good deeds, and messages. Unknown to the angels, the mortals are trying to discover their identity by studying the presents they leave. Many girls have become expert handwriting analysts and super sleuths. One little blonde mortal in Leshar has kept her angel stepping with all her investigations.

Many students have been wondering, by the nature of some of our recent meals, whether or not the dining hall committee, composed of students from the various dorms, is still in existence for possible suggestions. Any information concerning this matter would be greatly appreciated.

The Women's Basketball Team opened its 1966-67 season Monday evening with a 32-27 loss to St. Francis College at Loretto. The girls will play their second game January 6 here at home against Grier School.

Some young gentlemen in Cloister learned that crime may save you a little money every now and then but sure doesn't "pay," when the two dorm telephones were removed due to misuse.

The Christmas holidays of 1966 will be remembered in years to come not only for the hamlets, dance, and other events, but as the season when a few brave Juniata men took the big step that made certain young ladies happy enough to hear "bells." Much to her embarrassment, a roller-skating senior counselor proved that even they forget some rules, when she nonchalantly strolled into Brumbaugh lounge after the 10 p.m. freshmen closing hours to discover a fellow senior counselor and her date.

Quite a disturbance arose on third Leshar recently when two sophomore girls were confronted by a male student on the landing between second and third floors. Needless to say, the girls weren't dressed to receive guests, so he immediately made his retreat. When trying to reason for this strange occurrence, it was thought perhaps he was looking for the infirmary. Rest assured, the visitor would have been well taken care of.

In case there are those among you who have been wondering about the appearance on campus of a group of emaciated looking young men, you can be almost certain they're members of the wrestling team getting their weight down for their respective weight classes. Obviously this hasn't hindered their performance due to the splendid job many of them are doing.

Several clever students have decided to compile a new novel entitled, "Message Writing in the Grass" or "The Great Escape" as a result of the escapades of two senior men last Sunday night in the form of a personalized "Good Luck" message on the lawn between Leshar and Tote.

Rumor has it that if a certain bow is not removed from a certain famous "gentleman" in the library, that certain gentleman may be taking another surprise trip sometime in the near future.

Four Div. III Profs Receive Doctorates, Yet Prove To Be Human

Kenneth H. Rockwell

Robert P. Zimmerer

Frederick Nagle, Jr.

William E. Russey

Picture, if you will, a fellow deep in the hinterland of a Caribbean isle attempting to salvage his Jeep, which has been mired in a spread of quicksand. And picture the same fellow incarcerated in the local jailhouse and faced with charges of espionage. Could be another James Bond thriller, you say? Not quite. They're just a few of the misadventures encountered by one of Juniata's professors in his recent pursuit of the doctoral degree.

True, such experiences present a picture a little incongruous with the usual conception of the typical Ph.D. candidate—an innocent young grad student fervently laboring behind reams of papers, stacks of books, and rows of test tubes in the massive laboratory of some celebrated university. But they are little less than typical of Juniata's "new breed" of academic doctors which boasts the addition of four Division III professors within the present semester (raising the unofficial Div. III total of Ph.D.'s to fourteen as opposed to eight each in Div. I and II).

The quintessential quartet includes Assistant Professors Frederick Nagle, Jr. of the geology department, Kenneth H. Rockwell and Robert P. Zimmerer of the biology department, and William E. Russey of the chemistry department, all of whom have passed their final dissertation oral examinations for the doctoral degree in their respective fields. Dr. Russey is the most recent addition, having completed his work, for all intents and purposes, Nov. 25.

A 1958 graduate of Lafayette College, Dr. Nagle consummated his work at Princeton University with a thesis describing the "Geology of the Puerto Plata Area, Dominican Republic," while receiving his master's degree (also from Princeton—1961) and spending two years in Army Intelligence in the process. His thesis, a combined field and laboratory effort, gained the support of a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship and a National Science Foundation summer research grant. It was NSF which gave financial assistance to Dr. Nagle's one year of field work in the Dominican Republic.

Dr. Nagle possesses one of the thirty doctoral degrees which have evolved from the work of Princeton graduate students in the Caribbean area since the late 1940's. Specifically, he was concerned with 1) the investigation of island arcs as possible mountain ranges in the making, and 2) the formulation of base maps indicating the existent rock types and their bearing upon natural resources of potential economic value. His run-ins with the Trujillo and anti-Trujillo factions in the recent political turmoil in the Dominican Republic consisted of his being locked up twice on espionage charges (which were "trumped up" to impress the local Dominicans and, upon the establishment of his innocence, his eventual emancipation).

Working with a group of researchers at Penn State who were studying the effects of simulated high altitude and the ability of animals to acclimate accordingly, Dr. Ken Rockwell succeeded in developing his thesis in terms of "A Cytophotometric Analysis of Anterior Pituitary Changes in Rats Exposed to Reduced Pressure." In noting that an animal must adjust to a scarcity of oxygen, he investigated the hormonal mechanics of the animal's control over its adjustment system; specifically, the functional significance of changes effected by the response of the pituitary gland. With a B.S. from Juniata (1957) and an M.S. from Brown University (1960) behind him, Dr. Rockwell reaped financial assistance chiefly from the National Institutes of Health, with some support from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Also participating in a doctoral program at Penn State, Dr. Zimmerer delved into the realm of plant physiology and came up with the "Effect of 3-Indolacetic Acid on Phospholipid Membrane Components of Avena Coleoptiles." Indolacetic acid being a natural chemical agent or native auxin which affects the growth of plant stems and roots with respect to curvature, Dr. Zimmerer sought to learn the basic effect of the acid and how such an effect would be produced. His procedure led him to observe changes in the phospholipid components of the cell membranes of oat plants. He floated plant sections on solutions with and without the presence of the auxin and analyzed any changes via radioactive tracers. Dr. Zimmerer received his B.S. from the University of Wisconsin in 1954, and earned his M.S. at Cornell University in 1961.

Under the guidance of Dr. E. J. Corey, prominent organic chemist, and Dr. Konrad Bloch, co-winner of the 1964 Nobel Prize in Medicine, Dr. Russey worked at Harvard University in the investigation of the possibility of a missing link in the known steps leading to the production of cholesterol in the body. His thesis, entitled "An Investigation into the Metabolic Oxidative Cyclization of Squalene," which gained preliminary communication through two articles, which he co-authored in the Oct. 20 issue of the Journal of the American Chemical Society, described the research which resulted in the discovery of the mysterious intermediate compound, arising between squalene and lanosterol in the bio-synthetic scheme, which ultimately leads to the synthesis of cholesterol.

Dr. Russey was graduated from Kalamazoo College in 1961, was a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Bonn, Germany, in 1961-62, and earned his M.A. from Harvard in 1964. He was financially assisted in his graduate work by a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship, and by grants from the NSF and NIH.

The amount of time which elapses between the year a student enters a program of graduate study and the year he exits with the Ph.D. degree cannot be adequately measured in terms of an absolute quantity. Much is dependent upon the way in which the student goes about it: a full-time student can come up with his master's and doctorate degrees in four years, as did Dr. Russey, while a part-time student, who is pursuing his Ph.D. around the edges of a full-time teaching position, a stint in the army, or a combination of both, may run into six to eight years, as did Drs. K. Rockwell, Zimmerer, and Nagle.

To determine if students have the ability to enter a program of graduate study, a candidacy examination is administered. Dr. K. Rockwell noted that "graduate programs are so constructed that only persistently motivated people can complete them; you've got to push yourself, because no one else does." "The selectivity at the higher level schools is fantastic," related Dr. Nagle, "but the key thing is, in the sciences at least, that once you're accepted you've got a good chance for extensive financial aid."

Once enrolled, students carry four graduate level courses per semester. Dr. Nagle pointed out that the courses involve a great amount of reading, mainly current literature with limited textbook use. Within the first two years there is usually a language requirement to be met, consisting of reading comprehension (as established by examination) of two foreign languages; at Princeton it was French or Spanish and German or Russian; at Harvard Dr. Russey needed German and either French or Russian.

The comprehensive examination is the most extensive examination as it covers the student's entire field of concentration. At Princeton Dr. Nagle spent a three-day period undergoing sixteen hours of written examination and one hour of oral examination by a committee. Harvard's version of the comprehensive exam involves cumulative examinations administered once a month during the student's research work; it usually takes one-and-a-half years for a student to pass the required total of eight cumulative exams.

Those students who pass the comprehensive exams are given the "go-ahead" to work on their theses. The research and writing program can be under the auspices of a professor or a faculty advisory committee, depending on the graduate school. When the thesis is prepared in its entirety, the student comes up for a dissertation defense, i.e. he undergoes about a three-hour oral examination to determine his ability to communicate, master, and understand the material in his thesis at a level of professional competence.

Coming out of Lafayette elected to Phi Beta Kappa and ranked fifth in his graduating class, Dr. Nagle was one of ten accepted for graduate study at Princeton and was one of three bachelors among seven masters from such schools as Yale and Cal Tech. Consequently, he realized that he was "not the king-pin anymore," and he felt "very much lost the first year."

Dr. Nagle indicated that he learned more generally in grad school than he did in his undergraduate years, simply through exposure to the vital academic atmosphere at Princeton: he gained a "feeling of the excitement of knowledge in general," not just knowledge applied to geology. It is interesting to note that both Drs. Nagle and Russey (from a personal standpoint) found it a great advantage to be married during the course of their graduate work; it was just that extra touch of "family life."

Having had five years' background in industrial research before commencing his doctoral studies, Dr. Zimmerer found a feeling of involvement in the individual research of the Ph.D. program because, whereas industrial research dealt with assigned problems, he was able instead to pick his own problem and devote time to investigating something in which he was really interested. He described his experience as that of being a "contributing researcher" with respect to a body of scientific knowledge. Dr. Russey found that his doctoral research gave him the chance to "do a lot of different things and pick up a lot of techniques," e.g. the use of radioactive tracers.

Why go after a doctorate degree? As Linus Van Pelt of Charlie Schulz's Peanuts would put it, "Security is a Ph.D." Although possession of a Ph.D. does carry with it a certain amount of prestige, security, and acceptance by one's peers, Dr. K. Rockwell put things a bit more realistically by saying that, without a doctor's degree, "no one in the sciences can expect to obtain and hold a position in higher education for a good length of time." He continued, "If there is any value in a doctorate with respect to teaching, it is that, in spending that much time working in one field, you can expect to exhibit more depth in teaching." Dr. Nagle concluded that becoming a doctor "means a lot of work, but it shows you have the capability for individual research and original thought—and it helps to decide who gets government grants for further research."

It was the general consensus among the four doctors that obtaining the Ph.D. degree does not mean the end of one's education; it does mean that one is interested in and prepared for further research and study. Dr. K. Rockwell maintained that "there is no point in getting a Ph.D. unless with the intention of continuing study. Very active study is a matter of circumstance—specific circumstances such as time, equipment, and motivation." He added that though "the nature of the Ph.D. thoroughly indoctrinates one in research, and one comes out with the desire to continue in this activity," "further study doesn't need to encompass research per se." "Teaching can be a way to keep up, and the changing material in the sciences demands continued keeping up."

Within the realm of plans for more study, Dr. Nagle intends to borrow from his Ph.D. thesis and "get some papers out." Dr. Russey suggests that he is glad to have his grad work behind him and wishes to settle down and start earning his keep. By next semester, with the aid of students, he wants to have some of his own research underway here at Juniata. Dr. Zimmerer has no formal plans for post-doctorate study, but he does intend to pursue a number of projects in which he is interested: 1) the continuation of work on tumor formation in plants, 2) work with a man at Penn State on a project concerned with leukemia in animals, 3) research on frost-protectants for plants, 4) continued study of the effects of the growth substances of plants and the study of plant membranes in general, and 5) an attempt at a genuine vacation with his family.

JC Judo Club Wins Tourney

Last Saturday our Judo Club was victorious in its first invitational tournament. The JJC won all four of its matches giving it the first place trophy. The trophy for most outstanding judoist also went to a member of the Juniata club, Leroy Mell. Princeton University was awarded the second place trophy.

In the round robin tournament, clubs from Juniata, Cornell University, Stony Brook College, Columbia University, and Princeton University competed. The final winning order was Juniata, first, 4-0; Princeton, second, 3-1; Cornell, third, 2-2; Columbia, fourth, 1-3; and Stony Brook, last, 0-4.

Senior Leroy Mell, president of the JC club received the trophy for outstanding judoist. Mell is a third degree brown belt. He won his first match against a Princeton opponent with "wazari," two half-credit throws, equaling ten points. In his next three matches he won each by a clean throw or "ippon" each equal to ten points. The judges awarded the trophy after taking both overall performance and total points earned into consideration.

Another high scorer for JC was freshman Paul Freeman, who earned a total of 37 points. The high scorer for Cornell was Jaromlen, 30; for Princeton, Patterson 40; for Columbia, Steve 40; for Stony Brook, Tomb 20.

The results for the JC team are as follows:

	W	L	T	Pts
Mell	4	0	0	40
Freeman	4	0	0	37
Butz	2	0	0	20
Eatough	2	1	1	20

Grapplers Down SV For 2nd Win

Juniata's wrestling team took their second straight victory with a 30-5 win over St. Vincent. In the four-year series between the two schools JC has won all of the meets.

Highlighting the meet were pins by JC's three freshmen grapplers. In the 123 pound class Mike McCartney pinned his man with 1:05 gone in the first period. Tom Light at 137 pinned his SV opponent with 2:00 gone in the second period. In the last bout of the afternoon Pete Schuyler pinned his opponent with 2:43 gone in the second period.

The wrestling team's next meet (the meet with Gettysburg last Wednesday was too late to make this week's issue) will be at home against Lycoming on January 11.

Summary of meet with St. Vincent:

- 123: Mike McCartney, JC, pinned Tony Mangione, SV, at 1:05 in first period.
- 130: Jack Hooper, JC, decided John Metarko, SV, 7-1.
- 137: Tom Light, JC, pinned Greg Eholt, SV, at 2:00 in second period.
- 145: Chris Sherk, JC, decided Fred Seitz, SV, 9-1.
- 152: Ron Hoover, JC, decided Paul Amalongo, SV, 10-4.
- 160: Jim Pyle, JC, decided Jack Poerstell, SV, 7-1.
- 167: Tom Dinen, SV, pinned Don Hoover, JC, at 1:50 in third period.
- 177: Dick Feigles, JC, decided Lilia, SV, 5-0.
- Unl. Pete Schuyler, JC, pinned Randy Dyer, SV, at 2:43 in second period.

JC Chess Club Defeats SF 8 1/2-1/2 For 2nd Win Of Season

The Chess Club's "A" Team won its first encounter last Saturday by defeating the team from St. Francis College in a two-round, five-player tourney. The event was staged at the host's new John F. Kennedy Student Union under very comfortable and quiet playing conditions. The individual match results are as follows:

- by Paul Shaffer
- ROUND 1
1. Aston-Reese(J) defeated Prokop(SF)
 2. Burkett(J) drew Powers(SF)
 3. Shaffer(J) defeated Janock(SF)
 4. Crider(J) defeated Ogletts(SF)
 5. Kenepp(J) defeated Hassenplug(SF)
- ROUND 2
1. Not played
 2. Burkett defeated Powers
 3. Shaffer defeated Janock
 4. Crider defeated Hassenplug
 5. Kenepp defeated Ogletts

Final score:
Juniata: 8 1/2; St. Francis: 3/2
Of all the games which were under timed playing conditions, the first board duel was the only game where both players experienced time pressure. According to standardized rules a person who does not make the requisite number of moves during, in this case, his two hour span, will automatically lose the game no matter how far ahead in material or development of pieces he may be, assuming no checkmate has resulted beforehand. In this case Glenn Aston-Reese, who played the black pieces using the Sicilian Defense against Prokop's P-K4, played for positional intricacies and sacrificed a bishop in the middle game to gain attacking counterplay which eventually lead to mate. Prokop only had 45 seconds on his clock at this time and would have had to make over a dozen moves to keep from losing on time.

Burkett's round one game was clearly a lost game until he was able to threaten to queen a pawn. Bob Powers and he then agreed on a draw. Shaffer's games on board 3 were forced wins from his use of unconventional lines to win exchanges in the opening positions. Dave Crider came up with a pair of wins to begin his intercollegiate debut. He was the only player on the Juniata team who was previously inexperienced in this degree of competition. Kenepp added two more victories to his record; he is 3-0, having won also for the "B" team match with Altoona Campus last month.

JC Indians Battle Redmen

Tomorrow night the JC Indians take on the Indians from Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

IUP brings a 2-2 log (not counting game with Saint Vincent this past Tuesday) with victories over Bloomsburg, 71-67, and Westminster, 81-80, and losses to California State, 93-111, and Geneva, 72-86.

With seven letterman and a transfer from St. Francis, Indiana started the season with bright prospects. So far they have not shown the overall strength that was promised.

IUP has only made 35% of their field goal attempts in this young campaign and has shown a serious weakness on defense. They have allowed their opponents an average of 86 points a game while scoring an average of 79 points themselves.

The Indians are led by senior co-captains, Don Douds, 5-10, and Bob Kalp, 5-11. Kalp led the team in scoring last year. The other returnees are Jeff Kimble, 6-0, senior, Ed Jamison, 6-0, junior, Dick Crawford, 6-4, junior, Bruce Bauer, 6-5, sophomore, and Les Shoop, 6-1, sophomore. Gary Lupek, 6-6, sophomore, who lettered as a freshman at St. Francis, is expected to bolster the Indians this year.

Juniata goes into the game with a 2-1 record (not counting the game with Washington and Jefferson last Wednesday night). The Tribe has victories over Delaware Valley, 83-79, and JC's only loss was to F&M, 69-53.

JC Head Coach Trimmer is expected to start the same five against IUP. Jim Doyle and John Tussey will be at the guard positions. Bob Chandler and Clair Kenyon will start at forward and Will Brandeau will be at the center slot.

Tribe Wins Overtime Battle From Dickinson For 2nd Win

by Rick Beard

Coach Russ Trimmer promised an exciting brand of basketball this year, and last Saturday night his promise was more than borne out as his Indians defeated Dickinson 78-73 in an overtime triumph. JC jumped out to an early lead, featuring some excellent outside shooting against the Dickinson zone defense. The Indians' own tight man-to-man defense and control of the boards held the Red Devils' offense in check until, with eight minutes to go in the half, they both seemed to lapse. Dickinson gradually gained the momentum and by halftime had crept to within five points, 31-26.

The Indians came out after halftime and immediately regained their early first half initiative. They had unquestioned control of the boards and had little trouble maintaining their poise for 13 minutes of the half, after which Dickinson again slowly began to move up on JC. A Dickinson jump shot with 5 seconds left tied the score at 67-67, and necessitated a 5-minute overtime period.

These 5 minutes were all Juniata's, for the Indians scored right away and then froze the ball. The effectiveness of the freeze is testified by the 7 points JC scored on foul shots. In this period Dickinson scored 3 field goals, which were more than matched by Juniata's 2 field goals and 7 foul shots, and the Indians emerged with a 78-73 victory. Offensively, the Indians were led by co-captains Jim Doyle (23) and John Tussey (18), but the overall excellent play of all the team members should not be overlooked in the game. This victory, the finest game played yet by JC this year, gave the Indians a 2-1 record, a record which they hope to improve upon as they meet both Washington and Jefferson and Indiana State prior to Christmas break.

The JC jayvees made the evening's victories complete with an easy 75-63 triumph over the Dickinson team.

by Bob Dum

In the first week of IM basketball play in Class A, the Has Beens beat the Playboys, 90-65. Jeff Barnes had 32; Gary Shepherd, 24, and Ken Howie, 24 for the winners. However, the Has Beens fell to the Dwarfs, 70-64 as Terry Turnbaugh and Jim Murdock pumped in 17 and 16 respectively. In the other game, the Zugs triumphed over the Playboys, 60-38.

In Class B, the Spastics bombed the Bloody Red Barons, 80-33, as Toby Dills scored 24 and Larry Bieber had 22. The Castaways, led by Fred Witmer's 23 points, defeated the Magnificent Men, 78-46, and then lost to the Chickenheart, 61-55. Bill "Pip" McQuade scored 33 for the Chickenmen in the last game.

The Wee Five downed the Dynamiters, 42-36, and the Brothers slaughtered the Ductless Glands, 64-27 in C-league.

The Rejects, last year's champions, are the team to beat in A-league. Dave Shimp, Gary Lindenmuth, Jack Gilbert and Tom Beam are the leading scorers for the Rejects. In B-league, it is a battle between the Spastics led by Larry Bieber and Toby Dills and the Blue Bombers led by John Clough and Bill Rudewick. Both C and D leagues are up for grabs.

The Spastics went undefeated to win their fourth straight soccer championship. However, this was a hollow victory because eleven out of fifteen games were forfeited.

Trimmer Names Doyle Warrior of The Week

Senior co-captain Jim Doyle was picked by head coach Russ Trimmer and his assistant, Pat Frazier as Juniata's Warrior of the Week for his contributions to the Franklin and Marshall, Delaware Valley and Dickinson games. Doyle hit the cords for 46 points including 26 for 31 free throws. The 5'11" guard had 10 assists in JC's first three games.

Doyle, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Doyle, 832 Vickroy Avenue, Johnstown, played under coach Richard Rigby at Ferndale High School.

The Warrior of the Week is chosen on the basis of a player's contribution to the success of the team during that week, not only in games but also in practices.

Return To Romantic Tradition Landscapes

. . . in Shoemaker Galleries

An exhibition of the art work of Steven A. Barbash, associate . . .

professor of art here, opened with a reception for the artist, to which the public was invited, in the Shoemaker Galleries at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, January 7.

The work of Barbash has been described as a return to the romantic tradition of American landscape painters. This places him in the tradition of Inness, Durand, and the Hudson River School.

The famous printmaker and teacher Gabor Peterdi said that the work of Barbash "is directly related to the renaissance of the romantic landscape painting in America." Peterdi went on to say that he had great faith in Barbash "because he is one of the few young artists who is listening to the echoes inside and not to the drumbeat of Madison Avenue."

Barbash, a graduate of Bard College and Yale University School of Art will exhibit drawings, prints and paintings executed between 1964 and 1966.

In the past he has exhibited at the Barone and Kornblum Galleries, New York; Boston Arts Festival; Brooklyn Museum; Print Show; International Graphic Arts Society and is currently showing at the Carl Siembab Gallery, Boston.

A painting by Barbash was chosen by the U.S. Information Service for a tour of the museums of South American Capitals.

This is another in the series of outstanding exhibitions which have been held at the Shoemaker Galleries in the Carnegie Building.

As Director of the Galleries Barbash has been responsible for arranging exhibitions of paintings and prints. Typical of museums all over the country, the Shoemaker Galleries has had the largest attendance this year of its brief history. Bus loads of children from area schools have visited each exhibition.

Extremely hard working, Barbash not only teaches "Great Epochs of World Culture" and art history but directs the studio work for special students and still finds time to produce a steady stream of excellent prints and paintings.

Recently the school obtained an etching press on which Barbash has been able to return to his early love of printmaking. His success in this field, before coming to Juniata, is attested by his inclusion in the Brooklyn Museum, Print Show, an exhibition with an excellent reputation.

Hours for viewing the exhibition which will be on view until January 27, in the Shoemaker Galleries are Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 12 noon and 2 to 5 p.m. On Saturday and Sunday the Galleries are open from 2 to 5 p.m. It is closed all day Monday.

College Shows Interest In Academic Pressures

Various tutorial, seminar, and independent study programs, or combinations of such, as presently employed by members of Juniata's faculty, are indicative of the College's interest in progressive experimentation with the traditional classroom approaches to the educational process.

Looking for something to relieve students of the pressures that accompany grades, Dr. Howard H. Crouch, associate professor of education, instituted in his Educational Psychology class this semester a procedure whereby students contracted for their course grades. Within the first month of the semester Dr. Crouch's students indicated their desire to acquire either an A, B, or C grade according to a pre-determined series of obligations or standards which were deemed sufficient and necessary for passing the Ed. Psych. course at each respective level. The students subsequently set their contracts by outlining, under the auspices of Dr. Crouch, the specific procedures they would follow in fulfilling the particular grade requirements. It was understood that once the contract was signed, the contracted grade was guaranteed, pending the satisfactory completion by the student of the respective procedures. Also present was the understanding that a student could not raise his grade after signing, but could lower it if he so desired.

In referring to the common misunderstanding that the contract system provides more freedom for the individual student than do other classroom methods, Dr. Crouch asserted that, as it is not really a means for independent study, the system is actually "rather rigid in some ways." He expressed considerable pleasure with respect to the effectiveness of the system thus far. The nature of the system is such that it allows him to evaluate the students' degree of retention by way of "pop" tests: students are assured that the tests do not affect their grades. In a recent unannounced test of 31 multiple choice questions covering six chapters of familiar work, Dr. Crouch found that median retention was better than 80%.

At present the only ways Ed.

Psych. students can prove that they can use what they have learned seem to be through papers and/or the final exam, which are more or less vicarious experiences. Dr. Crouch sees as an ideal situation a laboratory set-up in a local school which would provide first hand experience for practicing psychology in relation to teaching.

Two years ago Dr. Earl C. Kaylor, Jr., associate professor of religion, chaired a faculty committee on independent study which submitted "recommendations as ways of supplementing current teaching methods with independent study techniques." In preparing their statement and recommendations, the committee visited a number of colleges which employed widely recognized independent study programs. It was as a result of the committee's investigations that Dr. Kaylor himself became interested in experimenting with the traditional class period.

What Dr. Kaylor does in a number of his classes is carry on the regular, formal class session three times a week for the first nine weeks of a semester, administer the final exam at the completion of the nine weeks of work, and then guide the students in independent study for the remainder of the semester.

Realizing that it is impossible to master a subject in one course of study, Dr. Kaylor, during the formal classroom routine, touches upon the body of information that the students should have to gain a general knowledge of the course. In following a certain theme with an historical perspective throughout his class sessions, Dr. Kaylor strives to teach certain reasoning skills objectivity in examining problems, and realization of the different interpretations in reli-

Open Tryouts To Be Held For The Glass Menagerie

Open tryouts will be held for the next major campus play, Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, January 10, 11 and 12, at 4:30 p.m. in Oller Hall. Previous acting experience is not required, and all interested students are invited to attend the open tryout periods. There is never any pre-casting of roles.

Tennessee Williams play has been acclaimed as on the great American plays. It will be presented on Oller Hall stage March 9, 10, and 11. Rehearsals will not commence until February 6.

There are four excellent acting roles: Tom Wingfield, the son; Amanda Wingfield, the mother; Laura Wingfield, the daughter; and A Gentleman Caller.

In the story Amanda Wingfield is a faded tragic remnant of Southern gentility who lives in poverty in a dingy St. Louis apartment. Amanda strives to give meaning and direction to her life and the lives of her children, though her methods are ineffective and irritating. Tom, however, is driven to distraction by his mother's nagging, and he seeks escape in alcohol and the unrealistic world of the movies. Laura also lives in her illusions. She is crippled and this defect, intensified by her mother's anxiety to see her married, has driven her more and more into herself. The crux of the action comes when Tom invites a young man of his acquaintance to take dinner with the family. Jim, the caller, is a nice ordinary fellow who at is once pounced upon by Amanda as a possible husband for Laura—the world of illusion which Amanda and Laura have striven to create in order to make life bearable, crashes about them. Tom, too, at the end of his tether, at last leaves home.

Students Participate In Sunday Recital

Students of Prof. Donald S. Johnson will participate in a recital at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, January 15, in Oller Hall.

The students are Judith A. Miller, sophomore; Adrienne Ott, Carolyn J. Smiley, senior; and Frederick Ibberson, senior.

Their selections will include "Fugue in G Major" of J. S. Bach, God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen and A Gothic Cathedral, by Miss Miller; "Fugue in C Major" of J. S. Bach, This Endris Night and Good King Wenceslas, by Miss Ott; "O Holy Night" and Brightest Day of Days of J. S. Bach, Convent Carol and Pontifical March, by Miss Smiley; "Fugue in A Minor" of J. S. Bach, O Come, O Come, Emmanuel, and Puritan Procession, by Frederick Ibberson.

Also on the program is the Festival Prelude of Robert Elmore, with Diana Weaver, sophomore on piano and Carolyn S. Miley on organ; and the Sonata for Strings and Organ in F Major of Arcangelo Corelli with Bonnie L. Cave, sophomore, first violin; Thomas H. Severns, senior, second violin; Connie L. Baysinger, junior, cello; and Fred Ibberson, organ.

Foreign Delicacies Prepared by Mrs. Fox's Students

Such foreign delicacies as Indian curry, Swiss bismarkus, and Scandinavian sweet breads will greet the fortunate forty Juniatians invited to the January 11 Open House of the Cultural Foods class in South rec room.

Mrs. Lois Fox, instructor of the class commented that her students have compiled the guest list and searched foreign and English texts for the menu.

The course was developed to explore the similarities in cuisine from various cultures over the world. In their Wednesday afternoon lab, students prepare the foods with concern for authentic recipes and possible American adaptations. Many labs are recalled fondly.

Susan Loose, a member of the class, noted the Indian meal presented by Mrs. Eleanor Carter as a highlight of the semester. "Of course, we ate with our fingers—an Indian custom."

The lecture portion of the course emphasizes the path of cultural change and the subsequent effects upon food supply and its preparation. Mrs. Fox emphasized that famine is the key in any description or history of food habits, and that her students are discovering unusual but inexpensive foods. Geneva Carbonetti candidly expressed class opinion when she exclaimed, "And, its good!"

Where Are The Real Students?

There has been in this issue of The Juniatian an unconscious emphasis on education — new classroom methods, grants to further the cause of study, extracurricular activities with an ultimately educational function. While all these things certainly help facilitate the process of a really significant college education, for the most part, the education should, but seldom does, entail more than facilities. A heavy responsibility rests on the student. What good are a multi-million dollar science center, sincere efforts of professors, various activities designed to give a student a clearer perspective and invaluable experience, if the student has not the attitude prerequisite to the facilities? Where are the real students? Too few and far between.

But even presupposing this attitude, we observe some breakdown in the facilities which may be academically undesirable. Rumor has it that "Epochs" and "Integration", two courses that were probably at one time the two greatest assets to Juniata's curriculum, and still are but to a limited few, are deteriorating. (Why are this year's Freshmen still studying the Greeks with finals less than one week away?) In general, it seems, the students are unresponsive, and the faculty — well, it could be that they are bored or disgusted with the unresponsiveness of the students. The problem may be that the courses have lost any general appeal they once had. It has even been suggested that an effort has been made to make the studies more "palatable" to the general student. If this is so, it is a tragedy.

The existence, to be sure, the necessity of the existence of a certain universal student attitude may be debatable. However, the students are at fault for making this effort toward palatability necessary; the faculty may be at fault for complying.

If learning procedures are not accomplishing their purposes effectively, why bother? "Epochs" and "Integration" should then be little more than interesting electives. But they are infinitely more than that. . . and it's time everybody should realize it.

"A" versus "D"

(ACP) — A Columbia University professor has proposed that all male students receive an A in courses in order to beat the draft, the Falcon Times, Miami-Dade Junior College, noted in an editorial.

The Falcon Times said that Seymour Melman urged all faculty members to intensify their teaching efforts to permit students to "earn" A grades, citing the illegal nature of the war in Vietnam as justification for refusing to comply with Selective Service policies. The newspaper continued:

Melman's statement was soundly rebuffed by other faculty members, who reasoned that a college or university shouldn't foul up its educational system to elude government orders.

We are in complete agreement with those faculty members, the newspaper continued, that a letter grade in both war and peace, should be earned rather than given away. A grade that is not earned hurts the school, the teacher, the public and, most of all, the student himself.

The school hurt when a graduate applies for a job and is turned down because he isn't qualified, despite an impressive academic record. The gives out the grade; his ability to evaluate a student's work is questioned.

Rising VD Rate Alarms Officials; Education Held Key To Reversal

Americans are contracting venereal disease at an estimated rate of 1,700,000 new cases a year, according to the January Reader's Digest. Particularly alarming is the high incidence of VD among young people: 1500 new cases every day, the American Medical Association reports, more than half of them among teenagers.

The public's ignorance of VD's causes, symptoms and behavior is appalling. Experts say that as many as half of the nation's cases are now going untreated because so many Americans are unaware of the facts. Early symptoms of syphilis soon disappear and many victims are tempted to ignore them, the article notes. But if left untreated, the infection can break out again with tragic fury years later, attacking the heart, the eyes, the brain or the nervous system. It can also cause death.

"So little recognized is syphilis two thirds of all cases are in the dormant phase or have progressed to the late attack before they are found," say authors Patricia and Ron Deutsch.

To combat this ignorance, school authorities, public health officials and parents are teaming up to provide VD-education courses in schools. Los Angeles County, for example, instituted a six-hour high-school course on VD in 1963.

Results are encouraging. Teen-age syphilis has dropped by 58 percent

Lots of Lion Lots of Laughs "Fluffy"

Why not a good comedy? Laughs will be the product of "Fluffy" starring Tony Randall, Shirley Jones, Edward Andrews, and Jim Backus. It will be presented January 7, at 7:30 p.m. in Oiler Hall.

The plot begins when Tony Randall asks a hotel desk clerk for a room for him and his cat. However, Fluffy happens to be no ordinary cat. Fluffy is a lion, with Randall on the lam from the police who don't believe Fluffy is the sweet docile, home-loving creature Randall claims she is. The results will have the audience roaring with laughter at the nutty lines, chases up and down stairs, dumb-waiters, in and out of rooms, and down clothes chutes as Fluffy makes her bid for social acceptability.

After the movie, a dance will be held in the Women's Gym at 9:00 p.m. The group playing will be Juniata's own "After Six."

in Los Angeles County since the course began, while the national rate has shown an overall increase. Moreover, health officials found that two nearby cities that refused the course showed alarmingly high jumps in VD: Pasadena's VD rate went up 500 percent from 1964 to 1965; Long Beach leaped over 700 percent.

In Houston, Texas, the entire community was involved in a VD-education campaign. The local Jaycees made some 800 talks to business and civic groups about VD. Business firms helped place VD billboards in the city. Church groups performed a play about VD at clubs, churches and school assemblies. Public Health Service films on the subject were run on local TV. Newspapers carried feature stories describing the threat. The PTA disseminated information about VD-education courses back home to parents.

School dropouts were reached too, via free record hops at local parks, with disc jockeys discussing VD between records. Several chains of infection were uncovered as youngsters appeared at the health department after every dance, the article reports.

The U.S. Public Health Service offers films and a new self-teaching text to classes wishing them. Says Dr. William Brown, chief of the USPHS Venereal Disease branch: "Once many thought that penicillin alone could stop VD. Today we know that it will take a liberal dose of public knowledge as well."

Dr. Crosby Declaims Tapping, Bugging As Freedom Threat

by Maxine Phillips

In view of the recent controversy aroused by wiretapping and electric bugging done by the FBI, the JUNIATIAN sought an opinion of this activity from Dr. Kenneth W. Crosby, chairman of the history department.

Citing the creation of a congressional investigating committee and increased public awareness of the matter as two positive results of the disclosures, Dr. Crosby discussed the danger to a free society if such investigative methods are condoned. The freedom of speech guaranteed to all citizens by the Constitution is generally considered to be applicable to private speech. No freedom being absolute, statements made in public are at times rightfully subject to restriction to protect the rights of others. A government existing by consent of the governed that oversteps the boundaries of consent in the area of free speech stifles the exchange of ideas that forms part of the foundation of a free society. These are the tactics of a police state and the possibilities of black mail and coercion are never far away.

On the assumption that information gained by wiretapping has been obtained, so to speak, without a search warrant, such evidence has been ruled inadmissible in the courtroom. Dr. Crosby observed that while such a safeguard of individual rights carries within it the possibility that guilty men may go free, innocent men are at the same time protected.

The fact that our official guardians of liberty have themselves been guilty of breaking the law, supposedly in the public interest, raises the age old moral question, "Does the end justify the means?" As the congressional investigation continues, Dr. Crosby noted that this question will be posed repeatedly and the American public will be again reminded of the old adage, "Internal vigilance is the price of liberty."

JC Movie Night Presents:

"Morgan"

Brilliant "black humor"

The intrepid Ape Man swings over the jungle bellowing hoarse cries of defiance to the world. Tarzan is back? No, it's Morgan, one of England's latest additions to the cinematic scene and the fare for JC Movie Night.

Directed by Karel Neizak at Saturday Night and Sunday Morning fame, the film places Morgan, a zany disturbed artist, in the situation of trying to win back his estranged wife, Leonie. Bombs under his mother-in-law's bed, electronic bugging, and crashing Leonie's wedding wearing a gorilla suit are only a few of his ingenious devices to accomplish his purpose.

Critics have cited Morgan as a brilliant production of "black humor." The acting is uniformly excellent with performances by David Warner and Vanessa Redgrave. Morgan searches for only a reunion with his wife but a reunion with himself in this odd quest for truth. It is bound to make the viewer question his own values and ideals as he enters Morgan's wild and zany world.

Finally Finals

In a recent interview with one of JC's administrative dignitaries, it was revealed, "off-the-cuff," that the administration has recently adopted a "new" policy for final examinations which will be first employed this January 16 by the faculty.

It seems that a recent study, carried on through a student-faculty canvass, has proved that 3 hour examinations are not conclusive to "good" examining. Three hours of examination has proved to (1) cause student demoralization prior to and during said examination, (2) cause mental fatigue not readily recoverable among the students, (3) cause writer's cramp as well as sitters cramp, (4) cause professors to labor over illiterate trials of demoralized, fatigued and cramped b-s - ers, and (5) forced the college to light Memorial Gymnasium (east, west, and main), Swigart Hall, and Alumni Hall as much as 8 hours a day.

Therefore, each final examination for this fall term '66 will be only 2 hours and 53 minutes in duration.

Look For The Morrow; All Is Not Well Behind

Ed note: The following comment by columnist Dick West is reprinted from the Altoona Mirror:

Congratulations on having survived another harrowing year! Now let's give some thought to what we can expect in 1967.

Listed below are some of the things you can look for during the next 12 months. I'm not saying they will happen, but you can look for them anyway.

January—Both NBC and CBS televise first "Super Bowl" game between NFL and AFL champions.

On basis of first two plays CBS declares NFL the winner with 53 per cent of the points. After rst punt, NBC projects 20-6 AFL victory.

February—This is always a dismal month. Skip it.

March—House subcommittee resumes investigation of expense-paid trips by Rep. Adam C. Powell and members of his staff. Move to oust Powell continues.

Issue is finally settled by compromise. Powell voluntarily resigns from Congress to become director of U.S. Travel Agency.

April—Senate Foreign Relations Committee begins hearings on question "Should the Vietnamese get out of Vietnam?"

Several Far Eastern experts testify that negotiations will not be possible until natives withdraw.

May—President Johnson announces cabinet shakeup. Robert McNamara resigns as secretary of defense to become U.S. ambassador to Berkeley, Calif.

June—Cassius Clay resigns his heavyweight championship to enlist in Marine Corps.

July—Mao Tse-tung resigns as chairman of the Chinese Communist party to become captain of his country's 1968 Olympic swimming team.

August—General Motors unveils design of first completely safe automobile—the "Mader Six." You wind it up and it stays in the garage.

September—New book becomes immediate best-seller. It's the autobiography of J. Edgar Hoover, as told to Bobby Kennedy.

October—United Nations acts to eliminate causes of friction in Europe and Asia.

Plan involves having East Germans and South Vietnamese change places.

November—"God is dead" controversy subsides in France after President De Gaulle undergoes medical checkup.

December—The world comes to an end. Lady Bird Johnson expresses fear this will hamper beautification program.

Symptoms of Decay America Awake!

If you can read the following and not be shocked, disturbed and challenged, then pinch yourself. You are both blind and numb.

The black revolutionary leader Dick Gregory spoke recently and during his address cried out to a mob of Negroes: "If Chicago breaks like we think it will this summer, it will make Watts look like a picnic."

Theological professors, paid by the Methodist Church, the Episcopal Church, and the Presbyterian Church, recently spoke out saying, "God is dead." Instead of being condemned and fired by their denominations, they are still on their denominational payrolls.

College professors and modernist preachers, when interviewed over television are advocating premarital sex relations.

The Supreme Court of the United States has, by edict, abolished the law which makes the Communist Party a crime, and the Communist Party is now preparing to be on the ballot in 1968.

It is now a criminal offense to say the Lord's Prayer or mention the name of Jesus in a schoolhouse.

Veneral diseases among teenagers as well as adults have almost doubled in the past ten years.

The war between the free world and the Oriental Communists is being scientifically lost by a "no win" policy, which refuses to cut off by bombing the supply sources which are being used to slaughter our innocent sons in South Vietnam.

Homosexuals have become a fraternity of power and influence in the government, the church, the schools and business — they include Bishops, Governors, White House personnel, etc. God save us.

Time Magazine brazenly reports without critical comment that the students of our great universities are now organizing openly and without restraint parties to which young men and young women come and remove all their clothing and indulge in brazen orgies. Such things have always gone on in the red light districts and in the underworld of depravity, but they are now being brazenly endorsed on the campus areas of America.

In the secret conference rooms of organized Jewry a conspiracy is on foot to effect the withdrawals of our troops from the Orient, thus giving the Reds the victory in order that the red blood of our sons may be saved for Jewish aggression in the Middle East in a campaign to slaughter the Arabs and deny them the right to return to their homes, vineyards and farms. This is the conspiracy to bring about a third world war to save the Jews again.

The Jews, the atheists and the materialists are in a campaign to deny all Christian patriots the use of radio and television. They have almost succeeded. Richard Cotten and Carl McIntire are the last two to be liquidated by the Jews.

In Academic Pressures College Shows Interest

According to the different section during the block of the semester provided for independent study, the student may pursue a topic of personal interest in relation to his field of concentration. In working on his independent project the student may be filling in gaps in the regular class session, or he may be working in more depth on a topic already covered during class time.

Because Dr. Kaylor feels that "too often there is not enough supervision for term papers in accordance with the College's policy on writing competence," he provides opportunities for student consultation during what would be the regular class period. In the private interviews throughout the independent study time, Dr. Kaylor helps students in the formulation of topics and the preparation of outlines, gives bibliography pointers, suggests methods of organizing material, and measures the student's progress in general. He leaves the final writing to the students themselves.

In evaluation of his program, Dr. Kaylor sees it as "a good advantage mutually where subject matter allows. It is much more stimulating from a teacher's point of view," he finds, "because students sometimes work in areas which are argue to the professor himself." Generally, his students are appreciative of the opportunity to investigate an area which is of interest to them. Dr. Kaylor also values the fact that the several private interviews, which are educational as well as personal, afford him the chance to work closer with and get to know better each individual student; an opportunity which is not as much available in the standard approach. "It's not the best way of teaching," he concludes, "but it is one of the most effective."

One of Dr. Kaylor's committee-men was Dr. Duane F. Stroman, assistant professor of sociology, who has subsequently developed a program of independent study similar to that used by Dr. Kaylor. Dr. Stroman has had his Social Theory I class meet during 3/4 of this semester for lecture and discussion and then pursue research topics related to the course for the remaining 1/4. During the research period the class continues to meet, but every other period to allow more time for research; and there are still common reading assignments, but at a slower pace than usual.

Next semester Dr. Stroman will handle his Social Stratification class in seminar fashion: there will be lectures the first month, and after that there will be fewer classes to allow for student reports on special topics.

Dr. Stroman sees his independent study programs as beneficial not only because they allow him more time to prepare his lectures, but also because they "encourage the student to be more responsible for his own education," and, in encouraging the student to learn more on his own, they prepare him for "life-long learning habits."

Dr. Evelyn Guss Named Vice-president of Pa.

Archaeological Institute

Dr. Frederick R. Matson, associate dean of the College of the Liberal Arts and professor of archaeology at The Pennsylvania State University, has been named president of the newly-created Central Pennsylvania branch of the Archaeological Institute of America.

Other new officers are Dr. Evelyn G. Guss, department of classics, Juniata College, Huntingdon, vice-president; and Dawson Kiang, assistant professor of art history, Penn State, secretary-treasurer.

The Archaeological Institute of America was founded in 1879 by a group of scholars who shared an interest in reconstructing the fascinating story of man's climb through the centuries. Twenty-seven years later it was incorporated by an act of Congress as a non-profit organization designed to encourage archaeological research and provide a means for both the professional scholar and the interested layman to follow the latest archaeological discoveries and their interpretation.

Lang, Arts Students Present Story Hour

Each Wednesday afternoon from 3:00 to 3:45 Juniata Language Arts students can be found either at Stone Church or at the Community Center participating in a children's story hour.

Miss Margaret Houck, education professor, explained that through this story hour the students learn to know and work with children. In addition they learn of the "wonderful opportunity to introduce the children to good literature and good books."

The story hour is offered to any child from kindergarten to the fourth grade. The children are notified of this opportunity through their respective schools, the daily newspaper, and posters placed in the schools by the college students.

Children from Alfarata Elementary School congregate at Stone Church for their story hour and those from William Smith Elementary School at the Community Center.

Many books used for the story hour are obtained from the Huntingdon County Library. The participating students seem to consider the story hour a worthwhile experience, with the children equally enjoying it. It was felt that more children could be encouraged to attend since most of those presently attending are children whose parents connected with the college.

Through the story hour good training for elementary education majors is offered. Familiarity with children's books and reading practice, along with learning disciplinary actions provide experience necessary to the future elementary teachers. Characteristics of various age groups are learned along with their respective likes of types of stories.

As the elementary education students learn how the children act and think, the children have the opportunity to really enjoy a story.

Graduate Library School Established In Altoona

Mr. John Clement Harrison, Associate Dean of the University of Pittsburgh Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences announced today that the Graduate Library Extension School has been established in Altoona, and will commence January 7, if the enrollment is as anticipated.

Under this program, those students with an undergraduate degree may obtain a Masters Degree in Library Science by completing thirty-two credits in library science, plus the master's thesis. Those individuals wishing to attend the courses on a non-degree basis, will be classified as "special students," and may attend the courses merely for their own benefit; to obtain school library certification; or to obtain certification as a provisional librarian or as a library assistant in accordance with Rules and Regulations of the Pennsylvania State Library.

The initial course to be offered will be L. S. 150 which is entitled "Organization of Library Materials," which is a four credit course serving as an introduction to the theory and practice of descriptive and subject cataloging, with principal emphasis on the cataloging of books. The course will be taught by Miss S. Elsie Pope, instructor with the University of Pittsburgh Graduate School of Library and Information Science Staff Faculty. Miss Pope holds a B.A. degree from McGill University of Montreal, and a Master of Library Science degree from the University of Denver, Colorado. Prior to coming to Pittsburgh, she was a member of the faculty at the State University of New York, Geneseo, New York.

The course will be offered every Saturday in the Altoona Senior High School from 8:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., and will start January 7, and end April 15. Registration will take place January 7, with applicants being accepted on a provisional basis until their credentials are processed and checked. The cost will be $16.00 per credit, or $64.00 for the four credit course; plus a $15.00 admission fee for those working toward the M. L. S. degree (which will be waived if the student has already earned credits towards a master's degree at the University of Pittsburgh); or a $5.00 admission fee for the special students not applying for the M. L. S. degree.

All persons interested in enrollment should contact Mr. Russell Walker, Library Administrator of the Altoona Public Library, even though the individual has given prior notice of interest. Further information about this program may also be obtained from Mr. Walker.

JC Trustee, Alumnus Made Senior VP of Irving Trust Company

Charles C. Ellis has been promoted to senior vice-president and controller of the Irving Trust Company of New York City according to a recent announcement.

Mr. Ellis, who was recently elected to the Board of Trustees of Juniata College is a graduate of the college and has a MBA degree from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. He joined the Irving Trust Company in 1965 as a vice-president. He was previously controller of the consumer products division of Philco Corporation.

Mr. Ellis served as President of the Juniata National Alumni Association from 1964 to 1965. He is married to the former Jean Good, also a Juniata graduate. They have four children and reside in Kinnelon, New Jersey.

New Course Brings New Venture

by Jim Sutton

"What is the value of a high school education today?" This was a typical question which students in the new course, Sociology of Education, presented to community residents in an educational opinions survey of Huntingdon Borough. In addition to being a major part of the course curriculum, the purpose of the survey was also to ascertain how the community felt about education in general and Huntingdon's educational institutions and educators.

Under the direction of Professor Joseph D. Yenerall the class randomly selected names from the voters' registration list of Huntingdon Borough. Each student was assigned a particular section of the community and interviews were set up in the same manner.

The survey itself consisted of some 40 questions which were drawn from a similar study done by a noted sociologist, Robert Terrien. For the purpose of saving time and expense, however, the class revised and condensed Terrien's study into questions which could be simplified and placed in workable categories. The results were then transferred to IBM cards where they will be further sorted into categories from which conclusions and deductions of the success of the project could be obtained.

The actual findings of the survey, when compiled, will provide a useful service not only to the student and the college, but the community in general. Professor Yenerall indicated that the findings will be placed in the college library for further reference, and that copies of the survey have also been requested by town and county school officials for future reference in school and community projects.

College Receives Grant of $5,000

The College has received a grant from the E. I. DuPont de Nemours and Company of Wilmington, Del., of $5,000. It was announced by Dr. Calvert N. Ellis, president.

The sum will be divided with $2500 going to the Chemistry Department and the other $2500 to be used in support of science teaching in general.

DuPont has also donated surplus instruments and glassware to Juniata's Chemistry Department. The items are all from the DuPont laboratories where they are no longer needed but are of use in an educational institution. The estimated value of this used equipment is $6,000 according to H. Gerald Quigg, director of development.

Juniata was one of 214 colleges and universities who shared $7,100,000 awarded by DuPont in an annual program of aid to education. The major part of the grants is for strengthening the teaching of science and engineering, particularly at the undergraduate level. Other important phases are for fundamental research and new facilities.

The greater emphasis on teaching, the DuPont announcement stated, in the grants for 1967 reflects the concern often expressed by educators for the need for improved teaching.

Senate News and Views

My congratulations go to the freshmen. They have won another round in their bid for humanity!

Resolving the question of freshman representation in the new legislature, the Senate at their last meeting voted to have freshman representatives to have freshman members of this legislature. This vote came despite strong opposition.

Richard Sackett, Co-chairman of the Freshman Steering Committee, read a letter addressed to the Senate president in response to a previous recommendation that freshmen not have their own representatives in the newly organized legislature. Besides stating freshman objections to this proposal, the letter contained suggestions for helping freshmen assume legislative responsibilities.

Represented in the Senate by Chairman of Underclassmen Frank Petho, the freshmen out-talked those senators advocating upperclass superiority, to win equal privileges with other class representatives.

Four representatives are to be chosen from each of the four classes. The upperclass representatives will be elected in early spring with graduating seniors continuing in office till June. The freshmen will elect their own representatives the following October. This system will insure a continuous legislature of 16 members.

In upperclassman elections for representatives, each student will have five votes. Three of these five votes must go to candidates from the student's class. The remaining two votes may be cast for any candidates on the ballot regardless of class. Seniors voting will be able to use only their two "free" votes.

Freshman representatives will be elected by the freshmen. A vote by two-thirds of the electorate of each group, upperclassman and freshmen, is necessary to constitute a valid election.

The strong opposition to voting freshman representatives seems surprising since one of the main objectives in undertaking reorganization was to insure a more representative student government. Freshmen comprise nearly one third of Juniata's student body and their ideas and abilities can not be ignored.

Any person who is not presently working for THE JUNIATIAN and would like to join the staff, in any capacity, is invited to attend a meeting 6:30 p.m. Thursday in THE JUNIATIAN office, located in Brumbaugh basement. Experience is not a requirement, though desirable. Present staff members are required to attend this important session if they wish to remain in good standing.

Next week the Indian Wrestlers' back to back home meets before finals interrupt this year's campaign. On Wednesday, January 11, the Lycoming Warriors invade, bringing eight lettermen from last year's team which compiled an 8-2 record and finished second in the MAC championship tourney. This will be the ninth meeting between the two schools and JC has not beaten the warriors yet. Two of the lettermen are competing for the 123 pound berth. Doug Keiper, a junior, and Tom Songer, a sophomore.

Junior lettermen Mel Fleming and Randy Parker are returning at 167 and 177 respectively. Fleming finished second in the MAC championship last year.

The Bucknell Bisons visit the Tribe on Saturday, January 14. This will be the first meeting between the two schools.

Clair Kenyon

Warrior Of The Week

Coaches' Award To Clair Kenyon

This past week's "Warrior" selection was Clair Kenyon whose offensive honors of previous years are being balanced by some tremendous defensive efforts this season. Kenyon held W&J's Don Smith (who had been averaging 30 points a game) to 10 points in the Indians' losing cause at Washington, and during that game was high man with 22 points on 10 field goals and two free throws. Against Indiana, Kenyon was in foul trouble during most of the second half but came off the bench with three minutes to go in the overtime period and scored seven of the fourteen Indian points to clinch the win.

B-ballers To Battle Ursinus Scranton And Lock Haven

Next week the Tribe plays one game away and one home before the semester break. On Tuesday JC travels to Lock Haven and on Friday Ursinus plays here.

The Lock Haven Bald Eagles have six lettermen back from last year's team which posted a 2-15 record. Max Pavlovich, 5'9" senior, Tom Lewis, 5'9" senior, and Steve Daley, 6'5" junior are expected to be the team leaders this year.

The Ursinus Bears are described as having speed, height and 5 returning lettermen. Leading the Bears is captain Bud Krum, 6' guard. The other letter winners are: Dave Campbell, 6'3", Ed Schaal, 5'10", Mike Pollock, 6'5", and Dave Gillespie, 6'3". Cordow Cawthr, 6'7" sophomore is expected to see a lot of action.

For Juniata Jim Doyle, co-captain, is the leading team scorer with a 16.4 average. Co-captain John Tussey is second with a 13.6 shooting average and he is third on the team in rebounding with 21. Will Brandeau leads the team in rebounding with 39. The Indians have shot 77.3% of their free throws which ranks them fifth in the nation among colleges in that department.

Prior to the Christmas Vacation JC played two basketball games against Washington and Jefferson and Indiana.

Against W&J the Tribe lost a thriller by the score of 75-78. Juniata led by one point with 20 seconds remaining in the game, but a charging foul gave the Presidents the ball. Scoring quickly W&J took the rebound after JC missed a shot and put in another bucket just as the clock ran out.

The Juniata Indians basketball team scored another impressive overtime triumph, defeating Indiana State, 77-71, just prior to Christmas vacation. The Blue and Gold were down 34-37 at the half time, a half marked by a run and shoot type of basketball on both sides. During the second half, however, the Indians tightened up their defense and controlled the boards, tying up the game, 63-63, at the end of regulation time. The overtime period was all Juniata's, as

Indians Downed By Hot-Shooting Warrior:

Wednesday night Juniata's basketball Indians ran into a sharp-shooting Lycoming five that was not to be denied as it rang up a 103 to 85 victory. It wasn't really that bad a game that the Indians played, considering the two week holiday lay off. It was rather some phenomenal second half shooting from the corners and out front by Lycoming, particularly senior forward Ron Travis, who poured through 33 points. The Indian team effort, marked by some ball-handling and defensive lapses resulting in several foul calls, was also strong offensively.

High man for the night was Will Brandeau, who had 20 points and perhaps his best night ever on the Memorial Gym Floor. Will was given substantial help by co-captain Jim Doyle (17), Clair Kenyon (15), and a much improved Bob Chandler (14). The Indians, whose season record now breaks even at 3 and 3, next travel to play a nationally ranked University of Scranton team this Saturday.

The night was not a total loss, however, as the JV's rang up a 73 to 67 behind the fine offensive play of Joel Delewski, Gene Galbraith, Adam Barnhart, and Bill Stavisky.

Phillies Hire JC '66 Grad

James Howard Bronson

Jim Bronson, 1966 graduate of JC, was named a management trainee at the Philadelphia Phillies' Reading club of the Class AA Eastern League. The Phillies in recent years have made it a policy to place young men in their farm system as management trainees.

"We felt Reading was an ideal place for young Bronson to break in," Paul Owens, Phillies farm club director, said. "He will be working under Bob Quinn, who most certainly has the knowledge and experience so necessary in minor league baseball." Quinn had this to say, "Bronson has a fine, warm, and dynamic personality, and he wants to learn the baseball business from the ground up. He will have every opportunity here to prove himself and I have every reason to believe he will."

In his senior year at JC Bronson was the recipient of the Stanford Mickle Athletic Award for outstanding contributions to Juniata sports. He was recognized as Juniata's best baseball manager.

French Club Presents "Mardi Gras"

An innocent little old lady sneaks up behind a pair of lovers and sprinkles them with confetti. Staid businessmen dressed in outlandish costumes are seen staggering home. Every morning the streets that were clean the night before are littered with confetti, paper hats and noisemakers. Halloween? New Years? No! It's carnival in France, Germany and some parts of the United States and South America.

Starting Twelfth Night, January 6, and ending on Shrove Tuesday, merrymakers fete the remaining days before Lent. A holdover from an ancient Roman custom of celebration before a period of fast, carnival is a time of complete abandonment as whole cities shed their reserve and enter into the fun.

Shrove Tuesday, coming before Ash Wednesday, is the traditional day for being shroven or confessed of all sins. In France the day is Mardi Gras, literally fat Tuesday, supposedly from the custom of parading a fat ox through the streets of Paris on that day. Germans know it as Fasnacht (fast) and the English as Pancake Day. This latter expression, like the popularity of crepes and doughnuts as carnival foods, comes from the habit of using up all the eggs, grease and lard that would be forbidden during Lent.

French colonists brought carnival to North America in 1766. New Orleans has continued the tradition with a week-long celebration ending with a Mardi Gras parade and costume ball. Alabama, Florida and eight Louisiana counties observe Shrove Tuesday as a legal holiday.

Although it will probably not be warm enough to dance in the streets, a Mardi Gras Bal Masque has been organized for Juniata students and professors by nostalgic campus Francophiles. Revelers are invited to the home of Dr. and Mrs. Ronald Cherry, 1830 Millfin St., from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m. Wednesday. Admission will be by costume only. Games, dancing, food and conversation are the order for the evening. As with previous French nights, English will be spoken.

Student Body To Vote On Senate Constitution

The proposed constitution that Juniata's Student Senate has been working on this year has been completed, but must be ratified by the student body before it can become official. This ratification vote will take place Thursday, February 9 at the usual place. It is necessary that 74 of the student body vote in favor of the constitution before it can be adopted.

This Constitution will provide for a completely new type of student government. The new student government will be divided into four groups: the executive, legislature, cabinet and dormitory government.

The executive will consist of the president and vice-president and will serve as the co-ordinating link between the other branches of government. Instead of an elected treasurer, there will be a treasurer and an assistant treasurer who will be hired and salaried. There will also be an executive staff composed of the executive secretary and a publicity director who will likewise be hired.

The legislature will be made up of four students from each class and will be the primary policy making organization for the student body. The legislature will be elected in the following manner: each voter will have five votes, two of which he may cast outside of his class. This method has been proposed so that students who know people outside of their class, who they feel would make good representatives will be able to vote for them. The President will be the presiding officer of the legislature and shall vote only to break a tie.

The cabinet will be made up of the chairman of athletics, chairman of class and club activities, chairman of communications, chairman of social activities, and co-ordinator of special activities. The members of the cabinet will be elected by the general student body and will be the administrative body of the student government.

By dividing the student government into these different bodies, it is expected that the student government will be able to look into more of the problems of the students and to either make policy to correct them or to suggest policy corrections to the college administration.

SALUT Undergoes Renovation

Juniata's student coffee house has been undergoing a bit of renovation. The Coffee House Committee decided to make Salut more attractive and comfortable and less rustic.

Many of the committee members who have seen famous New York versions of coffee houses have agreed that comfort and attractiveness are adjuncts to the informal atmosphere. Widespread change will be seen in Salut with regular entertainment, and from time to time art exhibits, poetry workshops and other such activities of direct interest to the student body.

SNEAK PREVIEW

Students will have a sneak preview of the new Salut this evening. The Coffee House musicians will stand aside for some visiting musicians who will present a performance of modern jazz. Salut will be open regularly with the next week's renovation to provide another form for JC students' social activities.

Homecoming Concert To Conclude 35th Session Of JC Touring Choir

The college choir began its annual tour of high schools and churches last Saturday. Under the direction of Bruce A. Hirt, assistant professor of music, the 54 member choir will make 16 appearances.

Now in its thirty-fifth season, the Juniata choir offers a program ranging from sacred to classical and includes organ and piano accompanists, a brass quartet and a costumed "Trial by Jury" by Gilbert and Sullivan. Accompanists are Bob McDowell on piano and Cathy Hoover on piano and organ. The ensemble consists of Charles Lare and Larry Brown on trumpet, Bob Guinter on French horn, and Terry Ryan on trombone. Nancy Fike will accompany the choir on the flute in one selection.

Scope Committee Reviews Women's Hours Regulations

by Candy Wamsley

SCOPE? — What is it? It is a group of students on the JC campus interested in discussing and debating the policies of the college and in hopefully formulating recommendations for change, where necessary. It is a Student Committee On Policy Evaluation.

The committee, headed by Dave Gould and Paul Morse, grew out of the recent disturbance concerning women's sign-out procedure. Something was needed as an outlet for student opinion, something more formal than bull sessions in the dorms. Dave and Paul felt this need and organized the evaluation committee, making it open to any and all students and thus to any and all opinions.

As the committee met it was recognized that in loco parentis policy was not the only problem. Women's hours and the judicial function came to the attention of the group. To better facilitate discussion and constructive action the committee divided into three sub-committees: women's hours, judiciary, and off-campus regulations.

Committee Subdivided

The current problems will be debated in the smaller groups and then submitted to the larger committee for approval or change. The committee will then make its recommendation to the Student Government, who will discuss the matter and as the proper authority make any recommendations to the administration. This process, although lengthy, will eventually reach those in charge through the proper channels and as a proposal of the student body as a whole, not as the opinion of a small number of students.

The women's hours committee, headed by Maxine Phillips is to serve as an advisory group. It will submit its proposals to Women's House as part of an evaluation of women's regulations. Maxine's committee has investigated the hours for women on other college campuses. They have also surveyed every co-ed on campus, believing that "they would not be justified in asking for something that the girls didn't want."

Hours Survey

The survey attempted to discover if the girls wanted any change and if so what was it. Some questions concerned overnights during the week, summer school hours and regulations at home. An "overwhelming" number of girls, it was discovered, had no hours at home. Maxine reported that the results were "fairly conservative", becoming more liberal for seniors. With little to do there seemed no reason for late hours. This was the general attitude reported by the committee. Most girls wanted the same type of graduated system, but allow-

JC Assumes $800,000 Costs For New Academic Center

Nostalgic memories seemed to fly from the windows of the Old Science Building as debris tumbled from the upper floors into dump trucks parked below. Construction began January 16 on the new Academic Center at Juniata College as Gamble and Gamble, contractors of Bolivar, started to remove the interior of the old building.

College authorities estimate the entire project will be completed in a year. By that time the old building will be the center section of a structure nearly twice as large as the original.

The Academic Center is expected to cost about $800,000. It will contain a total of 17,784 gross square feet of new construction compared to the present 13,328. Juniata authorities estimate that the completed building will contain an estimated 133 percent increase in floor space.

Construction was made possible by a recent Federal Grant under Title I, Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963. Architects are Hunter, Campbell and Rae of Altoona who have designed the new building in a style they describe as "contemporary colonial" using a combination of stone and brick and white trim to harmonize with the new Brumbaugh Science Complex and the L. A. Beeghly Library.

There will be 13 new classrooms, two instructional laboratories and 20 faculty offices in the old section and 19 classrooms and two instructional laboratories in the new wings. The entire building will be air-conditioned.

NIH To Recruit JC Students For Clinic Volunteer Patients

Are you interested in making a lasting contribution to all mankind through the investigation and conquest of disease?

The National Institutes of Health, in Bethesda, Md., which represents the foremost research program in the United States in seven different areas of health research, recruits students in the capacity of normal control patients. The Brethren Service Commission co-operates with NIH and colleges in the recruitment of students.

To serve in the capacity of a control patient, it is required that an individual be well disciplined, emotionally stable, and physically strong. It is an entirely safe program of medical research in which the rewards in the knowledge that one is making a significant contribution to serious research greatly outweigh any discomfort or inconvenience involved.

Moreover, study patients have the opportunity to carry out work assignments in labs, occupational therapy, recreation, animal production, and many other divisions of NIH. These opportunities should be of interest to students who are majoring in pre-med, biology, psychology, physics, chemistry, home economics, and similar fields.

Students receive $100 per month and all other expenses for their services.

Mr. Dilbert L. Nye, Chief of the Normal Volunteer Patient Section at the Clinical Center of NIH will be on campus February 7 and 8 to conduct interviews with students interested in volunteering for this program. Interviews should be scheduled now through the Placement Office. For additional information, see Mr. Clarence Rosenberger, Director of Church Relations here. A story reprinted from Grit News about Juniata's previous volunteers is posted on the Public Information bulletin board on third Founders and offers some interesting sidelights to the program.

Vote to Ratify

The Senate has done it. Through serious and painstaking efforts, student government reorganization has been effected and its realization depends now only on the student body for ratification of the new constitution by vote next Thursday.

The Juniata has published the constitution in co-operation with the re-organizers in the hopes that every student might have the opportunity to read his constitution and be more adequately prepared to ratify it next Thursday.

Everyone has in the past complained at one time or another about what the Senate has or has not done. Even the Senate itself realized that reorganization was the only answer.

And now, in the end, it is ultimately up to every individual student to make the final decision, for his own sake. Vote for ratification.

Letters to the Editor

On Home Economics

To the Editor:

Several articles and letters have caused concern among those most affected by the phasing out of the Home Economics Department. The decision to drop the department is of much more concern than just the exchange of articles and letters. A survey taken by the department reveals that there is more than just a little interest on campus. The survey of women students was taken during the Fall '66 semester. In the survey it was found that 20 have taken one or more courses in the department, 79 would like to take at least one course, and 9 would like to become Home Economics majors if it would be possible. This total, plus the 30 Home Economics majors is a sum of 138 women students, over one-third of the 400 women on campus, who are interested in the Home Economics department. Should it be phased out?

Painted Sheets

Ed. Note: The following letter from the associated Linen Supply Company was forwarded to the Juniata by the Senate.

To the Editor:

For the second year in a row, some of your students have taken sheets from the College Linen Service and painted them, thereby rendering these sheets useless. Since we cannot remove the stains, we have been forced to bill the students for these sheets. We would point out that willful destruction of someone else's property is hardly the act of a responsible college student. We would also mention the fact that at various times during the year, we have available sheets which we cannot use for any of our regular accounts and which could be purchased by the students for pennies. If it was absolutely necessary that they use sheets for their decorations.

'Round Campus

Tuesday night's JC movies brought a variety of comments from those students attending. However, one event connected with the movies that many of them were unanimously unhappy about was the parking tickets they all received for parking in the meter lot behind Miller's Hardware. It seems the Borough of Huntingdon has now adopted a 24 hour parking meter system.

With March 18, the date set for All Class Night, fast approaching, the respective classes on campus are beginning to have their meetings in preparation for the big event. Incidentally, there will be a sophomore class meeting Monday, February 6 at 7:30 p.m. in S202. All sophomores are urged to come with their ideas. Surely the seniors won't take all the class prizes this year.

Saturday night should prove to be quite interesting here at JC as far as entertainment is concerned. Three big events have been planned for our enjoyment. Being featured at 7:30 in Oller Hall is the recent film of the adventures of Audrey Hepburn and Cary Grant in Paris in the movie "Charade." In the Women's gym at 8:30 a different type of program will be presented in the form of a Faculty Talent Show. This ought to be worth seeing. Then rounding out the evening will be a dance from 9-12 in Tussy-Terrace Rec Room featuring "The After Six." This campus group was very enthusiastically received they played over term break at the "Raven," a popular teen-age nightclub in Harrisburg.

Much to the embarrassment of many of the girls on her hall, a sophomore on third Leshar related a very unfortunate experience she had on a bus in Altoona over break. Just ask her and she'll be willing to tell you about it!

The Girls' Basketball Team has resumed practice after a three week recess for exams and term break. Their next game will be Thursday, February 9, at Grier school. The girls defeated Grier earlier in the season on their home court.

Second semester has brought a host of new faces to Juniata's campus. Here's hoping they'll all soon be made to feel at home and will be caught up in the friendly spirit here at JC.

Since "every term is a new beginning," everyone experiences the hustle and bustle during the first week. Students are industriously digging in to their new causes and vowing to study harder. The registrar got to feel what it's like to be on the other side of the counter Tuesday when he was unanimously refused time for a cup of coffee by an office full of tired students seeking schedule changes.

One senior birthday boy, still feeling the "spirits" connected with his big day, has decided not to stop there but to keep going by celebrating the birthdays of his friends—all day JRE

Various Factors Color Outlook Of Day Students

by Nancy Heaton

The day student at Juniata can either become an integral part of the college community, or he can remain aloof from college activities.

Many day students are interested mainly in attending Juniata to obtain an education, they are not interested in college social life. This is a result of the fact that many day students hold full-time jobs while they are attending classes. Some are married and have families. Their interests are not the same as those of most of the other students. The unmarried day student who does not participate in college activities is usually the one who has many other interests throughout the community. They form the basis of his life. Thus he does not become involved with campus activities.

The day students who do take an active part in campus affairs are usually those who are free from the responsibilities of a home and family.

Although the day student lacks dormitory life, he can easily make friends in classes and in clubs and athletic organizations. It often takes a day student longer to make close friends because he is not on campus as much of the time as a resident student. But within a short time, he can establish close, long-lasting friendships.

There are both disadvantages and advantages to being a day student. One disadvantage is the lack of personality development caused by living with others in the dormitory. Another disadvantage is that often the day student is not able to get to know as many people as well as most resident students do.

There are many advantages to being a day student. Some of these advantages include such things as the use of the family car, Mom's good home-cooked food, and the comfortable familiarity and closeness of home and family.

Day students are like resident students in that they can either participate or not participate in college activities. It is a matter that is entirely up to the individual to decide; it is not a matter of campus residency.

The Dining Hall Committee has announced that suggestion boxes will be placed in the dining halls so that students might have the opportunity to assist the Committee in its efforts. Suggestions are to be signed with full name.

Educational TV Serves Broad Academic Purpose

by Paul Keely

Although television as a mass medium has occasionally been subjected to such unflattering epithets as "idiot box" and "vast wasteland," it has of late gained some amount of respect as the result of its increasing utilization as an effective instrument in the educational processes. Television has proved a valuable asset to education not only in closed circuit form for formal instruction in many progressive schools, colleges, and universities, but also in mass medium form with programs aimed at the interests of the general viewing public.

There is hope yet for Juniata College's vidios and even for those individuals who have taken a limited interest in television because of its apparent lack of intellectual appeal. For those who are unaware, WPSX-TV, Channel 3, has been broadcasting for about two years over a special cable hook-up system. The necessary connections have been made on Juniata's campus at Totem Inn, and through the efforts of men's council, at the men's dormitories.

Daytime programming in conjunction with the Allegheny Educational Broadcast Council serves schools in a 60-mile radius from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Programs of college interest, dealing with a variety of educational and cultural topics, are aired from 7 to 11 p.m. Many such programs, some of which originate at Penn State studios, are of significance for particular courses. The National Educational Television (NET) programs have proven beneficial for classes as have the "Play of the Week" features on Wednesday at 9 p.m. Currently in progress is a 12-part series, "Nine to Get Ready" (Tuesdays at 9:30 p.m.), which tells the story of child-birth from conception to the moment of birth. Weekly schedules of WPSX-TV programs are usually posted on bulletin boards across from the President's office, at the entrance to Brumbaugh Lounge, and in Totem Inn. More information concerning special programs is available to students through Lillian Junas, coordinator of audio-visual aids.

Because of Juniata's proximity to the Penn State studios of WPSX-TV, its faculty members and students have had occasion to participate in various programs: Class of 1966 members Thomas Pheasant and Joseph Weaver were filmed in round-table discussions with students from Lock Haven and Penn State during the summer and fall of 1965; Assistant Professors Dale Wampler (chemistry), Kenneth Rockwell (biology), and Peter Trexler (geology) and Associate Professor Wilfred Norris (physics) discussed on a live program the role of science in the small liberal arts college; and Associate Professor of Art Steven Barbash narrated a film of one of Juniata's art exhibits. Further activity here at JC has been curbed by financial difficulties: it does not cost much to send personnel to Penn State, but it is expensive to transport the necessary men and equipment from there to here.

Through the efforts of the faculty Educational Resources Committee chaired by Miss Junas, approval has been given by the administration for the purchase of a TV set to be placed in Alumni Hall or one of its related lecture rooms. The set will only be used for academic purposes by classes and students. It is hoped that, if the set is located in Alumni Hall, a television system will be installed, with government aid, to project the TV image onto a larger screen in order to facilitate viewing conditions.

SCOPE

ing hours 1/2 hour later on week nights and an hour later on the week-ends. For the senior year the girls wanted the hours more liberal.

The judiciary committee, headed by Toby Dills, wants a system which represents the student body. In recent years the present system has been by-passed and all cases have gone directly to the deans. Dean Schoenherr, who is legally responsible for any action involving suspension or dismissal, would like to see a more effective judicial system and student recommendation for punishment of an offense.

Due Process

In considering formulation of a judiciary the committee is attempting to incorporate six ideas set down by the American Association of University Professors in a pamphlet concerning student and faculty due process. These ideas are:

1. Service of written charges and a clear and concise statement of the supporting evidence.
2. A reasonable opportunity to answer the charges in writing.
3. A trial before an impartial judge or tribunal.
4. The right of examining and cross-examining witnesses against him and of producing witnesses and other evidence in his behalf.
5. Representation by "counsel" or other friend in court.
6. A right of appeal to an authority higher than the trial court.

Guilt—Or Not?

With these ideas in mind the committee has proposed a disciplinary committee, which hears only cases concerning suspension or dismissal. Other cases would be subject to Men's and Women's House. Two pleas exist—guilty and not guilty. In the first instance the decision on punishment would be recommended with little fuss. If a student would plea not guilty he could introduce student and faculty to speak in his behalf, during a trial. In both cases Dean Schoenherr would be responsible for carrying out the punishment. A student may appeal his case to the Student Activities Committee.

The judiciary will be made up of Dean Schoenherr, two students appointed by the Student Government, and hopefully two faculty.

The third committee is concerned with school regulations off campus from the viewpoint of students, alumni, administration, parents, and the community. Janet Kauffman, head of this committee, believes everyone's beliefs should be taken into consideration to be more representative. Different groups of people have been interviewed to determine their viewpoints.

Committee's Future

This committee considers its biggest problem in the vagueness of the administration's policy and in the big differences in personal opinions. The committee hopes to show through their interviews sensible reasons for their recommendations.

Paul Morse hopes that this committee will not end with the solution of current problems, but will continue to offer an opportunity debate and constructive action concerning campus problems.

Gulf Presents Grant To JC

Juniata College recently received a capital grant of $5,000 from Gulf Oil Corporation as part of the company's Educational Assistance Program, which this year will distribute $2,000,000 to students and institutions of higher education for scholarships and other aid-to-education purposes.

Altogether 45 capital grants totaling $677,500 are being awarded by Gulf this year. The phase of the program is an effort to assist institutions in meeting anticipated growth requirements, to replace obsolete buildings and equipment, and to expand their services.

In addition to capital grants, the other phases of Gulf's comprehensive Educational Assistance Program include Gulf merit scholarships to children of employees and annuitants, employee gift-matching to colleges, departmental assistance grants, graduate fellowship, and various special grants to colleges and universities.

Institutions eligible for capital grants are those which are privately operated and controlled, and which obtain a major portion of their financial support from non-tax sources.

Tryouts for various positions for "Brigadoon" will be held at 4 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday (Feb. 7 and 9) in Oller Hall.

The Lerner and Loewe production will be presented May 5-6, directed by Prof. Bruce Hirsch and staged by Marjorie Hirsch.

Several singing and speaking parts are available as is the role of a male dancer (with a speaking-only part). Also needed are a production manager and persons to work with costumes, makeup, properties, lighting, publicity and stage work. Those interested in production and technical jobs are requested to contact Prof. Hirsch during the tryout times.

Dr. Kihl Reports of South Korea's Support of U.S. Efforts in Viet Nam

Support for the war in Vietnam by the population of South Korea seems to include everyone from cab drivers to intellectuals, according to Dr. Young W. Kihl, assistant professor of political science here.

Dr. Kihl, who recently returned from a visit to his home in Seoul, has many contacts in his native land among people close to the government as well as friends and relatives. South Korea, he said, is supporting the American war effort with 45,000 troops and will soon send 20,000 civilian technicians to South Vietnam.

"The people with whom I spoke seem to favor the United States involvement in Vietnam," Dr. Kihl said, "and one college professor saw no other alternative than to escalate the war to bring about a quick ending."

As a close friend of some of the South Korean Marine Corps officers who participated in the military takeover of the government in 1962, Dr. Kihl has had a strong personal interest in developments in his country. During the recent visit he had many opportunities to talk informally with informed observers of the Korean scene.

"A miracle is happening in South Korea," Dr. Kihl said, "in terms of economic recovery and political modernization following 13 years since the end of the war. Perhaps the future of South Vietnam will also follow the same path as soon as hostilities end in that country."

"There is one important difference," Dr. Kihl noted, "and that is the fact that Vietnam is involved in the painful process of nation building and unlike Korea she has not been successful in forming a single and unified nation."

Dr. Kihl said that Korea is benefiting economically from the war as did Japan during the Korean War but the real benefit, as he sees it in that area, is to Japan whose technology is much more sophisticated and therefore more useful to the American war effort in Vietnam.

Because of the more primitive methods in Korea some strange things happen. For example some manufactured goods for the American military, which require manual labor, are shipped to Korea—since the labor is cheaper—and then re-shipped to Japan for final processing.

Dr. Kihl left the United States on December 18 and arrived in Seoul on the 20th with an overnight stop in Tokyo. He was annoyed at the delay of one hour for customs clearance when the flight itself only required nine hours to cross the Pacific. He made the trip because his mother had suffered a stroke and was in a private hospital in Seoul.

Dr. Kihl was born in Seoul and was a student at Yon Seon High School and later at Kukhak College where he earned his B.A. degree in 1956. Before that, however, he served as a Captain in the Republic of Korea Marine Corps and as an Instructor in the Officers Candidate School from 1950 to 1955.

After earning his degree he became Administrative Assistant to the United Nations Korea Reconstruction Agency in Mungyong and then, later, Protocol Officer, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, until 1957.

In 1959 Dr. Kihl earned a B.A. from Grinnell College and an M.A. from New York University (1960), where he also received his Ph.D. in government and international relations.

He is married to the former Mary Rambo, a 1963 graduate of Juniata College.

The South Korean government is rapidly strengthening the national economy following the devastation caused by their war. Dr. Kihl observed, and they are moving toward fuller political democracy. American financial aid has been reduced although it is still important, as are the benefits of the Vietnam war activity.

One of the most dramatic moves by President Park Chung Hi, the former Army General who was elected President, was the normalization of relations with Korea's old enemy, Japan. Under the agreement to re-establish diplomatic relations, Japan has been making payments for their occupation during and before World War II.

"Never friends with Japan in the past," Kihl pointed out, "the two countries are now working together. President Park pushed this through, despite some opposition within his own country."

Now that South Korea has completed the first five year economic plan, a second has been started. There is a vitality in the country which impressed Dr. Kihl and he thinks it is due to the younger men coming into positions of power. The old politicians were shoved aside when the military took over and gave this group of younger men an opportunity.

Dr. Kihl thinks that President Park has been successful in winning the support of the Korean peasants. Friends and relatives who hurried to Seoul to greet the traveler from America, assured him that conditions were better now. In the city, this was also true as the cab driver assured him on the trip from the airport to downtown Seoul.

Dr. Kihl issued that American private capital was moving into the country and millions are being spent on chemical and fertilizer plants as well as other badly needed industries. Incidents along the demilitarized zone show that the Communist North Korean government is trying to keep pressure on South Korea but Dr. Kihl does not foresee any unusual action developing in the near future.

"If only we didn't have to waste an hour at the airport clearing customs after hurrying by jet across the top of the world," Dr. Kihl said, "Perhaps this delay is an expression of the gap between the world of science and technology and the political world of sovereign nations. If travel by air is going to be of any value because of its speed then our institutions will have to adjust themselves."

On his way back to Juniata College, Dr. Kihl participated in the Conference on Research on International Organizations held at the University of California at Berkeley, January 5 to 8.

Juniata League To Repair Valuable Rare Books As Bicentennial Project

The repair and preservation of the valuable rare books in the L. A. Beeghly Library is the Huntingdon Bicentennial project of the Juniata League according to Mrs. Anne Catlin, Librarian. This important and unusual project was agreed upon in a meeting with Mrs. Chalendar H. Lesher, president and Mrs. John Pennington, project committee chairman of the League.

Mrs. Catlin said the Juniata League volunteers will do cleaning and minor repairs to the large collection of rare books and that money will be donated for the necessary expert repair needed by some of the old volumes.

The collection in the L. A. Beeghly Library includes the Abraham H. Cassel, Martin Grove Brumbaugh and William Emmert Swigart donations plus gifts from many other sources. Scholars and students use the books for research in early Pennsylvania history and in church history. Many volumes are badly in need of leather preservative on the covers and repair to bindings.

The oldest book, from the incunabula period of printing, is badly in need of rebounding. Mrs. Catlin pointed out. This is the Nuremberg Bible of approximately 1476-78.

The Treasure Room of the library contains the famous Bibles printed by Christopher Sauer of Germantown. These three Bibles represent the first Bible printed in European language in America (1743) the first Bible printed on American made paper (1763) and the first Bible using American manufactured type (1776).

Also located in the Library, which was built in 1963, are manuscripts, letters and diaries relating to the Church of the Brethren. The services to the College include instruction in the use of library tools, exhibits and art collections. The rare books are an important part of this entire educational activity, according to Mrs. Catlin.

Oral Interp. Class Attends Theatre Festival in Ohio

In order to become acquainted with various methods of reader presentations, the oral interpretation class of Juniata College is presently attending a two-day Readers' Theatre Festival at Otterbein College in Westerville, O.

The class is not actively participating since the festival is scheduled during the first week of Juniata's spring semester, however, the group will take part in the workshop discussions. With the hope of presenting some reading programs this spring, the Juniata students are expecting to learn various kinds of materials suited to Readers' Theatre.

Accompanied by Dr. Esther M.

Doyle, professor of English, the class includes Carolyn Bugel, Kenton Culbertson, Susan Dettar, Dorothy Deuchard, Prudence Engle, Karen Landes, James Laskaris, Robert Pascale, Carole Peters, and Gary Rowe.

Colleges and universities presenting programs at the festival are Bowling Green State, Georgetown, Marietta, Northwestern, Ohio State, Ohio University, Ohio Wesleyan, Otterbein, Southwest (Mo.) State, and Western Michigan.

Dr. Doyle last week attended a symposium, "The Nature of Comedy," sponsored by The McCarter Theatre of Princeton, N.J.

H. B. Brumbaugh Chosen As Chairman of Alumni Council

Harold B. Brumbaugh, vice-president for development has been chosen Chairman-elect for 1967-68 by District 11 of the American Alumni Council.

Meeting in Philadelphia, the AAC District 11 representing 346 colleges and universities in the Middle Atlantic States, will elect officers and hold conferences on alumni organizational work, fund raising, publications and other problems of higher education.

In addition to the United States, the national council represents members in Canada, Japan, Lebanon, Mexico, the Philippine Republic, South Africa and Switzerland.

Brumbaugh was honored by the AAC in 1963 "for a quarter century of outstanding service to the cause of higher education and the advancement of alumni interest."

Born in Woodbury, Bedford County, Brumbaugh attended Altoona High School and graduated from Juniata College in 1933. He joined the staff of the College as assistant to the president in 1936.

Before returning to his alma mater he taught school briefly in Woodbury and New Paris. In 1963 Brumbaugh was appointed vice-president with responsibility for alumni, public relations and development.

Brumbaugh is also a church and civic leader. In 1963 he was president of the Middle District Men's Work Council of the Church of the Brethren. He is a past president of the Rotary Club of Huntingdon.

Boston University students taking a mid-year exam in Psychology of Personality burst into tension-relieving laughter when this film notice was innocently posted on the blackboard: "Following this exam, in room 323 of the Sherman Union, 'Feelings of Hostility' will be shown." Nagle Delivers Talk To Geology Society

Underwater sliding of sediment due to earthquake shock is the subject of a paper to be delivered at the annual meeting of the Northeastern Section of the Geological Society of America by Dr. Frederick Nagle, Jr., assistant professor of Geology at Juniata College.

Although the rocks studied by Dr. Nagle are approximately 70 million years old it is possible, he believes, that the sliding which caused such extensive damage in Alaska is produced by similar conditions.

It is only recently, Nagle said, that scientists have realized the similarity between the rock records of the distant past and the sliding threat to construction in areas subject to earthquakes as happened along the Alaskan shoreline.

The meeting where Dr. Nagle will present his paper, is being held in Boston, Mass., March 16 to 18 under the sponsorship of Harvard University, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Tufts University and the United States Geological Survey personnel in cooperation with the Boston Geological Society.

Dr. Nagle's report is the outgrowth of work on his Ph.D. thesis at Princeton University and in the Dominican Republic, the paper deals with submarine slumping of marine sediments triggered by earthquake shock.

"The present-day phenomena of spontaneous liquefaction," Dr. Nagle said, "by shock and subsequent sliding of water laden sediments has only recently been recognized as a construction hazard in regions subject to earthquakes."

Nagle recently passed his final dissertation oral examination for his Ph.D. in Geology from Princeton. His research was on the Puerto Plata area which had not previously been studied. The studies were sponsored by the Princeton University Caribbean Research Foundation and the National Science Foundation.

Nagle earned his B.A. from Lafayette College (1958) and his M.A. (1961) from Princeton. He is a member of the Geological Society of America and the Mineralogical Society of America.

WIC, campus radio station, will be conducting auditions in the station from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Monday and Tuesday. If unable to audition at this time, interested students should see a member of the staff (Jake Barton, Bill Roddey, John Tush, Suzy Fodor, Terry Wickham, Robbie Johnson, Bruce Hockman, or RALPH).

JC's "After Six" To Tour Colleges

"After Six", one of JC's music groups will soon display their rhythm and blues style to audiences at Princeton, Bucknell, Gettysburg, Dickinson and Lehigh.

Local fans of the Motown style can hear "After Six" Saturday night at the Women's Gym, when they play for the weekly college dance, according to George vonHacht, junior.

The group was organized in the fall of 1965 and has perfected their style to the point where in March they will be playing with Smoky Robinson and the Miracles in a date which may bring them a record contract with Motown Records of Detroit.

Recently "After Six" played at the Raven in Harrisburg with Gene Chandler, famous for the popular record "Duke of Earl." It was based on this performance that the students were booked for dates in eastern colleges and universities.

The vocalist for the group wrote a song entitled "I Don't Care" which has become popular with their audiences and is a permanent part of the group's repertoire.

K. Rockwell Submits Thesis On High Altitude Adaptation

Dr. Kenneth Rockwell earned his B.S. at Juniata in 1957 and earned his M.S. at Brown University. He has been a graduate assistant at the Pennsylvania State University.

In 1965 Dr. Rockwell won the first prize in the Darbaker competition for a paper to be published by the Pennsylvania Academy of Science.

Married to the former Mildred B. Maudeville of Palmyra, N.J., the Rockwells have a daughter Christie and a son Peter. Mrs. Rockwell is also a graduate of Juniata and was a case worker for the Huntingdon County Child Welfare Service.

Rapid breathing and muscle fatigue is a problem encountered by mountain climbers at high altitudes, but the way in which the body controls the situation is the basis for a doctoral thesis at the Pennsylvania State University recently submitted by Dr. Kenneth H. Rockwell, assistant professor of Biology at Juniata College.

This is the third Ph.D. in the Rockwell family. Kenneth's father, Dr. Donald M. Rockwell is Acting Dean of Academic Affairs, Jacob N. and Rachel Brumbaugh Professor of Chemistry and Chairman of the Division of National Sciences. Dr. Rockwell's Ph.D. was received from Yale University in 1932 as was the doctorate of his mother, Katherine Haring Rockwell. Mrs. Rockwell is an instructor in Chemistry on the Juniata faculty.

One result of the study, made on rats under laboratory conditions, was the finding that the pituitary appears to release less hormones at higher altitudes Dr. Rockwell said. The animals seemed to show a slowing of thyroid function and reproduction is also effected.

The Spaniards who conquered South America discovered that the Inca Indians could reproduce but that their own settlers and soldiers could not. Dr. Rockwell pointed out that the Inca physique was well adapted to the high altitude conditions.

An interesting sidelight on this problem of oxygen lack at higher elevations is the necessity of competitors to train for the Olympics in Mexico City at similar altitudes.

Dr. Rockwell, who defended his thesis entitled "A Cytophotometric Analysis of Anterior Pituitary Changes in Rats Exposed to Reduced Pressure," expects to receive his Ph.D. in March. The adviser for his research was Adam Anthony, professor of Zoology.

Dr. Kaylor To Write Interpretative History Of Area's Churches

Dr. Earl C. Kaylor, Jr., professor of religion here and chairman of the Humanities Division has been commissioned by the Historical Committee of the Church of the Brethren in Middle Pennsylvania to write an interpretative history of the church in this area.

At a meeting held recently in Martinsburg, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Ernest Brumbaugh, the chairman of the committee, Rev. Clarence H. Rosenberger, director of church relations here presented Dr. Kaylor with the keys to the repository of historical materials located in the L. A. Beeghly Library.

It was stated that the Historical Committee has been gathering information from the congregations since the program was authorized by the District Meeting in 1961.

The members of the committee present included Clair Holsinger of New Enterprise, Ernest Brumbaugh of Martinsburg, John Swigart, Sr.,

Clyde Staper and District Secretary Bernard King of Huntingdon.

In accepting the appointment, Dr. Kaylor, stated that as an educator and churchman it will be his purpose to make a thorough and accurate study of the subject assigned to him. He indicated that when the manuscript is completed in 1970 he will want it to be a very readable interpretation of what has happened within the denomination from the time the Brethren first came to the area more than 200 years ago.

Dr. Kaylor told the committee that the District History of 1925, edited by Galen B. Royer, will be of invaluable assistance in the preparation of the new volume.

P.S.U. Receives Dr. Zimmerer's Chemistry Thesis

While scientists have isolated the principle chemical responsible for falling leaves in the autumn and the bending of a plant stem toward the light, the exact way in which this phenomenon happens is the subject of a doctoral thesis at The Pennsylvania State University recently completed by Dr. Robert P. Zimmerer, assistant professor of biology at Juniata College.

The results of the research, Zimmerer said, are inconclusive but it appears that the chemical 3-Indoleacetic Acid has an effect on the plant membranes. Further study may indicate how the acid does in fact control the bending of the plant toward light and the falling of ripe fruit from trees and is the reason for the beauty in the autumn of which poets write.

Charles Darwin was the first to show that curvature of the plant stem in response to light or gravity would not occur when the extreme tip of the stem was removed. Zimmerer pointed out that it was not until 1931 that two Dutch chemists isolated the chemical responsible.

Zimmerer said that the chemical has been found to be indispensable for plant growth and has a role in the development of buds and fruit as well as falling leaves, growth of roots and the response to light and gravity.

"We attempted," Zimmerer commented, "to learn something about possible membrane changes by studying the effect of indoleacetic acid on the phospholipids of plant membranes. It had a positive effect and we will investigate the subject further to reach a conclusive answer."

Dr. Robert H. Hamilton, associate professor of Botany at Penn State, Zimmerer said, was his advisor for the thesis.

Zimmerer began his undergraduate studies at the University of Wisconsin at Madison but he spent two years in the military service before earning a BS degree in Botany in 1954.

A number of positions with firms whose major products were agriculture chemicals and paper products occupied Zimmerer before he received his M.S. degree from Cornell University in 1961. That same year he became an instructor at Juniata College and in 1963 was made assistant professor.

Zimmerer has co-authored a number of papers in his field. He is a member of the American Institute of Biological Sciences, American Botanical Society, American Society of Plant Physiologists, Pennsylvania Academy of Science, Society for Cytology, Phi Epsilon Phi and the Society of the Sigma Xi.

In 1956 he married Mary Nugent McLean of Geneva, New York. They have two daughters, Kay and Carolyn and a son William.

Tribe Teams Resume After Semester Break

Grapplers To Meet K-town and Dickinson

Tomorrow, February 4, the Tribe's grapplers travel to Kutztown College. Presently Kutztown has a 2-3 record with wins over Madison College and Trenton State and losses to Millersville, West Chester, and Shippensburg.

Only one letterman is wrestling varsity for Kutztown, and that is Mike Bell in the 130 pound class.

All of the other varsity wrestlers are freshmen. They are: Chuck Joseph, 123; Bryan Thomas, 137; Greg Stein, 145; Fred Holtz, 152; Harry Tachovsky, 160; Jon Ladd, 167; John Bertogana, 177; and John McNabb, 191.

Next Wednesday, February 8, Dickinson travels to Juniata. The Redmen have a 2-1 record with two matches this week against Muhlenberg and Moravian. Dickinson has defeated Johns Hopkins and Susquehanna while losing to Delaware Valley.

Dickinson has four undefeated wrestlers. They are: Gary DePensia, 145, freshman; Henri Rauschenbach, 152, sophomore; Mark Birdsall, 160, senior; and Jim Broughal, 177, senior. In the other weight classes Dickinson has: Phil Jacobson, 123, junior; Allen Bell, 130, junior; Malcolm West, 137, sophomore; Bill Diefenderfer, 167, senior; and Ray Hudak, 191, freshman.

In the week before finals JC lost to Lycoming, 29-9, and beat Bucknell, 25-11. The grapplers' record to date is 3-2.

The only probable change in the line-up for JC will be in the 152-pound class. In the Lycoming match Ron Hoover received an ankle injury which should sideline him for at least the Kutztown meet. Wrestling in his place against Bucknell was freshman Bud Scott.

JC's probable starting line-up will be: Mike McCartney (123), Jack Hooper (130), Tom Light (137), Chris Sherk (145), Bud Scott (152), Jim Pyle (160), Don Hoover (167), Dick Feigles (177), and Pete Schuyler (Unl.).

Juniata's Chris Sherk controls Lycoming's John Marthinson. Sherk won 2-1, but JC lost to Lycoming 29-9.

Warrior Of The Week

Brandau And Chandler Are 3rd And 4th To Receive Award

Named as "Warrior of the Week" for the week of January 3 to January 7, was R. Will Brandau. Two tough games against Lycoming and Scranton were played that week. Brandau scored 29 points and snatched 14 rebounds.

Brandau is the tallest member of the cage quinet at 6'7".

"Because of Will's consistent and dedicated hard work, he has become one of the better big men in the Middle Atlantic Conference," Coach Russ Trimmer said of his junior center. "He wants to be a basketball player and this desire has been paying off."

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Brandau, 60 Union Avenue, New Holland, the Juniata center is a graduate of Garden Spot High School where he played under Coach Bob Wafr.

Sophomore Bob Chandler, 6'2" forward, was named "Warrior of the Week" for his performances against Lock Haven and Ursinus the week of January 9 to January 13. Chandler had 23 total points and 12 rebounds for those two games, but as Coach Trimmer said of his only sophomore on the varsity squad: "The best part of Bob's game is his defensive play, and it has helped us a great bit."

Son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Chandler, Gaithersburg, Maryland, Chandler is a graduate of Bellevue High School, Bellevue, Nebraska where he played under Coach Jack Wood.

Will JC Have Gymnastics?

The possibilities of a Juniata College gymnastics club are somewhat slim though equipment and apparatus are in abundance. The problem is not with student interest or ability, but with the availability of an advisor. Both men and women students have expressed an interest in forming a club or team but the fact remains that apparatus can be dangerous and someone with a great deal of experience and responsibility is required to advise such a club.

Spotlight on IM's

by Bob Dumm

The Has Beens and the Zugs continue to lead class A as they both picked up two more victories. The Has Beens feature a well balanced attack led by Jeff Barnes, Kip Howie, Gary Shepard, and Randy Rolston. The Zugs are led by high scoring Ron Duncan, Bill Williams, and Bob Pouchier.

In B-league, the undefeated Spastics spoiled the Chickenhearts' perfect record. With seconds remaining, Denny Albright missed a foul shot, got the rebound, drove, and scored, giving the Spastics a hard fought, 65-63, victory. Wayne Wisler, Larry Bieber, and Toby Dills had over fifteen points apiece for the Spastics while Bill McQuade pumped in 29 for the loser.

The race in C-league is very close. Both the Soul Brothers and Gross Men are undefeated while the Wee Five have only one defeat.

The IM basketball standings up to Thursday, January 10 are:

Roundballers Play Two Away

Tomorrow, February 4, Juniata's basketball team travels to Wilkes-Barre to meet the Wilkes College Colonels.

As of January 28, the Colonels had won 2 games and lost 8. In the MAC's their record was 0-7.

Wilkes has six lettermen back from a team that won 5 while losing 14 last season. Three senior lettermen on the team are: Dale Nicholson, 6'2" forward, Mike Sharok, 5'11" guard, and Joe Stankus, 6'5" center. The only junior letterman is Jim Smith, 6'1" forward. Reuben Daniels, 6'1" guard and William Ryan, 5'11" guard are the sophomore lettermen.

Next Tuesday, February 7, the Indians travel to East Orange, New Jersey to battle the Upsala College Vikings.

The Vikings are 4-11 (with a game against Lagavette to be played tomorrow).

Last year Upsala won 10 and lost 12. Two lettermen returned from that team, sophomore Paul Doliny, 6' guard, and senior Wikin Mahland, 6'3" forward.

This year Doliny has been leading the Vikings in scoring with an 18.6 average per game. Behind him in scoring are two freshmen, Dave Salerno, 6'4" forward, and John Sharoba, 6'2" forward. Salerno has a 12.0 average and Sharoba has a 10.2 average.

Juniata goes into the Wilkes game with a 4-6 record.

Leading JC in scoring is Clair Kenyon with 145 points in ten games. Jim Doyle, senior co-captain, is second with 117 points.

In the rebounding department, Will Brandau, 6'7" center, has pulled down 78 in ten games. Dale Brandwater, 6', has 49 and Bob Chandler, 6'2", has 41.

Kenyon, junior guard, was named to the Weekly All-East Division III team of the Eastern College Athletic Conference for two consecutive weeks previous to the semester break.

Game results not reported in the JUNIATAN due to the final exam break are listed below:

Women's B-ball Gets Under Way

Last evening women's intramural basketball got under way on Juniata's campus.

The league consists of eight teams. The freshmen girls have three teams. The sophomore girls have two teams, while the junior, seniors, and women faculty have one team each.

The games will be played every Thursday in Women's Gym starting at 7:00. Four games will be played a night. There will be four five minute quarters in each game.

The intramural tournament is being completely run by college women with Sue Detar in the lead. She is making all of the arrangements for the league. Many of the women varsity players will be referees for the games. The tournament will be a double elimination type.

For those who are not familiar with girls basketball rules a few of the differences are listed. Each team fields six players at a time. There are three forwards restricted to one-half of their court and three guards restricted to the other half. Whenever the ball crosses to one-half of the court one of the forwards or guards, as the case may be, is allowed to cross center court to the half with the ball. Most of the other rules are basically the same as men's basketball.

Concert Choir Concludes Eight-Day Tour

Hirsch And Company To Present Finale For Student Body

Two busloads of JC songsters and musicians returned home late last Sunday after a successful eight day tour of the Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, and Delaware area.

The vocalists, who had been on the road from January 28 to February 5, presented a diverse musical program to a total of 16 audiences. This year, performances were given at churches of various denominations. In addition to the Brethren churches, concerts were delivered at Presbyterian, Reformed, Episcopalian, and Methodist churches.

The choir alternates annually between an Eastern and Western tour. Because a heavy snowfall curtailed last year's Eastern concerts though, the tour of '67 was again performed before Eastern spectators.

According to Assistant Professor of Music Bruce A. Hirsch, touring choir director for the second consecutive year, the short-lived tour of 1966 was due to the fact that then the choir robes were ice blue in color, hardly appropriate for melting the freezing snows. This year, the new red hot robes, capable of melting any Siberian drifts, assured the choir a triumphant tour.

Although natural elements did not delay the JC songsters during this season, the troupe faced other trauma, such as temporarily losing their way or finding themselves out of gas along a busy highway. Despite such obstacles, the major consensus among participating choristers was that it was an enjoyable and rewarding experience.

The grand finale for the touring choir will be their Homecoming Concert next Monday, February 13 in Oller Hall. Featured in the program will be excerpts from their road performances, including "Trial by Jury," the Gilbert and Sullivan satire on the court's dealing with breach of promise.

The general attitude of the JC choir was best summed up by a spectator who attended one of this year's presentations—"When they perform, they really look like they have fun."

Monitor's Sperling Calls For Progress In Govt. Morality

by Paul Keely

It took a six-hour train ride with three different change-overs to bring the Christian Science Monitor's Washington Bureau News Manager to Huntingdon and the Juniata campus to deliver a Focus Series lecture February 2. "But it was no different from the life of a reporter," Godfrey Sperling, Jr., assured Dr. Young Kuhl's Political Process class and sundry visitors in initiating an afternoon discussion session.

"Fatigue is a way of life for the political writer," continued Sperling, "especially in the present Jet Age when he finds himself following a candidate all over the United States." Sperling spoke from experience, having covered, since 1952, presidential candidates from Dwight Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson to Barry Goldwater and Lyndon Johnson. The informal afternoon gathering heard Sperling confidentially excerpt some of his unpublished personal interviews with Eisenhower and the late John Kennedy. In relating that he was often asked what a certain political figure was like, Sperling emphasized that it is necessary to take into consideration the possibility of a person's feelings changing with respect to particular situations.

On the topic of today's young people Sperling commented, "I don't find youth as bad as they tell me." This is the "greatest younger generation," he said, "... They're more interested in what's going on in the world." In answering an inquiry about the leftist movement on college and university campuses, the journalist asserted that "there is nothing more important in the halls of learning than freedom of expression." He was quick to add, though, that the line must be drawn somewhere.

When the scene shifted to Oller Hall in the evening, Sperling prefaced his Focus lecture with a briefing on a recent survey conducted among U.S. Senators in questionnaire form concerning the Selective Service System. There was a strong enough return, he noted, to give some indication of what the related Presidential Commission might recommend: the consensus favored some changes in the draft system, was opposed to a national lottery, supported four-year college deferments, and agreed that the draft is necessary now and in the future.

In his lecture entitled "Principals, Payola, Politics and America's Moral Tone," Sperling's main concern was the improvement of government from an ethical perspective. He cited Senator John Williams of Delaware, Senate "watchdog" and instigator of the Bobby Baker investigations, as noting that Washington, with all its political and economic wealth, is certainly a center of "enticement for the wrongdoer." To provide a comparative assessment of the degree of

"An Evening's Frost" To Be Presented By JC Focus Series

For an evening Will Geer will become Robert Frost to engage in a dramatic presentation of his poems, prose and letters. "An Evening's Frost" is being presented as part of the Focus on Art and Life Series next Friday at 8:15 p.m. in Oller Hall.

In the "New York Times" Harry Gilroy commented on Geer's performance: "Will Geer begins with Shakespearean training that gives him full use of the power and rhythm of simple language. Then, too, he looks like Frost. He makes a spectator think of Raymond Massey making himself into an Abe Lincoln. So Mr. Geer, before the evening is out, is a Robert Frost."

Miss Marcella Cisney, Director of the Professional Theatre Program of the University of Michigan, conceived the idea of this dramatic presentation. In cooperation with Donald Hall, Poet-in-Residence at the University, the production saw its first presentation at the University of Michigan.

Professor Hall was able to offer valuable advice to the creation of the script because of his friendship with the late poet. While Hall was Resident at the University, Robert Frost was Poet-in-Residence. Hall has written published poetry and prose and unpublished dramatic scripts. Upon the commissioning of "An Evening's Frost" by the Professional Theatre Program, he entered professional theatre.

Director Cisney staged the program's tour, which started in January. She has directed for the Theatre Guild-State Department world tour and at the New York City opera, in addition to directing in theatre, films and television. She is currently Associate Director of the University of Michigan Professional Theatre Program.

Geer began his theatrical career in boat shows, in tents, and as theatre stock. He has appeared in many plays and films and has been a member of the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Conn. He has appeared Off-Broadway, at the Old Globe Theatre, and television, in addition to presenting his readings of Mark Twain and Whitman.

The tour of this production will

Suggestion Boxes Elicit Students' Chow Complaints

Juniata's Dining Hall Committee, established to provide a means for the voice of students to be heard on matters of dining hall service and meals, is attempting to gain this end. Chaired by Dave McKean, the committee is composed of Beth Clopper, Bob Gaylor, Laura Lingenfelter, Karen Klinger, Susan Loose, Dave Kerstetter and Bill Unger.

Suggestion boxes have been installed in both Oneida and Leshner dining halls to receive complaints and comments of students. These suggestions must be signed to be given any consideration by the committee. They will be sorted by members of the committee and passed on to the proper department anonymously.

Recent problems at meals have necessitated the revival of the host system at both dining halls. Employed by the College, the hosts are Phil Eatough, Dick Snyder, Leroy Mell, Cliff Berg, Dave Gould, Regis Beighley, Bob McDowell, Jim Chesney and Ed Rodgers. Essentially, their purpose is to check for proper dress and conduct. They represent figures of authority, previously lacking at meals.

Both Deans Helmes and Schoenherr expressed opinions indicating that they felt improvement in dress and manners since the reinstatement of the host program. Schoenherr anticipates that the proposed college center will greatly change the dining hall situation. A new cafeteria in the center will accommodate 800 students at one time.

With this new building shortly to become a reality, major changes in the present dining halls are out, although Schoenherr feels that some minor expenditures could be made until that time.

The scene as winter made the most recent of its infrequent arrivals. Someone suggested that Dr. Crouch—The Rainmaker—had something to do with it. After all, snow is just very cold rain.

Futile Harping?

One of the most gratifying things to observe is to see concrete suggestions come out of nebulous plans; to see people doing something and getting something done.

In this respect, what SCOPE has done is gratifying. Since hardly anyone was at the most recent meeting to find out, it should be announced that they've really come up with something worthwhile. The women's hours recommendation has been formulated, and the rest of the proposals are on the way. The suggested hours look good, and we would urge the students to give them all the support they can.

However, it is distressing to find so few people at a SCOPE meeting by which significant things are being done for those persons who aren't there, and who never will be (and who will do a lot of complaining about what wasn't done for them.) Senate meetings are as disappointing, . . .

HARPING?

But we're probably harping on the same old thing, so why don't we just give it up as trivial in its futility. That futility begins to give the observer the feeling that the prevailing attitude is not unique to Juniata. Other campuses are apparently subject to the same attitudes of indifference and alienation of groups. Newsweek reports of Colorado University: "There is a small but lively hippie scene, Berkeley-style student activists who are out to change the world and the hardcore fraternity-sorority cliques who aren't interested in changing much more than their housemothers. Lately the groups have been growing closer together."

To be sure, Juniata isn't the 'hippest' campus in the world, our activists are few and far between, and we completely lack any Greek society. Nevertheless, there is a grouping that may be peculiar to JC and which needs to become more unified.

To erase the alienation and cure the indifferent attitude would create a utopian JC. But are these problems even unique on the student level? Probably not. A recent news broadcast stated that 3,837 of a nearby county's registered voters were stricken from the list for failure to vote in the last two general elections. That is frightening if it seems to indicate that things won't be much different when "we get out into life." Evidently indifference is, except for rare individuals like SCOPE committee members and other people that care enough to be willing to do a fairly universal human characteristic.

Doesn't this in itself disturb you?

Or then again, maybe you just don't care.

Senate News and Views

Prue Engle
Senate reporter

At last night's short but important Senate meeting, the first committee report from SCOPE was presented for approval. Maxine Phillips, chairman of the SCOPE sub-committee examining women's hours, presented the committee's recommendation for changes.

The changes called for in the report are based on the results of a questionnaire completed by over 34 of the women students at Juniata. The proposed changes will insure a more lenient and more graduated system of hours than now exists.

Unanimously accepted by the Senate, the recommendation now goes to Women's Government for discussion and approval next Tuesday. If accepted there, the recommendation goes on to the Dean of Women.

With the successful vote adopting the new Juniata College Student Government Constitution, campaigns for student government and class officers are fast approaching.

Petitions for positions in the Cabinet, Executive, and Dormitory Government will be available Friday, Feb. 17 and are due the following Monday. Campaigns will begin that Monday with campaign speeches scheduled for either Tuesday or Wednesday. Elections will take place Thursday, Feb. 23.

Petitions for class officers and legislators can be obtained Friday, Feb. 24 and are due the following Monday at which time the campaigns will begin. Because of the number of candidates expected to run, there will be no formal campaign speeches. Instead, there will be a discussion and talk-back involving candidates for the Legislature. These elections will take place Thursday, March 2.

A Year With Pizzazz

ACP — 1966 was a year of schizophrenia with pizzazz, according to the University of Kansas Daily Kansan.

It was the year that launched the Yellow Submarine, the Kansan noted, then almost sank John Lennon.

It was the year skirts went up and hair came down. Men cheered the change, even if it meant girls had to roll two feet of hair on soup cans. Tom the Peeper never had it so good when girls tried to sit down in their thigh-high mini-skirts. Modesty died an awkward death.

And it was the year topless clubs spread coast to coast, but one club, apparently unsure that the body was really all that beautiful, asked patrons to sign a statement saying their morals weren't being corrupted.

In passing, it was a good year, if you weren't I-A, afraid of becoming I-A, or in Vietnam. The emphasis was on youth, and adults responded. Sometimes this response caused a few lifted eyebrows, however.

Justice William O. Douglas married a 23-year-old college coed, Catherine Heffernan, and Congressional tongues wagged. Frank Sinatra married that 21-year-old Peyton Place kid and got a few sly winks. The oldsters were acting like youngsters.

Using imagination all their own, the kids turned the tables. Old movies, silent movies, monster movies became a fad. The Bogie cult came on like gang-busters. Even clothing fell into step.

London mods, short on money but rich in imagination, discovered secondhand stores and the Salvation Army look. Girls looked like soldiers or sailors or pieces of high-fashion tinfoil. Shiny silver dresses and accessories became a New York rage, and women wore enough metal to make the U.S. Treasury envious.

It was also the year of the accessory with a message; lapel buttons sounded the sentiments of the moment. Campus wits wore buttons proclaiming "First the morally handicapped," or "Custer died for your sins." Then there was the button that read, "God is not dead; He just doesn't want to get involved."

And was God dead? If he were, the controversy over His demise generated almost enough heat to assure a second coming.

Like God, folk music went underground, and a new, homogenized sound — folk rock — rose to the surface. Enter musical groups with bizarre names and bizarre but often beautiful sounds, like the Mamas and Papas, Simon and Garfunkel.

And in 1966, camp didn't really die, it just went on the tube. In his super-keen Batmobile with Robin at his side, Batman roared into the vast wasteland and was greeted with the biggest howl heard in a long time. Everybody over age nine knew it was designed to be High Camp . . . or was it?

So for 12 months it went — a very fine madness and a kicky kind of year.

Constitutions

by Jim Bryant

It is with amusement that we note the election or at least the approval of a new constitution. This marvelous little device is guaranteed to be the panacea for the ills of a complacent student body. While the vigor exercised by the people behind this move is commendable we cannot help but think that their ardor is misplaced. Juniata needs a new constitution as much as it needs a new science complex. What Juniata needs more than all the student government in the world is students that give a damn. The current apathy index on this campus is exceeded only by the national debt, Lyndon's ego and Sophia Loren's sex appeal. Why not form another Senate and have two. This will cause quite a stink and arouse student interest in whom to back. Then we can threaten the administration with varied and assorted proposals for their approval of these august personages. Not knowing what to do with this uprising they will concede the more conservative demands. Then we disband both governments, store them in an attic in Founder's hall, and trot them out again the next time we want action.

Information regarding making application to the Student Government for a club charter and concession may be found in the office of the Coordinator of Student Affairs. A listing of all active clubs and a policy statement regarding these clubs can also be gotten by contacting that office. Club presidents and department chairmen are urged to procure this statement.

A Case In Point

It wasn't a perfect day for sight-seeing. Clouds loomed restlessly overhead as the family car persistently mounted the steep hillsides.

"I think they call this 'Taylor Highlands,'" offered the young collegiate, referring collectively to the attractive dwellings which comprised one of the most scenic residential sections in the area. An imminent dead end resulted in a right-hand turn.

Breaks in the frontage of houses and trees yielded a splendid view of the spreading landscape below. Such a vantage point was characteristic of the Highlands, which, though enveloped by foliage most of the year, rested so effectively upon the accentuated acclivity north of town that there was created in one's mind the impression of a pedestaled statue, subduing all below it with a countenance that was imaginatively dominating. And the impression seemed irrefutable to those gazing outward from the summit of the slope.

Another right turn was necessitated by the eventual curvature of the macadam toward the main field at the foot of the hill. An open road unfolding before them provided the sightseers with an unobstructed view. At eye level with the distant mountaintops, they beheld a picture come to life: heavy clouds were darkening the hilltops and threatening to cover the valley below with a fresh blanket of snow. The gray countryside, slightly illumined by the last rays of the setting sun, was at rest.

The College bell tower agonizingly fulfilled its task—five o'clock. Entranced gazes returned to the descending roadway ahead, and the car stole forward. An incongruity at the roadside captured passing attentions: there, defiantly strewn amid defiled snow, lay a torn cardboard container and a cluster of abandoned beer cans.

Tonight and tomorrow night Juniata students will have the opportunity to attend the Huntingdon Community Theatre's production of "The Rainmaker" being presented at the Huntingdon Area High School at 8:30 p.m. The price of admission is $1.25 for all students having their I.D. card. Our own Dr. Crouch is the Rainmaker.

Tuesday is the day for which many Juniata students have long been waiting. Perhaps cupid might now help to remedy the present dating (or non-dating) situation by aiming his little red arrows in the right direction. But, be smart! Cupid's going to be mighty busy so take it upon yourself to help him out by sending a Valentine here and there. Better still, if you're a guy, ask a certain someone to the Mid-Winter Formal February 25. Be different! Don't keep up the old, established, Juniata tradition of waiting until two days before the dance and then being refused.

IM basketball games are in full swing for both men and women here at JC. The women's faculty team really surprised the spectators in their first game by a dazzling 34-7 victory over a freshman team. A men's team, the Strange Bedfellows, is having a little difficulty rounding up members for their team. Perhaps their name has something to do with it. Also in the line of human interest, the Red Barons have had 5 wins in a row after two heartbreaking defeats.

Congratulations are extended to four sophomore girls on their acceptance by universities outside the United States to study their junior year. Rietta Klair and Libby Hildebrand plan to study at the University of Valencia in Spain and Maryelise Suffer and Peggy McMardie will be studying at L'Université de Laval in Quebec, Canada. While these girls can relax after receiving their good news, many of us sit on pins and needles awaiting word about Strasbourg and Marburg, Bonne Chance!

Music again fills the air with the return of the Concert Choir from tour. On the whole, the performances all went over very smoothly and were very well received. Several minor complications arose, however, when the buses broke down twice and ran out of gas once so that the entire choir had to pile on one bus in order to make it to the concert on time. All the choir members can only speak highly of the tour and wish the fact that many of them have been stricken with colds and viruses.

Wedding bells will be ringing July 15 for a certain young female phys. ed. instructor on JC's campus, Mr. James Thompson of Taylor Highlands here in Huntingdon will be the lucky guy. Congratulations, Miss Kopac!

The Women's Basketball Team will play host to Lock Haven for their sixth game of the season in the Women's Gym Monday, February 13, at 7 p.m. Then again on Thursday, the girls will see action on their home court against Indiana at 7 p.m.

Here's just a reminder for all those interested to sign up for the retreat "The 8th Day," at Camp Blue Diamond, February 18 and 19. The guest speaker will be Fred Woodbury. Please return the form placed in your mailbox with $3.50 to Ed Connor, Box 89, no later than February 15. Your own bedding and a flashlight are necessary.

Several Juniata guys exhibited their dancing skills at the dance in Tuesday room Saturday night when the "After Six" played. Keep up the good work, fellows.

corruption in government today, Sperling led the audience in a look at yesterday by hitting the highpoints of American history with respect to political graft. He ultimately pointed out that there have been four major scandals in each of the last four administrations.

In that there is a trend toward more civil service in government today, Sperling foresees an opportunity for improvement in morals. The executive branch has moved to set up ethical standards, he said, although Congress continues to be sluggish in adopting policing measures; and, he added, even though the better-educated American public has become more watchful, graft goes on more subtly than ever. Sperling referred to a statement by Senator Williams to the effect that, although there is a better ethical climate in government today, there is still a long way to go.

Are regulations and ethical codes enough to help better the ethical climate? Sperling did not think so; he declared, first of all, that the public conception of politics as a "dirty" business must be changed; secondly, the present imbalance in the two-party system of national government must be corrected; a balance must be struck in order to put an end to hasty legislation. Finally, he called for more participation in government by those qualified; there is a need for better men and women, he explained; monetary contributions alone are just not enough. Sperling conceded that the "heat in the political kitchen is awfully hot" and that "we crucify our men in political life," and consequently it is tough to obtain the services of personnel of potential value, businessmen, for example. The press gets pretty rough at times, he admitted, but it has a role to play, that of asking questions of people in public life and representing the American public in finding out if it is getting its money's worth, in defense, for instance.

Sperling explained the criticism of Lyndon Johnson in that "he brings much of it upon himself." Few people identify themselves as "Johnson Democrats," continued the newsmen, as some have identified themselves as "Roosevelt Democrats" or "Eisenhower Republicans" in the past. He felt that Johnson was hurt in the November 1966 election (in which some 47 Republican Congressmen returned) because of the rampant discord over the Vietnam situation, the off-year, the personal element (of LBJ) involved, and the general climate of anxiety in the U.S. Sperling supposed that Johnson and Humphrey would run again in 1968; but, if the unpopularity should continue, he warned, the Democratic position would be vulnerable. He added that, while George Romney heads the opposition, the Republicans have "a genius for miffing things" and "might do it again."

In conclusion Sperling asserted that "better government begins at home; for better principles in government must raise principled children. . . . Serving, not getting, is of the utmost importance, and there is no more important service than going into government at any level."

Smith Earns Doctorate From Iowa City State U.

An original contribution to the understanding of the rise of nationalism in medieval England has earned a doctor of philosophy degree for Philbrook W. Smith, associate professor of history here.

The Ph.D. degree was awarded in absentia at ceremonies last Saturday at the State University of Iowa City, by President Howard R. Bowen.

Professor Smith's dissertation is entitled "A Study of the Lists of Military and Parliamentary Summons in the Reign of Edward I: The Families of Lists and their Significance." One of the few scholars who has studied in detail the Chancery documents of the period, Smith defended his paper in January.

The original contribution made by Smith in his studies was suggested to him by Dr. Robert Steward Hoyt, chairman of the department of history at the University of Minnesota. In 1962 and 1963 Prof. Smith was granted a sabbatical and a leave of absence from work on the dissertation.

Iowa, Smith said, has an unusual library of material on the medieval period, and the names of men serving ing in the army, and in parliament, were traced to learn more about the growth of national institutions and the dying out of feudalism.

"In the period of Edward I, from 1272 to 1307, we are able to watch the emergence of a national army," Smith said, "as the king builds an army to conquer Wales and is forced to pay them to stay in the field through the winter. Previously they served the required 40 days and then went home."

Meanwhile the same men, Smith pointed out, were seeking more and more power over the decisions of state through the courts and taxation. "England," he added, conquered by a feudal army who owed services to their lord, but by the fourteenth century this relationship was changing and Edward I was the first to find this traditional feudal obligation unsatisfactory.

"The peers of the realm must serve the King," Smith said, "and they had no right to turn down service. This extended to administrative duties and service in parliament. However it gradually became more difficult for the king to ignore the wishes of parliament."

In 1964 Smith prepared a two-volume home study course for the University of Iowa, Bureau of Correspondence study, on the political history of Western Europe from A.D. 300 to 1300 and from A.D. 1300 to 1500.

Smith began his college career as an English literature major at the State University of Iowa but when he received his B.A. in 1951, he switched to Medieval History and earned an M.A. in 1952.

Marvin Folheim said in "The Michigan Daily": "Nothing is missing from the lyric joy in nature to the pessimism and doubt about life; and, in between, there is a liberal amount of the dramatic and the ironic, the comic and the sad. No aspect of Frost has been neglected. It is a series of wonderful moments strung together. One is constantly aware of being in the very presence of Frost's life."

JC Profs., Students Attend Joint Physics Conference

A chance to rub elbows with some of the leading physicists in the country was the unusual opportunity given a group of undergraduates last week when they attended the joint meeting of the American Physical Society and the American Association of Physics Teachers held at the Hilton Hotel in New York City.

Dr. Wilfred Norris, chairman of the physics department, said that his students were among the very few college undergraduates attending the meeting and lectures, where discussion centered on such items as the possible disappearance of time in space, and the shortage of physicists.

"It's a great way to see the tremendous amount of work and thought that's going on in the field," remarked Donald Martin, a sophomore physics major. Martin pointed out that the students were able to see famous, creative physicists first-hand and to hear their lecture at the conference.

Commenting on the small number of undergraduate students at the meeting, Dr. Norris said "They probably come only from the better schools."

Juniata students attending the conference were Thomas Creighton, senior, Randy Knepp, Jon Rayner, and Donald Martin, sophomores; and William Phillips, freshman.

The students were accompanied by their instructors, Dr. Norris, professor of physics, Dr. Martin Hoover, associate professor, and Mr. Ray Pfrogner, assistant professor. Students were originally able to attend these events as field trips because of a Research Corporation grant to Juniata, however, college funds are being used now.

Of greatest interest at the meeting, according to Dr. Norris, was a paper presented by Dr. Robert Dicke of Princeton in which he questioned one of the basic principles upon which Albert Einstein built his general theory of relativity.

Dr. J. A. Wheeler, also of Princeton, spoke of the end of time and the basic structure of space. He noted that as we measure shorter and shorter time periods, the idea of time becomes less and less meaningful and is more difficult to define.

"The talks at the meeting were of two types," said Dr. Norris. "First, contributing scientists reported on their progress in areas at the forefront of physics research." He added that these papers were usually ten minutes long and involved the latest findings.

"Secondly, and of more value to the students," Dr. Norris continued, "were talks which reviewed previous advances in physics. These review lectures lasted about thirty minutes and were delivered by invited scientists." Dr. Norris said that every afternoon there was an hour-long student session during which background information for one of the later papers was presented.

Commenting on the shortage of physicists, a topic also discussed at the conference, Dr. Norris observed, "The number of people entering the field is not increasing at the same rate as the overall population increase. The number of available jobs rises but there are fewer people to fill them."

He attributed the apparent leveling off of the number of degrees granted in physics partly to the fact that fewer high school students are taking physics courses. Whereas physics had been a requirement in high school, students are now able to choose biology or chemistry as alternative science courses.

"While many of the scientific advances are coming in the field of biology and chemistry," Dr. Norris noted, "many of these breakthroughs are made by people with physics and mathematics training."

On the other side of the question, Norris said, "The number of physicists follows the principle of supply and demand. If industries really wanted more physicists they could entice them away from the colleges and universities, however this would be impractical from a standpoint of public relations."

There was also an apparatus competition in which students and faculty of colleges and universities displayed instruments they had built. "Some of these showed outstanding work," commented Dr. Norris.

A meeting of the Central Pennsylvania Section of The American Association of Physics Teachers is scheduled to be held here this spring.

Jack Hopper, shown here enroute to a decision over his Washington and Jefferson opponent, will attempt to better his fine record against St. Francis.

Grapplers Beat K-town On Hwts. Pin, Face St. Francis

The St. Francis College grapplers visit JC next Wednesday, February 15. The Frankies had a 3-2 record before the semester break.

St. Francis lost to two of the big powerhouses in Pa.: University of Pittsburgh, 24-8, and Clarion State College, 16-14. They beat Slippery Rock State College, 28-4, Indiana University of Pa., 21-11, and St. Vincent College, 28-13.

The only opponent that both the Frankies and JC have wrestled so far this year was St. Vincent. The Indians downed SU, 30-5.

This will be the sixth meeting of the two schools and JC leads the series 4-1. Last year St. Francis won 19-14.

Wrestlers Down Dickinson, 18-13

The Tribe survived two pins by Dickinson to down the Red Devils, 18-13. This made JC's record 5-2 and Dickinson's 3-3.

Two big wins for Juniata were turned in by junior Don Hoover and freshman Pete Schuyler. At 177 pounds Hoover, who has a 4-1 record, decisively pinned unbeaten Jim Broughal. Broughal's record is now 5-1. This win for JC put the Indians ahead to stay at 15-13. Then Schuyler in the heavyweight division made the final arrangements for Dickinson's defeat by whipping Ray Hudak, 6-4.

The summary:
123—Jack Hopper (J) decisively pinned Phil Jacobson (D), 3-2.
130—Mike McCartney (J) decisively pinned Al Bell (D), 7-1.
137—Joe Hare (D) pinned Ken Fisher (J) at 2:41 in the 2nd period.
145—Chris Sherk (J) decisively pinned Gary DePersia (D), 3-2.
152—Ken Rauschenbach (D) pinned Bud Scott (J) at 1:41 in the 3rd period.
160—Mark Birdsall (D) decisively pinned Bob Butz (J), 8-1.
167—Dick Feigles (J) decisively pinned Bill Diefenderfer (D), 9-0.
177—Don Hoover (J) decisively pinned Jim Broughal (D), 6-2.
Unl.—Pete Schuyler (J) decisively pinned Ray Hudak (D), 6-4.

Indians Take On Strong Lions And Hapless Crusaders

The Albright College Lions invade Memorial Gym tomorrow night. The Lions are defending MAC basketball champs. As of February 5 they had a 12-5 overall record and a 7-2 MAC record.

Currently Albright is ranked 17th in the NCAA College Division in defense. They have permitted their opponents 63.3 points a game.

The Lions have five returning lettermen from last year's team. They are: Mike Eckenrath, 5'11" guard, Bill Kudrick, 6' guard, Jay Lord, 5'11" guard, George Ritter, 6'5" center, and John Scholl, 5'10" forward.

Three of the Lions have been averaging in double figures. Kudrick leads all with a 15.5 average with Eckenrath close behind with a 15.2 average. Scholl has a 11 point average. Altogether Albright has been averaging 67.4 as a team.

Next Wednesday, February 15, the Tribe travels to Susquehanna University. As of February 5, the Crusaders had a 0-15 record. They have two games against American University and F-town before playing JC next week.

One bright spot in this year's team is Rick Eppehimer, 6'2" forward who has been averaging 29.4 points a game to rank him nationally among college scoring leaders.

Eppehimer is one of six lettermen from last year's Susquehanna team which won 8 and lost 18. Paul Wild, 6'2" forward, Jim Roessner, 6'3" forward, Frank Trembulak, 6'6" center, Tom Palumbo, 6' guard, and Nick Dunn, 5'10" guard are the other returning lettermen.

Eppehimer, Trembulak, Palumbo, and Dunn are four of the starters. Sophomore Barry Llewellyn, 6'5" forward, is the other starter.

Last week the Indians lost at Wilkes, 71-69. This makes JC's record 4-7.

Will Brandau had his best game statistically with 26 points scored and 20 rebounds.

Also in double figures for Coach Trimmer's chargers were Clair Kenyon with 18 points and Dale Broadwater with 10.

Kenyon is presently leading JC's scorers with 163 points in 11 games. Brandau is second with 131.

Last Tuesday's game with Upsala was cancelled because of poor traveling conditions. The game will not be rescheduled.

Warrior of The Week

Brandau Becomes 1st To Be Named Again

Will Brandau, 6'7" junior, became the first Juniata cager to be selected for the second time by the coaches as "Warrior of the Week." He gained the distinction previously for his play against two top Middle Atlantic Conference foes, Lycoming and Scranton, early in January.

"Will certainly is a real, real bright spot on our team," said Coach Trimmer who has been pleased with his continually improving tall man. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Brandau, New Holland, Will played basketball at Garden Spot High under Bob Waite.

Against Wilkes this past week, Brandau poured in 26 points and grabbed 20 rebounds. He has the best shooting percentage on the team with a .482 average and is second in total points with 131.

Bridge Classes To Begin Mon.

On Monday night at 7:00 in S203 will be held the first bridge class in Juniata history. In response to the large amount of interest in learning bridge expressed in the Senate questionnaire last semester the Athletic committee is starting a bridge class for anyone interested. These classes will be held at 7:00 every Monday evening and will last about an hour. There will be no role call, no mid-term, no deficiency notices, and the only final grade will be your bridge score. The teachers will be Larry Bieber and Steve Werner, members of the team which will represent Juniata at the regional bridge tournament later this month. Although initial classes will be geared to beginners, intermediate classes will be held if interest is sufficient. This Monday's class will be on the fundamentals of bridge with an introduction to bidding methods. This is your chance to start learning America's favorite social game.

79% Of JC Student Body Votes "Yes" To Ratify Student Senate Constitution

by Candy Wamsley

'Yes' was the vote of 75% of the student body Thursday, Feb. 9 as they ratified the proposed constitution. As the ballot boxes remained open all day 79% of the students turned out to voice their opinion: 12% more than the necessary 67%.

Now that Juniata students have ratified this document, which will go into effect with the coming elections, Jim Donaldson and Toby Dills wish to spell out the implications of this decision. Both officers believe that the biggest change will be the opportunity for more discussion and involvement on the part of the student body. The sixteen-man legislature will consist of four students from each class. It is hoped that this committee will act much as the SCOP group is acting now, taking direct hold of campus problems and acting more swiftly than the old Senate.

Members of the old Senate had to carry out two positions, stated Jim. They were expected to carry out their chair and at the same time act as a Senator, being available to discuss problems with students. With the new Constitution chairman may administer their chairs while the legislature will handle campus problems.

Underclassmen may now become more involved in the government. They may learn to achieve their ends in a responsible fashion says Toby. In addition to involving the underclassmen, the new system will provide more continuity year after year. Toby "hopes" that someone "who knows the ropes" will always be a part of the student government.

The "exchange of ideas" will play a part in the greater education of the students. As they become educated Jim hopes to see them discuss problems such as the curriculum and the proposed College Center.

Another "big change" in the Constitution will be the position of the Treasurer. The new treasurer and his assistant will apply for the position and will be "hired and salaried" as states the new document. Jim believes that more careful attention must be paid the student government budget as they have the responsibility for handling student's money.

Involvement on the part of the administration will not be so great under the new system. The social life of the college is one phase that is dependent upon the Senate, which is unusual in many schools states Jim. The government must carry out this responsibility declares Jim.

Toby wants to see a large turnout for the class and student government elections to be held in the next few weeks. Jim believes that the first government will be a big factor in the success of the new Constitution. Both officers declare that "ideally" the new system will make up for the shortcomings of the old.

Dr. Adams Conducts Survey Of Student Class-cutting

It should come as no surprise that the college student who skips class receives a lower grade than the one who attends every session, as Dr. Clifford R. Adams, lecturer in psychology here, has discovered in a recent study of one of his classes.

Dr. Adams is an author and former professor of psychology at the Pennsylvania State University from 1937 to 1964. "The study of the relationship of grades and class attendance was made," he said, "for my own information."

Women, according to Dr. Adams, had higher marks than men because they were absent from class less often. This better attendance on the part of the women earned them a higher grade level as a group. The difference, the study showed, was 19 per cent.

Dr. Adams drew some conclusions which may be of interest to college students who are eager to improve their grades.

The chances of earning an A if one attends class irregularly are almost nil, Dr. Adams' report shows, while the chances of receiving an F, if the student attends class regularly, are almost nil.

It would appear obvious, Dr. Adams points out, that the effect of class attendance upon grades is much more serious for mediocre and poor students than for those with more ability.

Dr. Adams said that no student with six or more absences received an A, in contrast with the 12 students who had less than five absences and earned A's.

The sample consisted of 75 students but despite the small size of the group, the typical student was represented since there were about as many freshmen and sophomores as juniors and seniors. "There were 43 male and 32 female students," Dr. Adams explained. "Fully half of this enrollment represented majors in either psychology or sociology." Although Dr. Adams says that he pointed out the desirability of regular attendance in his class, he also told the students there would be no penalty for cutting his classes.

"Who's Who" Selects Lillian Junas As College Publications Reference

Lillian N. Junas, adviser to The Juniatian and Alfarata has been named to the 1967 edition of "Who's Who in College and University Publications." The selections are made by the National Council of College Publication Advisers and are based on contributions to college student publications. Miss Junas also is sports information director, assistant director of public information, and coordinator of AV aids.

Author of several magazine picture-features on publications photography, Miss Junas also has written articles on staff organization, journalism problems in small colleges, and photography policy concerning college publications.

For the past four summers she has been a member of the staff at the High School Publications Workshop at South Dakota State University, Will Geer will star as Robert Frost in tonight's presentation of An Evening's Frost. Geer was featured in the New York production.

Conceived and directed by Marcia Cisney, An Evening's Frost, was first presented at the University of Michigan as a part of the Professional Theatre Program there. It has been acclaimed as a warm and moving portrayal of the famous poet.

Marvin Folheim in The Michigan Daily greeted the opening night as follows: "Nothing is missing, from the lyric joy in nature to the pessimism and doubt about life; and, in between, there is a liberal amount of the dramatic and the ironic, the comic and the sad. No aspect of Frost has been neglected. It is a series of wonderful moments strung together. One is constantly aware of being in the very presence of Frost's life."

It was taken to New York City in October of 1965 by the producers, Judith Rutherford Marchal and Conrad Matthea, in association with Jay Stanwyck, and was directed by Marcia Cisney. Harry Gilroy of The New York Times wrote the following in his review: "Robert Frost is summoned back to life out of his verse, letters and conversations with friends... an evening when the poet spins out his own story, the sweet and the following bitter, the tragedy and triumph, in words creating laughter but even more often, tears."

For most Americans, Robert Frost only became real when he appeared at the inauguration of President John F. Kennedy, when he read a poem in honor of the President. This last picture of our own shrewd, humorous, old poet laureate remains. But Frost himself never was our own, but always his own man. That is what is so revealing in this dramatization."

In The New York World Telegram, Norman Nadel wrote: "Robert Frost once wrote that a poem should begin in delight and end in wisdom, like a love affair. I think that Donald Hall must have had this in mind when he assembled the poems, the excerpts from letters and the prose pieces that make up the tasteful and radiant program, An Evening's Frost."

The opening paragraph of the review in Cue Magazine reads: "The wonder of living—how rare to find this communicated in the theatre today. It is precisely this elusive, civilizing quality that emerges from these dramatic readings of the late Robert Frost's poems, prose and letters. I urge you to attend."

An Evening's Frost is the first dramatic treatment of the poet and his work to be authorized by the literary executor of the Frost estate. Of the dramatic treatment, Edith Oliver stated in The New Yorker: "The selector and arranger is Donald Hall, and I don't see how he could have chosen better: the balance between the familiar and unfamiliar poems being just right and the connective material being appropriate and lively... The evening is most effective."

An Evening's Frost is the second production from the office of Judith Rutherford Marchal to go on tour. The first tour was of the fabulously successful presentation In White America. For her outstanding contribution to the theatre, particularly thorough her encouragement to young playwrights, Miss Marchal received the 1964 Margo Jones Award at a White House presentation.

The South sample smoke. Up until this year there has never been a smoker in Leshor nor any indication of there being one.

The sample indicated that none of the South girls believed the Leshor girls to be more active, while many felt that South girls were. None of the Leshor girls saw the South girls as more studious. On the average, though, the majority of those questioned did not believe that any differences existed.

Although the results of the questionnaire are based only on a random sample, they tend to support the hypothesis that the girls in Leshor are more "conservative" than those in South.

Leshor Hall

In an effort to prove or disprove the prevailing attitude on campus that a difference exists between students living in South and Leshor, two members of Dr. Helen B. Meahl's social psychology course conducted a survey including twenty-five percent of the women living in each dorm.

Designed by Kirsten Miller of Leshor and Barbara Dunnick of South, the questionnaire dealt with such items as leisure time activities, dating and sexual behavior, drinking, smoking, dormitory choices, and a personal opinion as to whether or not such a difference actually existed.

When the results were tabulated, significant variations were evident in activities and attitudes. Leshor girls spend more time knitting, sewing, crocheting, listening to radio and watching TV, playing musical instruments or singing, in organizations and club meetings, and in church and related activities. South girls spend more time playing cards and dating. The response to questions concerning dating and sexual behavior, tended to show that South girls agree more strongly than Leshor girls with neckable behavior and condemned the idea that it is necessary to drink to have a good time. Leshor girls did not agree that smoking relieves tension and that it is neither good nor bad. Of interest is the fact that 13 of the 27 girls in Both dorms answered similarly to questions dealing with drinking, differing only as to strength of disagreement with the statement that drinking parties are immoral. In general both dorms saw social drinking as acceptable behavior and condemned the idea that it is necessary to drink to have a good time.

Whatever Happened To Wisdom?

For one trying to sit back and look at the whole collegiate scene, trying to gain some general perspective, the amount and tenor of the attitudes and opinions, both the subjective and the objective ones, is overwhelming. The things that we are all supposedly concerned about would surprise many Juniata. Spread on the editor's desk at the moment is a wild collection of alarmed magazine and journal reports with such titles as "How Colleges Have Changed", and "Revolt on the Campus." Stacks of clippings and press releases reveal editorial opinion from other collegiate sources, opinions ranging in subject from grading policies to "weren't the Beatles great while they lasted" to the heated criticisms of the Selective Service system. The mass of concern gives one the feelings of great rumbling down under and of course, there are minor explosions from time to time in California and New York. We generally don't feel the reverberations of these explosions too strongly here in Huntingdon, and our point here is not whether we should or not. (Although it is disturbing that apparently few people on this campus are fully aware of the fact that a serious condition exists, for example, in Viet Nam, one that they should be concerned more profoundly with.)

Amidst all the noise, there is a lot of serious and responsible concern to be evidenced on this general scene, and that which is serious and responsible deserves to be praised. That which is not, we disdain as much as our elders. This is probably a conservative viewpoint and on many campuses would be the source of criticism from many of our footstomping, angry young contemporaries. That it is not universally criticized here indicates one of two things of JC's student body: 1) it is wise and conservative, or 2) the apathy is real and the charges all these years have not been wrong.

There was a collegiate press conference in Washington just a week ago that we were unfortunately unable to attend, due to lack of funds. In its coverage of the conference, Newsweek cited one Ray Mungo, 20 year old editor of the Boston University News as announcing that, in all seriousness he is about to call for President Johnson's impeachment "with, of course the realization that this is legally impossible."

That strikes us as being rather ridiculous. A serious consideration and competent discussion of the Viet Nam situation and Johnson's mistakes is a more rational thing to do. Resorting to legal impossibilities seems to us to be nothing more than futile footstomping that doesn't gain much respect because of its irresponsibility. And an unexpected viewpoint gets little done. The only respect that the futile footstompers get is that of their cohorts. Real influence, that essential which they are seeking, is lacking.

We are not against outspoken-ness. In fact, a point for mad activists to consider — one that goes ignored — is that respectability and outspoken-ness are not mutually exclusive. Pure respectability without outspoken-ness is bland; but outspoken-ness without respectability is futile and absurd. Respectable outspoken-ness is the first step to wisdom.

And without wisdom, what can we hope to get done?

Apathy Nevermore

This tiny editorial comment is not directly concerned with Juniata apathy. This editor has used more than the three apathy appeals allotted to the scholastic year thus far. Actually the effort is not worth it; we gather that people like to be told that they are apathetic, which is astounding. And it must be true since no one has taken issue with the charge. Of course, that is logical; those silent ones are naturally silent — about everything, especially their own silence.

Therefore, we give up.

Letters to the editor should be typed, double spaced, and limited to no more than 400 words. Letters will be accepted no later than 5 p.m. Monday. The editors reserve the right to edit and determine the publication of all letters and commentaries submitted to the Juniata. What New Type Grading System?

While college students across the country are advocating abolition of the letter-grade system in favor of a pass-fail or satisfactory-unsatisfactory system, 15 members of the Michigan State history faculty are urging revision of the current system to make it fairer and more meaningful, reports the State News.

The 15 men, ranging in rank from instructor to full professor, are co-signers of a letter to the State News protesting the straight letter-grade system used at Michigan State. They propose the addition of plus and minus grades on official transcripts.

"There is no reason why this cannot be done here," the letter stated, "yet the appropriate agencies have resisted, not to say ignored, any such suggestions from segments of the faculty." The letter urged students "to take a good, hard look at grading, and express its wishes, individually and collectively."

Prof. Norman Rich, one of the signers, said "there is no ideal way of having a grading system, anyway" but that the plus-minus system "gives a little more chance to be fair." The author of the letter, Asst. Prof. Paul J. Hauber, said, however, that "unless there's a lot of student reaction, nothing is going to happen. The faculty does not get a lot of attention in this area."

A subcommittee of the Educational Policy Committee is discussing the grading system. In 1963, when the subcommittee also studied the system, it made four recommendations, among them the addition of a C-plus grade "to give the middle student a break."

Finding as many as 40 to 60 students falling in the C range, the subcommittee speculated that a C-plus grade would separate students who just missed B's from those who just missed D's. The C-plus recommendation was the most controversial, Chairman Willard Warrington said, probably because of its inconsistency, since the plus and minus were not proposed for other grade levels.

All four recommendations were tabled by the Academic Senate and returned to the Academic Council, where no further action was taken.

'Round Campus

Tuesday certainly proved to be a busy day on campus with florists scurrying from one girls' dorm to another, and the workers in the post office putting mail out just as fast as they could process it. Too bad it can't be Valentine's Day at least once a month. Some girls even went so far as to estimate the number of roses arriving in each dorm. They concluded (a rough estimate) that South got the most. Maybe the girls are just "sweeter" there. One group of young ladies who didn't receive as much as one valentine has formed a Tired Hearts Club and extends an invitation for membership to anyone in similar circumstances. The only prerequisite to join is a tired heart.

Radio station WJC is completely in a turmoil since the strange disappearance of their mascot, Ralph. All leads point to "coconut-zapping." To whom it may concern, the staff sends out this warning: Coconut-zapping is a serious offense and is extremely punishable.

Monday night's choir concert was certainly proof to many of us that there's some fine talent on Juniata's campus. After their nine day tour and a week of rehearsing, the choir came back to present a sparkling concert that was very well received by their fellow students and the faculty.

Our basketball game with Elizabethton tomorrow night should turn out to be very exciting since Juniata is out to avenge its loss to E-town over term break. The spirit of competition is even greater since Juniata and Elizabethton are sister schools of the Brethren Church. Parents hat-

A Peace Corps recruiter will be on campus Feb. 23 and 24. Interested students should contact Dr. Kihl for further information.

The movie originally scheduled for next Tuesday, "The Shop on Main Street," has been rescheduled for March 7. "The Pawnbroker" will be shown in its place. Price will be 50¢, at the Kalos Clifton Theatre at 8:15.

Markings...

The choir concert Monday night was well accepted and appreciated by those who saw it. Unfortunately I was not one of them, partly of my own choice and partly due to other circumstances. It was one of the nights I decided to let studies interfere with my education, but after a few hours in the library I decided to stop in about nine o'clock and listen to the remaining portion of the program. The doors of Oller Hall, however, were locked.

The fact that convocation credit was given for the concert in all probability was the reason for the locked doors. True, had I wanted to see the program I should have been there at the beginning, and thus I have nothing to complain about personally. Yet it seemed to illustrate the ridiculous lengths to which the school goes to maintain its outdated convocation. Locked doors on a program such as the choir concert is first of all an insult to an excellent performance. The administration, it seems, is more intent insuring that no one squelches on his attendance by arriving late than promoting the worth of the program itself. This policy rates attendance higher than the supposed benefits of the students in attending convocation. One is tempted to assume that if Christ returned for a convocation program attendance would

This might lead us to a broader consideration of the administration's conception of a "Christian college" and required chapel attendance. Could it be that the school actually believes the latter is a valid indication of Juniata's claim as a church college? I doubt it. Why, then, is this anachronism continued when it is clear that the purposes and functions of a small Christian college amid huge public universities need to be re-evaluated in light of modern religious concepts? It is debatable the small church college ever serves a necessary purpose in the educational system. Whatever the answer, it won't be found in the continuation of 19th century tradition; new attempts are needed to create factors that distinguish Christian colleges from secular institutions.

Where does all this leave the principle of compulsory convocations? Few students, I think, would deny that a college-sponsored series of speakers on religion and philosophy is worthwhile. It's time, however, that Juniata outgrows the concept that attendance means appreciation, and stops locking doors.

Rising Tuition Threatens Private Institutions

(ACP)—Students at small private colleges and universities are beginning to feel deep financial pains as private institutions face a trend of escalating tuition, notes the Kansas State University Collegian.

Costs of attending a private school, now roughly $500 to $600 a semester for tuition, are on the rise. The year, for example, Marquette University raised tuition $75 a semester, St. Louis University $125, and Creighton University $45. The reason in all cases was stated as the growing imbalance between income and expense.

The Rev. Paul Reinett, S.J., St. Louis president, stated in an open letter to students, "Virtually every private college and university in the country will be forced to increase its tuition rates this year because of the simple, inescapable fact that the gap between tuition income and general educational costs continues to grow greater."

At Creighton, this is the third tuition increase in as many years, bringing the yearly tuition load to $1,020 for undergraduates. St. Louis' increase brings the single semester total to $700. Since funds are obtained primarily from tuition rather than taxes, it seems inevitable that fees will continue to escalate with inflation and increased educational demands.

It also appears that state institutions, not totally dependent upon tuition and endowments, have a better chance to meet the increased demands of enrollment, technology, and research. Increased funds can be obtained either by increased taxes or by the redistribution of governmental budgets. At the same time they can maintain minimal tuition.

Students at private institutions are paying double—taxes plus extraneous tuition. If the escalation continues, private education will be a privilege of wealth, and it will become increasingly difficult to maintain academic standards. It does not appear that private institutions will be able to compete effectively with state institutions in the process of mass education. Unfortunately, progress often means the death of tradition.

Wednesday's convocation will be held in Alumni Hall at 8:15 p.m. rather than in the morning as usual. It will feature Luther Harbarger of Penn State. He is the Chairman of Religious Studies in the Humanities Division there, and will be available at the Faus House for a talkback following the convocation.

Women's Hours

Sophomores were granted 9 1/30 late permissions per year; juniors, 18 lates per year; seniors, 3 lates per year; seniors, 3 lates per month during the first semester and unlimited lates during the second semester.

Starting with the 1954-55 term, 11 lates were granted to everyone during final exams.

Gradual changes over 10 years brought the hours to their present situation, which has been under study by SCOPE. Through a survey conducted by the committee, new hours have been formulated which constitute still another reform in women's hours at JC. Socialization shall carry on! receiving credit where credit is not due.

ing a daughter at each school, as is the case with a certain New Jersey family, would hardly know for whom to cheer. In any case, it's a contest you won't want to miss. Following the game at 10 p.m., there will be a dance in the Women's Gym with "The Young Lords," a group from Huntingdon. Let's hope they do as well this week at the dance as they did last week.

After several attempts, the friends of one senior girl in Leshar finally succeeded in having her surprise 22nd birthday party. As proof to the fact that she didn't seem to be getting any older, one guest presented a gift of paper dolls.

A final note in the way of Valentine's Day may be evidence that the girls in South deserved all their roses, when many of them had to stand in line in the kitchen to wait for use of the oven in baking all their special goodies.

After a sweeping 46-20 victory over Grier School Monday, the Women's Basketball Team was defeated by Lock Haven in a very close 34-36 loss. Lock Haven came from behind in the fourth quarter to take the game. This makes Juniata's team 2 and 4 for the season. They saw action again last night against Indiana.

One word in favor of the new paging system in the science complex is revealing its positive value is that if you're anywhere in the building and someone's looking for you, you'll know it! (So will everyone else there too!)

Students Protest February 15

A group of students at Carnegie Institute of Technology demonstrated yesterday for abolishment of Feb. 15.

Why? Because the date itself lacks any real significance, said one of the organizers of the "Society for the Prevention of February Fifteenth" SPOFF.

SPOFF was spoofing "Senseless demonstrations," said Michael Diamond, 21, an electrical engineering senior from Buffalo, N.Y.

Senate News and Views

True Angle

Last night's Senate meeting produced a series of questions regarding Senate policy which could provide the new Student Government with plenty of material for discussion when they first convene next month.

An immediate problem brought before the senators concerned the by-law in the newly ratified Student Government Constitution concerning the requirement of a 2.20 average for candidates for the new student Government. The question was raised whether or not the present Senate could and/or should lower this average.

During discussion it was pointed out that many students in each class fall into the average range from 2.00 to 2.30. However, senators felt that previous discussion had resulted in this arbitrary figure and that it would be difficult to change any of the by-laws of the new Constitution at this time.

The Senate voted to keep the grade point average requirement at the stated 2.20 and felt that any changes made would have to come from the Student Government which will take over after Move-Pop Day.

Another question of policy which needs consideration is that concerning Senate grants or loans to clubs and organizations. The Judo Club represented by Leroy Mell, requested and was granted $150 for a trip to the Newark School of Engineering for a tournament this weekend. The Bridge Club represented by Larry Bieber, chairman of Athletics was granted $40 to be taken from the athletics treasury, for transportation to a bridge tournament in Philadelphia later this month.

The question raised was where the granting of money should end. All clubs and organizations wishing to take trips as representatives of Juniata College would seem to have equal right to Senate funds. A lenient policy could be over-extended and abused. Perhaps this question should also be discussed and a more specific statement of policy produced.

Formal To Highlight Mid-Winter Weekend

The Juniata campus will move from its winter hibernation to a whirl of fun-filled activities next weekend. Much time and thought has been expended in the planning of Mid-Winter Weekend.

Friday evening, February 24, opens the schedule of events. At this time Juniata College will be proud to host the Pair Extraordinaire. After their performance, there will be refreshments served in South Hall lounge.

On Saturday evening, Feb. 25, will be the Mid-Winter Formal dance. The Freshman Class is creating the atmosphere for the dance, and for the theme they have chosen "An Alpine Weekend." The band that will provide music for the dance is Al Britt and His Dials.

Juniata is quite privileged to be able to secure the Pair Extraordinaire for a live performance on our campus. They have been greatly recognized throughout the United States, making an appearance on "The Dean Martin Show," and being booked at the "Hungry I" for four weeks.

The use of only a bass fiddle as accompaniment to a voice is initially the most intriguing aspect of the Pair. That this innovation is successful is indicative of a real musical talent.

Marcus and Craig first met at jam sessions when they attended nearby high schools in Texas, but their paths did not cross professionally until two years ago.

They both attended college, and both inducted into the army. When their army duties ended, Carl and Marcus landed individually in Southern California. Marcus went on the road with a combo and Carl began to tour as a singer. At the Club Zanzibar in Santa Monica they created a two-man act.

The attention of Liberty Records was attracted and The Pair Extraordinaire was soon signed to a long-term contract. They have recorded three albums: "Live at the Ico House," "Live at the Mecca," and "In-Citement." The Pair is now making another album, for which they will interrupt recording to come to Juniata.

by the new Student Government.

Steve Herr, chairman of education, reported on his inquiries concerning conflicts between classes and extra-curricular activities. Night classes and regularly scheduled Saturday classes which were changed to other days of the week presented the crux of the problem. He said there seemed to be at least a faction of faculty and students who were opposed to Saturday classes. A suggestion was made to poll faculty and students and get their opinion concerning Saturday classes.

Ann Fisher, chairman of Women's Government, reported that the SCOPE recommendation for revised women's hours which was approved last week by the Senate had been passed by Women's Government Tuesday evening. The recommendation is now in the hands of Dean Helms for consideration.

The SCOPE recommendation for the new Judiciary Committee was presented for Senate consideration. An actual vote for approval will come at next week's meeting.

Confusion concerning the granting of concessions to Avon representatives on campus brought a reclassification of the channels for securing personal or club concessions. All applications for concessions must be made through the office of the coordinator of Student Affairs and be approved by the Senate. Another question of policy resulting from this mix-up was whether or not concessions for non-campus groups or companies should be granted to individuals.

Five students appointed to the College Center Committee are: Dave Gould, John Edwards, Mary Kay Stom, Mimi Edgar, and Richard Sakitt.

Don't forget the up-coming elections for class and Student Government positions! Petitions will be available tonight for candidates for Executive, Cabinet, and Dormitory Government positions. Campaign speeches will take place Tues., Feb. 21 in Alumni Hall at 7:00 p.m. Elections are Thurs., Feb. 23.

Petitions for the Legislature and class officers will be available Fri., Feb. 24. Elections are Thurs., March 2. Petitions will be available in Room S-202 at 7:00 A.M.

Future Teachers Conduct Bi-Weekly Storytelling

An hour of storytelling, with finger puppets or flannel boards, is a time to look forward to for many Huntingdon elementary schoolchildren. Not only the first or fourth graders, but 29 Juniata College students as well, enjoy the bi-weekly story hour, organized by the Language Arts Education course, with Mrs. Sara H. Clemson, professor and advisor, who is assistant professor of Education.

Every other week the 29 future elementary school teachers meet with gradeschoolers from Alfara and William Smith Elementary Schools, invited by personal note to attend the story hour at Stone Church on campus or at the Huntingdon Community Center.

Approximately 60 children, from kindergarten to fourth grade, attend the storytelling periods, frequently participating in the different forms of dramatization and role-playing.

The Language Arts Education course includes a two semester sequence of elementary education communication problems, with the first semester concentrating on reading.

History Tells A Tale On Women's Hours: JC's Females Never Had It So Good!

by Mary Schmoys

Let's face the facts. College is not just studying. It's a liberal education. College should provide a growing experience in many areas of a student's life, including socialization. That brings up the subject of women's hours. After all, they are conducive to the socialization process. Men need women with whom to socialize, and the fellows certainly have no access to their girls when they're stranded behind the locked doors of their dorms.

How liberal or strict should hours be? That's the question in the minds of some interested students on campus today.

Look back to 1927 and 1928. Believe it or not, the socialization process was at work then too. During the week men and women could associate from after chapel until 10:30 a.m., from the time after lunch (There definitely must have been shorter lunch lines then!) until 1 and from 4:15 to 6 p.m. Walking was allowed within certain limits from after dinner until the ringing of the tower bell at 7 or 7:15 p.m. Association in the social room was permitted after dinner until the study hour at about 7:30.

Needless to say, walking provides an ideal socialization process. As previously mentioned, there were specified limits. The fall and spring walking limits were Penn St., Third St., the railroad, Round Top, Flag Pole, and Hospital Hill. Groups could go beyond these limits only with an approved faculty or student chaperone.

Of course weekends were a bit more liberal. Walking and socialization were provided on Saturday from 12 noon to 6:15 p.m. and on Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5, within the limits of course.

All callers had to leave the social room in Brumby Hall at 10:30 p.m. Then there were those rules concerning callers or unchaperoned dates: senior women were allowed this privilege for 4 nights in 4 weeks; juniors, 2 nights in 3 weeks; sophomores, 1 night in 3 weeks.

A young woman at Juniata was permitted to go to the store after campus functions and on Saturday night, provided she returned at 10:30. After one basketball game a week she was permitted to do the same with permission.

A woman who was off campus for any reason had to be back by 11:00 p.m.

Then there was the signing out procedure — termed registration — required for any couple leaving campus. The girl going beyond Fourteenth St., Scott St., Mifflin St., or Roundtop had to register, as well as the one going to the store after social functions or athletic events. The evening trip to the library even required registration.

The incoming freshmen, who definitely must have envied their upper-classmen, were given strict regulations. They could have no social relations except on Sunday afternoons from 3 to 5. On weekdays they could go to town between 4:15 and 6 p.m. Other jaunts to town were accorded to them by permission from the hall president. The second semester gave them the opportunity to receive a caller in the social room unchaperoned or to go out chaperoned 1 night in 4 weeks.

Auto riding was only done with approved chaperones. Women could go riding in the afternoon, while juniors and seniors had the extra privilege of evening rides.

Dissatisfaction must have crossed the minds of many individuals. A slow reform for more freedom slowly became visible. The term of 1930-'31 saw the association with the opposite sex lengthened for the upper class women. Saturday's hours became noon to 11 p.m. and Sunday's became 3 to 6 p.m. The freshmen women could go to town from 3:15 to 6 p.m. during the week.

In 1931-'32 men and women could go to social functions on campus if they were back by 11 p.m.

The freshmen were finally given a bit more freedom from 1933-'34. They could go out or receive 1 caller 1 night in 4 weeks unchaperoned beginning after the Christmas holidays. What could constitute a finer Christmas gift for these freshmen women? Upper class women could associate with men 1 afternoon a week. All callers had to leave the social room at 11 p.m.

1935-'36 saw many probably welcomed changes. Freshmen women had to be in the dorm ½ hour after all campus functions except if they were taking a night out at that particular time.

More permissions were granted to entertain guests or to have a night out: seniors, 18 nights per semester; juniors, 9 nights per semester; sophomores, 6 nights per semester; freshmen, 4 nights during the second semester only.

Permission to leave Huntingdon, granted by the Dean of Women, was leaving the campus before 6 p.m. allowed if the woman was back in her dorm by 11 p.m.

Signing out was required when Registration with the Dean of Women constituted the procedure when leaving the dorm after 6 and returning later than 7:30 p.m.

No driving was allowed after 6 p.m. without permission from the Dean of Women.

Times for social relations were extended. On weekends one could socialize from lunch to 1:30, 4:30 to dinner, and dinner to 7:30 p.m. Saturday socialization process took place from noon to 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 to 11 p.m. Sunday's hours were 3 to 6 p.m.

In 1938-'39 freshmen women were in their dorm by 10 p.m. All women had to receive written permission from their parents to stay at homes other than their own or for trips not sponsored by the college.

Upper class women had to be in their dorm at 10:30 on weekdays in 1940-'41. Saturday evening's curfew hour was 11:30. On evenings after weekend vacations the women were in the dorm at 10.

1941-'42's term was the curfew hour extended to 11 on weekdays for upper class women.

In 1942-'43 the Dean of Women's permission was needed to ride in cars anywhere except in the college vicinity.

The upper class women were probably not too happy when they had to return to the dorm at 10:30 p.m. in 1943-'44. Their consultations might have been their 11:30 p.m. late permissions: seniors, 3 per month; juniors, 2 per month; sophomores, 1 per month.

Dorms closed at 10 p.m. Sunday to Friday during the 1952-'53 term. Saturday evening's closing time was 12. Freshmen had to be in their dorm at 10 on weekday nights, while Saturday night's time was 12. Upper class women returned at 10:30 weekday nights, 12 on Saturday nights, and 10 on Sunday nights.

Campus Comedy

Being struck by a wordy muse, a friend of mine concluded her paper for a Shakespeare course with the statement: "Pusillanimity was, to the end, his downfall." When the paper was returned, her professor had added: "As obfuscation is thine."

With competition for admission to graduate schools so intense, a young scholar applied to several. He soon received a letter from Harvard, which read: "Because of the large number of applicants, it has been necessary to assign each one an identification number. In future communications, please refer to the number printed below." An inch of digits followed.

Not long after, the Harvard admissions office received a letter from the student, signed with his number, which read: "Because of the large number of applications I am making this year, I find it necessary to assign each institution an identification number. In future communications, please refer to the number printed below." He was accepted.

Ed Dept. Recognizes Value of Experience In Primary Learning

A new emphasis is being placed on the "How" of education, and it is of particular interest in the lower grades. Mrs. Sarah Clemson, a member of the faculty of the department of education here, discussed the implications these advances have on the whole scope of education.

A comparison of standard American forms of education to other education systems, and any general study of education, seems to reveal that one extremely basic and necessary factor particularly in primary education concerns the richness of experiential background. Real benefit can be derived from new methods and approaches when applied in the right atmosphere, an atmosphere which is often determined by experience.

One unfortunate hindrance to the success of new methods is the stigma often attached to so called "difficulties" arising out of attitudes re-

Stecher, Horowitz To Pair Virtuosity And Versatility In Duo-Piano Concert

One of the country's top twin-Steinway concert combinations, Stecher and Horowitz will be heard Sunday, February 26 at 3 p.m. in Oller Hall, Juniata College in the 3rd, and final, concert of the Huntingdon Concert Association's current series. Sixteen years ago this past June, Melvin Stecher and Norman Horowitz became Stecher and Horowitz, duo pianists. New Yorkers, born and bred, each had a highly creditable list of symphony and solo performances; neither had reached the age of 20.

Melvin Stecher and Norman Horowitz are still New Yorkers, but their joint adventures have taken them far afield, and down just about as many musical roads as a Steinway two-piano van can travel.

Solidly grounded in the classics, ardent and intensive students of both their instrument and its literature, Stecher and Horowitz are youthfully open-minded of today's taste. Their pairing of virtuosity and versatility is evident in the stretch of their repertoire, the scope of their activities.

The Stecher and Horowitz name first became familiar to the public when the two young men were featured in an engagement, extended and re-extended, at the Radio City Music Hall. They gave a total of 84 performances in that famous hall where the names of so many of today's most noted artists first became household words.

Before Stecher and Horowitz decided to tour with their own instruments, which are Steinways specially matched for tonal color, many incidents, aggravating and funny occurred. One concert committee, instructed that the two pianos were to be as closely matched as possible, engaged a cabinetmaker. On arriving at the auditorium, Stecher and Horowitz were amazed to find him trying to tone down a mahogany piano to match the walnut-veneered grand beside it. Now, whenever possible, a specially constructed van carries the Stecher and Horowitz Steinways, and they are assured of two fine instruments wherever they play.

They recently became honorary Canadians. The Mayor of Dauphin, in Manitoba, a town which thought its musical tastes strictly popular, conferred honorary citizenship papers on Stecher and Horowitz after the encores to a concert programmed primarily with encore material; at the end of the program the delighted audience insisted on more. Stecher and Horowitz, who had exhausted their encore material, played most of the program scheduled for the next day in Winnipeg - Mozart and Bach - which the astonished audience discovered was very much indeed to its taste.

Under the auspices of the State Department, Stecher and Horowitz have appeared as guest artists with the Roger Wagner Chorale in nineteen countries of Central and South America.

A significant event in the music world as well as in the careers of these artists was the "premiere" of a new concerto for two pianos and orchestra, written for them by the distinguished American composer, Walter Piston.

lated to presently operating systems. It is disastrous that the slow learner, "the late bloomer" and so forth should be regarded as such.

Technological advances in the classroom can bring about quite satisfactory results to more easily facilitate the learning process and free the teacher for broader, less defined functions. For example, as Mrs. Clemson explained, machines have proven to be useful in the dissemination of factual material. The effective use of audio-visual aids adds interest for students, and certainly provides more 'personality' than mimeographed sheets of statistics. Their value is hardly debatable.

However, many teachers, Mrs. Clemson felt, are apprehensive of new methods. The fact is that in keeping with the example, technology can free the teacher to more adequately fulfill the role that a machine cannot. The human teacher's significance in this according to Mrs. Clemson, is to create an atmosphere which is an active learning process involving human interaction. The passive action of machines can never replace the teacher. Machines liberate the teachers to spend more time developing this active interaction. Mrs. Clemson cited as an example of this function in "getting students to grasp the sense of working for a common goal." A machine may easily demonstrate the sum of $2 + 2$, but it can never put across these sense type concepts.

The problem of "How to Educate" implies, often presupposes, a consideration of the ultimate purpose of education. Such modern techniques as team teaching, the ungraded classroom and serious and intensive preschool education have a definite value when approached in the proper manner. However, Mrs. Clemson suggested, reorganization alone is not enough. A general attitude and philosophy in regards to education needs to be understood, an attitude that will make the reorganization purposeful, and consequently, the education meaningful.

Two Summer Course To TV Experience Ed. Prof. To Relate

Summer school students will have the opportunity to study with Mrs. Sara H. Clemson, a teacher familiarly recognized by third and fourth graders across the nation as the "TV Teacher" of science.

Mrs. Clemson, assistant professor of education, will teach two courses during the summer session which is under the direction of Dr. Kaylor. Both of Mrs. Clemson's courses will be related to her experience as the writer and teacher in the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction's television series on "Primary Concepts in Science."

Produced in 1961, the fifteen films in the educational television series are still telecast frequently, and Mrs. Clemson has become a nationally popular teacher of elementary school children.

This summer, she will teach Elementary Science, studying content and methods and experiments at various levels of elementary work, and a course in Visual Education, with attention to sensory aids in teaching and the integration of visual materials with the curriculum. Both courses are open to education majors and to public school teachers seeking additional academic credit in education.

During the summer school session, courses will be offered in the three academic divisions. Two terms, each equivalent to a regular semester, allow the student to earn 12 or more credit hours.

The first term begins June 19 and ends July 21; second term begins July 24 and ends Aug. 25.

Mrs. Clemson, of Petersburg R.D., became a television teacher while doing graduate work in education at Pennsylvania State University. Before coming to Pennsylvania, Mrs. Clemson taught in Alaska.

The fifteen lessons in Mrs. Clemson's television science series teach advanced subject matter in terms and with illustrations that elementary pupils understand readily. For teachers, the films show new techniques and practical demonstrations of the use of new teaching aids and visual equipment.

Subjects and problems similar to those encountered in her television teaching will be focal topics in Mrs. Clemson's courses during Juniata's summer session.

The Indians take on the Lebanon College grapplers tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 in Memorial Gym.

The Dutchmen have a 7-2 log with one meet against Ursinus this week. They have defeated PMC, John Hopkins, Albright, Delaware Valley, Wagner, Western Maryland, and Dickinson. Their losses have been to Moravian and E-town.

Juniata has wrestled two teams the LV defeated. JC shut out Western Maryland in the Shippensburg tournament, while LV beat WM 23-8.

Against Dickinson, the Dutchmen won 18-12 and the Tribe won 18-13. This will be the ninth meeting between the two schools with JC leading the series, 4-2-2.

At 123 pounds Archie Laughead will wrestle with a 6-2-1 record. Bud Kauffman will go at 130 and his record is 2-1.

At 137, Sam Willman, senior captain, has a 9-0 log for the season and a string of 22 consecutive dual meet wins. His over-all record at LV is 32-5-2.

In the 145-pound weight class Joe Hovetter, 6-2-1, will go for LV and at 152 will be Kerry Althouse, 6-3. Joe Torre, 2-3, will wrestle at 160 and Harry Wertsch, 0-3, will be at 167.

The other undefeated wrestler for LV is Rich Rasta at 177. His record is 4-0-1. And at the heavyweight spot will be Jack Howie, 5-2-1.

Next Tuesday, February 21, the Tribe travels to E-town. Presently, E-town has a 9-1-1 record.

The Blue-Jays' top wrestler was to East Stroudsburg, who until recently, was in the top ten among wrestling schools in the nation. E-town's tie came against Gettysburg, 16-16.

JC wrestled Gettysburg earlier this year and lost 15-14. This will be the ninth meeting between the two schools. E-town leads the series, 5-3.

The probable wrestlers for E-town and their records will be as follows:

Judo Club Plans To Meet Eastern Powers

Ever since the victory at the Juniata Judo Invitational Tournament, the Juniata Judo Club has consolidated its strength and formed a new image of itself. It is an image which could bring the club a victory at the Eastern States Championships in March. In order to fulfill its potentialities the Judo Club has to meet and overcome challenges from teams from West Point, Princeton, VMI, N.C.E., Penn State, and Cornell. The chances for a win at Eastern States Championship will be greatly enhanced with wins over these teams before the championship themselves. The first of these challenges will be with Penn State and West Point early this month.

To meet these threats the Juniata Judo Club has built a very fine core of five Judoists, including Leroy Mell, Paul Freeman, Pete Shaffer, Bob Butz, and Ron Schilling. However to be a good Judo team, especially a team looking for a victory at the Eastern Championships, a team must have depth. With the fine skills of Bill Keen, Richard Wieler, Paul Lenhar, and Bob Gerhart, the Judo Club has the depth necessary to attain its highest goals.

Warrior Of The Week

Coaches Pick Co-Warriors Tussey And Broadwater

Dale Broadwater

John Tussey

Co-captain junior John Tussey and junior Dale Broadwater were selected "Co-warriors of the week" by their coaches. The 5'9" Tussey held Albright captain Billy Kudrick to one field goal in the second half, and Broadwater did a job on Mike Eckenroth, holding him to six points all game. Both Kudrick and Eckenroth were averaging more than 15 points per game.

"Both Tussey and Broadwater showed what you can do on the defensive end of the court," said Trimmer of his week's selections. The "warrior" choices are based on performance and attitude showed during practices as well as in a game.

Tussey's six field goals were all timely jump shots from the far corners, some banking in and some never nudging the rim. He attempted 12 goals for a .500 average.

Statistics-wise, Broadwater was the most "patient" of the Tribe, hitting on five of six attempts from the field for a .835 average. Becoming tougher on the boards with each game, the six-footer grabbed nine rebounds.

Tussey, the son of Mrs. Helen Tussey of Coropolis, played under coach Vic Bianchi of Coropolis High School. Broadwater, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Broadwater of Hummelstown, played under coach Frank Capitani of Lower Dauphin High School.

Focus Lecturer To Discuss Current SE Asia Problems

Roger Hilsman

Roger Hilsman, former assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs will discuss the current world trouble spot in Oller Hall at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, on the topic "Asia—Its Problems, Inside and Outside."

Hilsman is one of the nation's leading authorities on foreign affairs with personal experience in the area of Vietnam and Communist China. He served the government first as director of the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research. In this position he analyzed current crises all over the world as a guide to policy and conducted research for long-term planning.

As a trouble-shooter, Hilsman traveled to South Vietnam where his personal experience as a guerrilla fighter was invaluable. He also went to Laos and India in the wake of the Communist attack.

Early in 1963, President Kennedy

Dr. Crosby Spends Sabbatical Leave In Study At U. of P.

American History and Latin American History are the primary fields of study for Dr. Kenneth W. Crosby, Professor of History, who is spending spring on sabbatical at the University of Pennsylvania.

The main purpose of Dr. Crosby's research program is to learn new and diverse methods of presenting the study of history. Information received from courses at the University of Pennsylvania will aid Dr. Crosby in restructuring his lectures and refreshing his approach to the subject matter.

After graduating from Cincinnati Bible Seminary in 1937, Crosby received a B.S. degree in education from Wilmington College in Ohio in 1939. He acquired his master of arts degree at Haverford College the following year and a Ph.D. from George Washington University in 1949.

Dr. Crosby has been on the Juniata Faculty since 1948. Prior to his affiliation with the College, he served for four years as chaplain in the Army Air Force. During this time he was with the 877th Airborne Engineer Aviation Battalion, stationed in England, France, Belgium, Germany, and Czechoslovakia. He was also a Teaching Fellow in history at George Washington University following World War II.

Sabbatical, which is a leave of absence granted for travel or research, is a policy which has long been encouraged by the college, aimed at promoting academic curiosity as well as educational refreshment.

chose Hilsman to succeed W. Averell Harriman as assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs. The crises through which Hilsman held this post included the Buddhist problem in South Vietnam and the coup against President Diem; the dispute with Malaysia and Indonesia; the Communist aggression in Laos; and the violent quarrel between China and the Soviet Union.

In 1962 Hilsman developed the first official U.S. statement on the Sino-Soviet dispute. Newspaper reactions at the time analyzed the statement as an effort to break the old taboos and to discuss relations with China in the same responsible spirit that marks other problems. Hilsman resigned as assistant Secretary of State in March, 1964, to take his present position as professor of government at Columbia University.

After graduating from West Point in 1943, Hilsman was assigned immediately to the Far East, where he joined the famed Merrill's Marauders. Upon his recovery from a near-fatal wound, he was moved to the Office of Strategic Services, and commanded a guerrilla battalion operating behind enemy lines.

After the war, Hilsman was reassigned to Washington, first as assistant Chief for Far East Intelligence operations of the OSS, and later as Special Assistant to the Executive Officer of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Returning to scholarship in 1947, he earned his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Yale University before the Korean War brought him back into the service. From 1950 to 1953 he was a NATO planning officer in London and Frankfurt. At the end of this tour of duty he went to Princeton University's Center of International Studies and three years later joined the Library of Congress as Chief of the Foreign Affairs Division of the Legislative Reference Service.

In this position he was an advisor to members of Congress on defense and foreign policy.

Pianists To Be Featured Sunday In JC's Oller Hall

Stecher and Horowitz, duo pianists, will be featured in the third and final concert of the Huntingdon Concert Association's current season in Oller Hall at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Columbia Hosts JC Forensic Soc.

Four members of the Juniata College Forensic Society are participating in a debate tournament at Columbia University today and tomorrow.

Each of the two teams, consisting of Chris Moore and Jeff Cawley and Bob Stump and Bob Kuhns, will argue both sides of the national debate topic: Resolved: That the United States Should Substantially Reduce Its Foreign Policy Commitments.

The Society extends an invitation to all students interested in taking part in or observing a Debater's Congress to be held at the Pennsylvania State University this coming Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The format will be that of a mock legislature concerned with foreign affairs. Various events will include parliamentary speaking, extemporaneous, persuasive and after dinner speaking. Anyone interested in attending the sessions should contact either Jeff Cawley, P.O. Box 78 or Judy Heberling, P.O. Box 215.

Plans Reviewed For College Center

The Student College Center Committee met Sunday, Feb. 19 at Dr. Kaylor's to review the plans for the proposed College Center and to offer constructive student opinion and criticism.

A problem arose concerning the College Center's dining facilities. As now planned, all meals will be served cafeteria style. The majority of the Committee felt that the evening family style meal should be continued in order to preserve a congenial atmosphere in which relaxed social contact can exist.

The Committee, realizing the weight student opinion should have concerning this matter, wishes to have tangible evidence to present to President Ellis and the trustees. A poll will therefore be taken, presenting this question to the students on Thursday, Mar. 2 in the Second Student Government election.

The Committee has stated that any questions and opinions concerning the new College Center should be directed to its members: Dave Gould, Joan Edwards, Mary K. Stom, Mimi Edgar, and Richard Sackett.

Briggs Rehearses Thespians In "The Glass Menagerie"

Juniata's Thespians, under the direction of Prof. Clayton Briggs, are currently preparing for presentation of "The Glass Menagerie," a play by Tennessee Williams which takes a look at the pathetic character of a mother who is a product of the South and her influence on her children as she tries to produce a meaningful direction in their lives during their meager existence in a St. Louis apartment.

Judy Hershey plays Amanda Wingfield, the mother, while Barb Rowe and Bob Frynsinger portray Laura and Tom the children. Jim O'Connor, Tom's friend, is played by Gary

A write-in campaign elected Linda Ronning Chairman of Social Activities running against Kathy Wiggins with a vote of 426 - 338.

Ed Rodgers won the position of Athletics Chairman by a landslide with 512 votes over his opponents Dennis Graham with 167, and Walt Sinnamon 115.

Two chairs are yet to be determined by run-off elections held today. The necessary plurality was not attained in the cases of Communications Chairman and Men's House. Sandie Buer led Glenn Aston-Reese, 409 - 317, in the competition for Chairman of Communications. Paul Baker held a too narrow edge to win over Mike Rohrbach, the vote being 223 - 208. These positions will be determined today by the attainment of a simple majority. The election showed 831 students voting. Next Thursday will give students another chance to break this record percentage in voting for the Legislature and certain referendums.

Winter-Weekend Features Pair Extraordinaire Tonight Alpine Holiday Tomorrow

With or without the co-operation of the weatherman, JC goes winter this weekend under the direction of the social committee and the freshman class.

Tonight the highly praised Pair Extraordinaire comes to campus for a concert in Oller Hall. The most unusual aspect of The Pair is their use of only a bass fiddle as accompaniment to a voice. This innovation has proven successful and The Pair has been acclaimed as a real musical treat.

After their performance, there will be refreshments served in South Lounge and students will have a chance to talk to Marcus and Craig.

Tomorrow night the freshman class has planned an "Alpine Holiday" for the Midwinter Formal. Music at the ski lodge (alias Memorial Gym) will be provided by Alfonso Britt and his Dials.

The East Mezzanine will not be used for this dance and refreshment tables will be set up on the main floor. Co-chairman Sally Palmer is planning the refreshments. Tea sandwiches with shrimp and crabmeat will be served with punch, nuts and mints.

An added attraction at the dance will be a "Skiing Holiday for two" to be offered as a door prize. The prize will include everything from transportation to Blue Knob at a convenient time to lessons if needed.

MacNeill To Give Math Lectures Thurs. and Fri.

Lectures on advanced mathematics will be delivered Thursday and Friday, March 2 and 3, by Dr. H. M. MacNeill, a professor at Case Institute of Technology and the former director of the American Mathematical Society.

Dr. MacNeill will speak on such subjects as "The Gamblers' Ruin and Random Walks," "Professional Appearances in Mathematics" and other topics under the Visiting Lecturers' Program, sponsored by the Mathematical Association of America.

The talk on Thursday will be held in Room A 201 at 4:30 and the same room will be used for a talk on Friday afternoon at the same time. An evening lecture will be held in Alumni Hall. The subject of this lecture is also "The Gamblers' Ruin and Random Walks."

Dr. MacNeill received a graduate training at Oxford and Harvard Universities and his Ph.D. from the latter university. He was a Sterling Fellow at Yale and a Benjamin Pierce Instructor at Harvard.

Dr. MacNeill taught at Swarthmore, Kenyon and Washington University. During and after World War II he worked for the Federal Government.

That's Protocol?

After the most recent Focus program, "An Evening's Frost" just a week ago, a private faculty reception was held in the students' lounge of South Hall. This is one of the most peculiar and tragic paradoxes we have witnessed all year.

We were under the impression that the Focus Series served a universally cultural function for the entire community. Why did students not have access to the cast of the program? Talk-backs are one of JC's assets and their function, in student involvement, is part of this school's philosophy.

We are not protesting the private faculty party in itself. Rather, there is a matter of principle that has been violated. The Faculty Club is the logical and proper place for the event to have been held. The point is that, partially defensible in that the reception was held in the students' lounge and partially by the implicit nature of the Focus Series, students should have been given some privilege of the cultural advantage, or it should have been totally private in its discrimination.

Students were denied the use of their lounge and denied cultural betterment for the obscure convenience of a matter of protocol in which they were erroneously denied any involvement. Protocol must be more discreet; it must be perfectly administered to the best interests of all. Otherwise it is unjust and fails in its function.

We ask for an apology and an explanation from the Cultural Events Committee concerning this matter.

For, by following the demonstration of protocol as an example of what is proper and not beyond policy, the students' Social Activities Committee would not be unjustified in throwing a private, by invitation only, student reception—perhaps in the Faculty Club, for some minor convenience—for Marcus and Craig of "The Pair" to-night, giving no faculty members who may be interested in them an opportunity to come in contact with this sort of culture, before students bid them a final farewell.

What Style?

We will all have an opportunity to decide next Thursday in the election whether we want to continue the policy of family style meals in the new College Center. It is surprising to find that students, for the most part, really do prefer the inconveniences of some nebulously nice gesture implicit in the family style to the casual and ultimately more convenient cafeteria process. Hatred of standing in line hardly seems to be a worthwhile and philosophically consistent, so to speak, excuse. We wish students would reconsider before casting their vote. Why don't we want to abolish this formality? If, as many feel the change in meal serving is going to take something (indescribable) away from the JC atmosphere, it is probably something that doesn't exist in the first place. Family style is out of style.

SB

'Round Campus

Again this year, JC students will have an opportunity to exhibit their skills in the riotous, rollicking sport of co-ed volleyball. A complete roster must contain five men and five women. The competition begins March 1, so get your teams together, and turn the list in to Larry Bieber no later than Sunday, February 27.

Yesterday's elections brought to a close four days vigorous campaigning by the candidates for the various executive, cabinet, and dormitory government positions of the Student Government. If our new officers fulfill their goals as disclosed in their speeches Tuesday night, the Student Senate will really go places. Also, the many posters were extremely clever but could cause doubt (especially those in the area of Tote) as to the nature of several campaigns. Nevertheless, everyone showed lots of spirit. Congratulations to the new officers.

Much to his embarrassment, a junior student rushed into his 8:30 Psychology class, (late-so he thought) carefully climbed over several students, sat down in his seat, took out his pen, and proceeded writing furiously—only to find that he had interrupted the last few minutes of the previous class and was early for his! Have no fear, PL, it happens to the best of us.

A reminder to anyone interested that the Standing Stone Art Exhibition will be on display in Shoemaker Galleries until February 28. This collection of local art can be viewed today until 5 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

Four sophomore girls, in an innocent attempt to abide by a Lenten pledge and eat nothing sweet, caused quite a disturbance behind the new men's dorm last week when they decided to borrow a boyfriend's car to purchase some steak sandwiches. Not only did they bring half the dorm to their windows, but they ended up ankle deep in mud. Better luck next time, girls.

One lucky feminine creature found out what it's like to be only female living in a men's dorm. With such an unbalanced ratio, she couldn't help but attract attention (and plenty of it). Too bad for the guys, but she's found a better home. Just ask anyone on first floor Cloister about "Ginger."

The Women's Basketball Team came through with their first victory at home last week against Indiana. In a close and exciting game, Juniata triumphed 45-40, bringing their season standing up to 3 and 4. Tomorrow they will travel to Chambersburg for a game with Penn Hall.

The recent study done on the girls in South and Lesher has caused quite varied reactions among the girls in the respective dorms. Some were pleased and felt the findings true while others were quite offended. One thing they all agreed on is that if guys believe these findings to be true in respect to all the girls in the dorm in question, someone is sure going to be in for a surprise.

Last Saturday's 3 point victory over E-town certainly met with approval from all the JC students, especially a certain group with a strong sense of rivalry sparked by the results of Juniata's defeat at E-town. We do try hardest! Speaking of basketball, three cheers for the team in their 75-65 victory "away" over Bloomsburg. That small group of fans that appeared to meet the bus when it returned deserves a special hand too.

Co-ed Hours Regs How To Protest

(ACP)—Those few coeds who are dissatisfied with hours regulations or restrictive in loco parentis treatment in general should protest for themselves and find their own solutions, suggests the Colorado State University College.

After criticizing the majority of CSU coeds for accepting the status quo, Editor John Gascoyne offered these suggestions for those few who would like to change the situation.

'An Evening's Frost' Draws Reviews From Faculty and Student Critics

by Ralph B. Church,
Assistant professor of English

The whimsical nature of Robert Frost was brought vividly alive to a receptive capacity audience at Oiler Hall last Friday evening, by a touring company of "An Evening's Frost" starring Will Geer. The almost uniform reaction was that it was a sparkling evening, both entertaining and enformative.

Geer, at times, seemed almost to be Robert Frost. Those who had heard Frost read his own works would have been able to detect some differences from Geer's interpretation, but the effect of Geer was great. Frost's tone and irony were present in the readings, but the tempo was different. Geer said the lines more rapidly, losing some of the effect occasionally, and at times not giving the Frost emphasis to a word or line. Those who never heard Frost, however, would have been quite satisfied by the Geer interpretation.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the evening was the biographical material interspersed between the poems. Fresh insight from Frost's letters and prose was gained by using his poems as a sort of backdrop to his ideas and moods. All of the words spoken by Robert Frost in the production were actual quotations from his letters and conversations, and most of the remarks were new to the audience. Donald Hall, the author of the play, was judicious in his choice of material to entertain an audience. The play of poetry against prose background and comment was balanced and effective.

Several of the poems came across quite vividly, particularly "The Witch of Coos" and "Home Burial" by Miss Byrd and Jack Davidson. I was jarred a little by the reading of "After Apple Picking," which did not indicate the depth of the poem, and by "To Earthward," which was delivered almost nonchalantly. All told, however, the rendition of the poems was quite acceptable, often novel, and generally entertaining.

The stark and simple stage, the lighting, the pattern of movement on the stage, and the clarity of the narrator's voice all helped to excite the audience and set the mood for the evening. The approach was to give a simple background for the poetry and life of Frost, and the staging did just that. Nothing was obtrusive; the whole performance was expertly planned.

The major criticism I have of the show ultimately goes back to the choice of material. Robert Frost was not a simple man, nor was he a sort of clown. His darkness of spirit, his loneliness, his bitterness, and his sarcasm were largely absent from the production. Geer, in conversation with me after the performance, acknowledged this flaw, and he explained some of the intricacies of dealing with the estate of Robert Frost. Certainly, the production was intended for mass audiences, but anyone who sat through this production and came away thinking he had met the real Robert Frost would be mistaken. Instead, he met a sort of stage Robert Frost, a stage personality Frost himself originated and hated perpetuate. Perhaps it would be asking too much to try for a balanced and personal revelation of Frost the man, but I feel that this production tried too hard to show the Frost we would like to believe in, a sort of crackerbarrel philosopher, a sort of intelligent Edgar Guest. His comic spirit overshadowed all else in this production.

Any performance that can pack an auditorium and keep it entertained simply by reciting poetry and comment should be commended. This "Evening's Frost" did capture its audience and it did do it mostly by Frost's poetry. That is no mean achievement in America. Perhaps some of the audience will now go to Frost's works and grow in that contact. This production may serve as an entree to some of the audience who will now go on to the main course, the real and complex world of Robert Frost.

some situations are based on tradition rather than law.

A dramatic interpretation of Robert Frost's works and a poignant portrait of Frost, the man, was offered by Geer and company last week.

by John Wilcox

Fully one-half of the Juniata student body turned out to hear the performance "An Evening's Frost." Only the most cynical student could have left disappointed; many of the doubters discovered that poetry isn't so bad after all.

Here, for a change, was a performance which lived up to its advance billing; it even exceeded that billing. There was but one disappointment. Many had wanted Geer to utter that Frost poem which they were most familiar. Instead, it was done by Jack Davidson, who portrayed the younger Frost. If "Stopping by the Woods on a Snowy Evening" was spoken by the wrong person and not as moving as it perhaps might have been, Geer's final rendition of "The Pasture" more than made up for the earlier mis-casting.

It will be a long time before anyone who was present will forget "The Witch of Coos." This was probably the longest single bit of prose used but was never boring. The advantageous use of light made Anne Geer Byrd into a convincingly ominous witch, the music and the idiot-like son contributed to the Charles-Adams type household. The story itself was reminiscent of Ambrose Bierce. If one did not know better he might even have been a bit scared at times. We all knew better, of course, and the terror was conveyed to us as humor. The audience laughed gustily throughout. It was done so well, in fact, that the change of pace which followed was almost a letdown, and several minutes passed before we could forget "The Witch" and re-identify with those works that followed.

The poem "Acquainted with the Night" was as poignant as "The Draft Horse" was puzzling. "Fire and Ice" was short but drew quite a few belly laughs. Geer's rendition of "Departmental" broke up the audience; it was actually the only single piece for which the audience broke into spontaneous applause uninitiated by a dimming of the lights.

That bit of nonsense was immediately followed by the piece "Out, Out" in which the boy lost his hand and subsequently died, causing many to wonder if Frost did not indeed have a rather sadistic streak in him. This poem reinforced such thoughts which were earlier aroused by the moving "The Death of the Hired Man."

Certainly, different poems and prose will be longer remembered by different members of the audience. Those seniors who read Steinbeck's "In Dubious Battle" probably drew a parallel between that book and Frost's "After Apple Picking." Some might liken "Birches" to their younger days and their own tree-climbing adventures. Those of the older generation might recall past friends and express thoughts similar to those spoken of in "To E.T."

No doubt there were few in Friday night's audience who did not wish that they too could use Frost's epitaph as their own: "Forgive, O Lord, my little jokes on you, and I'll forgive your big one on me." This clever bit of rhetoric was followed by "The Pasture," and that was all. There was a long pause, and then quiet applause. Overheard—"I was reluctant to applaud; I didn't want to break the spell."

Senate News and Views

Prue Engle
Senate reporter

Last night's Senate meeting was phenomenal!

Finally the confrontation took place between students and the administration. It was a confrontation that was legitimate, necessary, and long over-due. Students asserted rights which were theirs to assert and asked questions which need to be answered.

Questions centered around the proposed College Center and the administration's action regarding the SCOPE recommendation on women's hours.

Senate President Jim Donaldson, in a report on a recent meeting of the student members of the College Center with Dr. Earl Kaylor, questioned whether the plans for the building were realistic and whether or not Juniata students are going to get "typed" if proposed changes are made.

Donaldson stated that the predictions for the next ten years is an expansion of the Juniata student body to 1250. Yet, with the rapid increase which has taken place within the last few years he feels that this is a very unrealistic prediction. The proposed dining hall facilities in the College Center call for a seating capacity of 850. This would allow only for continuous serving of all meals or a sit-down meal served in two shifts. Reportedly, to make the dining facilities large enough for 1250 students would involve nearly half of the total cost of the building.

Another serious objection raised by Donaldson was the lack of any large areas in which to hold dances. Student opinion favors dances in the student center as opposed to other buildings on campus, yet the largest space now available in the plans is about the size of Women's Gym.

The most basic question raised is whether or not the center is going to serve its purpose. The planned structure costs 2 1/4 million dollars. This includes four floors, with facilities for dining halls, lounges, a snack-bar, recreation rooms, small meeting rooms, and offices for student publications and the radio station. However, the trustees want to completely eliminate the top floor and cut the cost to 1 1/2 million dollars. Thinking in practical terms, it seems impossible to imagine a student center with even adequate facilities for that price.

Donaldson further questioned administrative policy and process concerning the administration's action on the SCOPE recommendation. Dean Schoenherr requested that reasons for the specific changes in women's hours be submitted by the SCOPE sub-committee. In return, Donaldson and SCOPE members asked Dean Schoenherr to submit to them the specific objections and questions which the administration has. Rumors and unofficial attacks on the proposed changes are circulating on campus and it was felt that these should be presented in such a way that the committee could fairly defend their actions.

The question of whom finally decides the outcome of the recommendation was also pressed by Donaldson. He said the students have a right to know who is responsible for accepting or rejecting the proposals which the Senate submits. Argument arose over whether final power in this specific case lay in the Dean of Student Affairs office or with the Student Activity Committee. Technically, dormitory hours are a "student service" and are determined by the Dean although Dean Schoenherr favors taking the recommendation to SAC for consideration there.

WJC News And Events

On that eventful day of February 13, the studio of WJC was engulfed with an air of tragedy. Ralph, the station coconut had been kidnapped. He was ruthlessly overpowered and forcefully removed. The A.R.S. (Anti-Ralph Society) had struck. After the staff had recovered from the shock they went about following up clues to Ralph's recovery. The ransom called for one thousand dollars in dimes or its equivalent in green trading stamps with peppermint flavored stickum. On Feb. 16, the A.R.S. struck again, this time with blue paint, como blue paint which they spread throughout the station. Although this kind deed was greatly appreciated by the staff, a feeling of remorse still hung over the station, Ralph was still missing. To this minute our coconut friend is in the hands of the incomparable A.R.S.

W.J.C. broadcasted its first away basketball game Feb. 15 when the sports crew traveled to Selingsgrove to bring to its listeners the game between Susquehanna and Juniata. W.J.C. hopes to bring many such broadcasts to its followers, if interest is shown among the student body.

W.J.C. has cleared its many shelves of priceless records heard from time to time in its broadcasting. These records are now on sale in the station for mere pennies, 5¢ for 45 rpm's and only a quarter for albums. Just stop in and ask for one of the staff members.

President's Role Includes Activities Beyond Campus

In the Education section of its Feb. 10 issue, Time Magazine gave the implication that "most self-respecting (are) active far beyond the campus." Juniata's Dr. Calvert N. Ellis, although he doesn't exactly preside over a university-type system, is nevertheless, by Time's criterion, probably one of the most "self-respecting" college presidents ever to grace the ranks of higher education administration.

At the present time Dr. Ellis, as a consultant to the Ford Foundation for the academic year 1966-67, is in the process of studying the question of faculty improvement by visiting 30 U.S. colleges which have received Ford Foundation grants. Earlier this month he enacted his role as chairman of the Evaluating Committee of the Middle States Association of Colleges in conducting a three-day evaluation of Union Theological Seminary in New York.

The most significant of President Ellis' recent activities "far beyond the campus" was his election as vice-chairman of the Association of American Colleges at its annual meeting in Los Angeles, Jan. 17. The Association, which represents 800 colleges and universities in the U.S., is dedicated to the promotion of the liberal arts and sciences in higher education and is interested in the relationships among administration, faculties, and students in promoting learning. Emphasis is placed upon the importance of a liberal arts education and the necessity of meeting society's needs for such.

His extensive background and experience within the Association of American Colleges will no doubt be of value to Dr. Ellis when he advances to its chairmanship next year. He served on the Association's Board of Directors from 1965 until his election as vice-chairman, and he also has been chairman of its related Commission on the Arts (1949-55) and on Legislation (1961-64). In representing the Association, President Ellis has testified on matters of higher education before committees of every U.S. Congress since 1948 (the present Congress excepted).

The history of Dr. Ellis' extra-campus activities encompasses a prodigious list of executive positions in higher educational organizations; he has served as director of the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the Middle States, and he has held the presidencies of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools (1965), of the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities, and of the Foundation of Independent Colleges of Pennsylvania. Also, President Ellis has been a member of the American Council on Education Commission on Relations with the Federal Government, and of the Advisory Committee on Higher Education to the State Board of Education (the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania).

There being no doubt as to the quantitative extent of the off-campus services which Dr. Ellis has rendered in the field of higher education, the question may arise concerning his resultant ability to be effective as President of Juniata College. But his extra-campus positions are relatively not all that time-consuming: Dr. Ellis estimated, for example, that his vice-chairmanship of the Association of American Colleges will demand his being off-campus for no more than a cumulative total of two weeks' time in order for him to represent the Association at various educational meetings throughout the coming year.

Furthermore, in evaluating his administrative contributions to Juniata, one can hardly overlook the more tangible accomplishments of President Ellis' 24-year term. Few present Juniata students were ever alive in 1943 when Dr. Ellis succeeded his father, Dr. Charles C. Ellis, as the College's sixth President. Since that time, President Ellis has found time to oversee an impressive program of expansion and growth in Juniata's physical facilities: it is indeed hard to imagine Juniata as a college without such structures as the Norman Brumbaugh Science Complex, the L. A. Beeghly Library, the Memorial Physical Education Building, the Shoemaker Art Galleries, the Tussey Terrace, North, and Sherwood men's dormitories, and the Lesher and South women's dormitories.

With the Academic Center for the humanities and social sciences presently under construction, and the promise of a College Center in the near future, Juniata continues to grow under the auspices of Dr. Ellis, as "self-respecting" a college president as there ever was, be he on campus or off.

Dr. Ellis received his A.B. degree from Juniata College in 1923, the Th. B. degree from Princeton Theological Seminary and the M.A. from Princeton University in 1927. His Doctor of Philosophy degree was awarded by Yale University in 1932.

In 1950, President Ellis was honored with the Doctor of Divinity degree from Bethany Theological Seminary in Chicago and in 1956 with the Doctor of Laws degree from Manchester College. He did graduate study at the University of Goettingen in Germany, the University of Zurich in Switzerland and Harvard University.

After graduation from Juniata, Dr. Ellis taught in the Lewistown, Pa. High School for one year and at Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa. In 1931 he returned to Juniata as assistant professor of Biblical studies and in 1934 was advanced to professor. Nine years later he succeeded his father as President of the College.

Juniata's Clair Kenyon (30) goes up against an E-town defender while Will Brandau (52) looks on. Against E-town Kenyon had 12 points to help JC win in an upset 58-55.

B-ballers Battle State Schools To End Season

A basketball game against Indiana is on the agenda Saturday night for JC. This is the second meeting of the season for the two schools with the Tribe winning at home 77-71 in double overtime.

Presently IUP is sporting a 7-12 record, but they have had a lot of close games. As a team they are averaging 81.4 points a game and allowing their opponents an average of 84.2 points.

The Big Indians have five players scoring in double figures. Dick Crawford, 6'4" junior, has been hitting for 15.9 points a game. Gary Lupek, 6'6" sophomore, has a 15.4 average. Don Donda, 5'10" senior co-captain has a 10.7 average and Bob Kalp, 5'11" senior co-captain has a 10.6 average. Les Shoop, 6'2" sophomore, has a 10.5 average. These five make up the starting line-up for IUP. Only Lupek did not letter last year.

Next Tuesday Juniata wraps up this year's basketball season at home against Lock Haven. This is the second meeting of the year for the two schools with LH winning the first 65-64 at Lock Haven.

LH's present record is 3-12 with wins over California, Clarion and Juniata.

Three players for Lock Haven are scoring in double figures. Max Paulovich, 5'9" senior, has a 15.8 average. Steve Daley (the coach's son), 6'2" junior, has a 13.0 average and Jim Richards, 6'2 1/2" sophomore, has a 10.4 average. These three start for Lock Haven. The other two starters are Tom Lewis, 5'9" senior, and Tom McLean, 6'2 1/2" junior.

Last Wednesday Juniata fell to Susquehanna at Susquehanna, 90-73. Leading scorer for JC that night was Clair Kenyon with 24 points. Also hitting in double figures was Will Brandau, 14 points and Bruce Bader, 14 points. Bader pulled down 11 rebounds and Brandau had 7.

Last Saturday the Juniata Indians' basketball team pulled off its second successive upset by defeating the Elizabethtown Bluejays by a 58 to 53 score. The Bluejays who were pregame 18 point favorites, jumped out to an early eight point lead and seemed to be on their way to an easy victory until JC's pressing defense and some good rebounding by Bob Chandler brought the Indians to life. Some timely steals were converted into baskets and by halftime Juniata had a slim 31 to 30 edge.

Throughout the second half the Indian lead stretched from ten to three points and with one minute to go was down to one again. An effective freeze resulted in an easy basket by Will Brandau and two foul shots by Clair Kenyon, safely putting the game on ice for Juniata. As in the Albright game the week before, a combination of strong defense and even scoring produced the Juniata victory. John Lentz, the offensive star for E-town, was held to two field goals the entire second half and the Indian press resulted in numerous turnovers. Dale Broadwater led the scoring with 21 points as well as holding down Lentz much of the game. He received ample scoring help from Jim Doyle and Clair Kenyon, both of whom scored twelve points.

This past Tuesday Juniata won its first away game in three seasons when the Indians bounced Bloomsburg State 75-65 on the Huskies' court.

The last time an Indian cage team brought home a victory was Dec. 12, 1964, when Juniata beat Wilkes 75-66. Then came 20 consecutive losing games on the road.

Dale Broadwater led the Tribe in scoring for the second game this week, pumping in 23 points and snatching three rebounds. The 6'0" junior shot 100 percent during the second period against Bloomsburg — three for three from the field and five for five from the foul line.

Three other Indians were in double figures. Brandau scored 14 and had 10 rebounds. Kenyon bagged 13 points and Jim Doyle, 10.

Defense told the story in the Indians' long-awaited victory away from home. At times during the game it appeared as if the Huskies were seeing pressure defense for the first time as Kenyon and Doyle led a fight backcourt squeeze and Brandau, Broadwater, Chandler, Barnhart and Bader kept things jumping inside. But offensively, also, the Tribe shot .580, one of their best averages from the field.

Warrior Of The Week

Kenyon Is Named Second Time

Clair Kenyon is Juniata's top scorer but his stellar defensive play has had great influence in his being selected for the second time by his coaches as the team's "Warrior of the Week." His first selection came after the Washington & Jefferson and Indiana games in December.

The 1965-66 scoring leader who has been continuing his reputation in this category, Kenyon this season has been balancing his attack with the kind of pressure defense that has made him one of Coach Russ Trimmer's top defensive players.

"Clair has been a steady influence on the team," said Trimmer. "His consistency and the job he's given us defensively need recognition."

The 5'11" junior, whose pre-season knee injury cast some early "ifs" on his basketball future, has kept up with the toughest scorers facing the Indians all year. And his 210 points in 14 games (15 per game) is indicative of his offensive eye.

His "Warrior" selection was for to the all-around performances against Susquehanna and Elizabethtown last week. At Susquehanna in a losing cause (73-90) he was high for JC with 22 points, including two free throws, four recoveries, one blocked shot and three scoring assists. In the 58-55 upset win over E-town Kenyon sunk 12 points, grabbed five rebounds, and had three assists. In 14 games, Kenyon has the best foul shooting average (.857) on 36 for 42 tries. His shooting average from the field is .383.

Kenyon was named twice in January to the all-East Division III team of the Eastern College Athletic Conference—following games with Lycoming and Scranton (Jan. 5-7) and with Lock Haven and Ursinus (Jan. 9-14). And this past week Kenyon became the first player in Juniata history to be named for the third time to the all-East Division III team of the ECAC.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Clair F. Kenyon, Sr. of Huntingdon, the junior playmaker was graduated from Huntingdon Area High School where he played under Coach George Weaver. At HAHS he was named to the All-League and All-County teams and received honorable mention as an All-State guard. Kenyon also was the recipient of the Senior Athletic Award.

Grapplers Take 6-4 Record To Indiana

JC's grapplers travel to Indiana Tuesday, February 18, to meet the Big Indians of IUP.

IUP has a 5-4 record with matches against St. Francis and Shippensburg before they meet Juniata. This will be the seventh meeting between the two schools and JC leads the series 3-2-1. Last year Juniata won 15-12.

The only common opponent for JC and IUP was St. Vincent. Indiana downed SV 39-0 and the Tribe won 30-5.

Kling is Indiana's only undefeated wrestler with a 9-0 record, Camden has 5 pins at 160 and a 6-2-1 record.

Last Wednesday JC's grapplers lost to St. Francis College, 24-9. Juniata won three out of four matches, but after that the lean and hungry Frankies dominated.

Judo Team Overwhelms Newark

The Judo Club of Juniata College choked the varsity team of Newark College of Engineering in a lopsided 52-7 victory at Newark Saturday.

The judo match at Newark was the first competition for the Juniata club since it swept team and individual honors at the first invitational tournament here in December.

Winning by throws for Juniata were Bill Keen and Doug Gregg (10 points each). Chuck Locke and Bob Monti both won by choking their opponents (10 points each). Steve Carroll won by the referee's decision (5 points). Three Juniata judoists ended their matches in a draw: Dick Wieler, Ron Schilling, and Paul Freeman. The only first degree grown belt on the Juniata club, Freeman faced a first degree black belt.

Pete Schaefer lost by one-half point (7 points in scoring) for Juniata's only miscue. He is a third degree

College Receives $11,687 Grant

President Ellis revealed recently that Juniata has received a federal grant of $11,687 under Title VI of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

Dr. Ellis said that the departments benefiting from the grant are biology, geology, economics and accounting, music and language.

The State Commission on Academic Facilities announced the grant in Harrisburg. There were 35 successful applicants for assistance.

Title VI of the Higher Education Act was initiated to provide colleges with opportunities for funds with which to improve their instructional equipment and materials. This is the second grant received by Juniata under this program.

JC Hosts Exhibition Of Graphic Works By Harold Altman

An exhibition of the graphic works of Harold Altman, nationally famous artist from Penn State, will be on display in the Shoemaker Galleries beginning tomorrow.

Altman has won a reputation on the basis of his sensitive handling of engraving and etchings as well as his painting. His material is based on realism but is subjected to a very personal view of the human predicament.

Considered by many to be among the most promising young artists, Altman has exhibited in the leading museums and colleges in this country. He is represented in major collections including the Museum of Modern Art, the Art Institute of Chicago, the Cleveland Museum of Art, the National Academy, the Library of Congress, and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia.

Altman's selection as one of the twelve artists in America to exhibit in the Paris Biennals of 1959, is among his long list of honors. His work is not new to Paris art circles, however, since he lived and studied at L'Academie de la Grande Chaumiere from 1949 to 1952.

The exhibition, offered under the direction of Steven A. Barbash, associate professor of art, will be on view 2 to 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays, and 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 5 p.m. during the week with the exception of Monday, when it is closed to the public.

Neuroanatomists Discuss Research and Careers

The opportunity to hear and talk with two prominent neuroanatomists will be given students and faculty on Monday and Tuesday when Drs. Sidney Goldring and James Ward will be on campus to discuss neurological research and careers in neuroanatomy. A formal lecture series entitled "Cerebral Cortex Structure and Function" will also be presented.

At 11:30 a.m. on Monday, there will be a lecture in the Animal Physiology class in room B 200 of the Brumbaugh Science Complex. Following this, Drs. Goldring and Ward will be available for informal conversation with students and faculty from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

An evening seminar on a neurological research topic will be held at 8:15 p.m. in room B 200. This will be part of Juniata's regular Science Lecture Series.

On Tuesday morning at 9 the Development and Structure of Chorrates class will hear a lecture in room B 201, and at 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Drs. Goldring and Ward will do neurophysiological demonstrations in the Animal Physiology laboratory, room B 307.

Dr. Goldring and Dr. Ward are participating in the Visiting Scientists in Neuroanatomy Program supported by the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness, a division of the National Institutes of Health. Juniata College has taken part in the program for the last three years.

The Neuroanatomy Visiting Scientists Program, originated to meet the present serious shortage of neuroanatomists, brings neurological scientists with recognized reputations as teachers and investigators to college campuses to talk with students and faculty about neuroanatomy.

"Bogey" Film Festival Allows Juniata Ivy League Acclaim

What have many Ivy League campuses had that Juniata has not? One of the answers is a Humphrey Bogart Film Festival.

This craze for "Bogey" films started a few years ago and has grown to the proportions of a cult across the nation.

Juniata jumps on the bandwagon tonight and tomorrow with the showing of two Bogart's best films: "Casablanca" and "The Caine Mutiny." Both pictures, made in 1943 and 1954, respectively, resulted in Academy Award nominations for the perennial "heavy."

Tonight's showing of "Casablanca" in Oller Hall at 8:30 p.m. presents Bogart, Ingrid Bergman, Peter Lorre and Claude Rains in a tale of intrigue among refugees from occupied Europe in 1941. Referred to as a "movie-movie" because of the elements of identifiable characters, exotic atmosphere and suspense, it stands as one of the best of this genre and received an Academy Award for the best picture of the year.

Tomorrow evening in Oller Hall at 7:30 the sinister Captain Queeg and his dissatisfied crew come to the fore in "The Caine Mutiny." Fred MacMurray, Jose Ferrer and Van Johnson also star in this intense drama of a man's mental dissolution and its effects on his subordinates.

These pictures provide an opportunity to see the work of a man who in a little more than ten years after his death has taken on the aspects of a folk hero. Women have succumbed to his rough charm and men have admired his courage and daring. The Bogart mystique remains to intrigue the generation that can but dimly remember him.

College Seeks Steps To End Dorm Drinking

by Paul Keely

There is no reason for misunderstanding on the part of Juniata students with respect to the College's drinking policy. "I think the present policy is very clear," asserted Dr. Charles W. Schoenherr, dean of student affairs, during a recent interview. "It is very specific, and it is the kind of regulation you can live with."

Any owner of the student handbook, The Pathfinder, can substantiate that "the possession or use of alcoholic beverages is expressly forbidden on campus, in College buildings, in any house approved by the College for student residence, at any College function, and on any College-sponsored trip." Nevertheless, Dean Schoenherr admitted that he has "heard it said that the dorms are the safest places to drink." In expressing concern over his belief that "there is more (drinking) going on in the dorms than I would like to think," Dr. Schoenherr maintained that he was "against all-out raids on the dorms." He added, "We have to take some action."

Last semester there were four instances in which alcohol was discovered in a residence hall, with the individuals involved being asked to leave the College. Dean Schoenherr doubted if retribution in the form of dismissal has proved to be the answer, though. "It's not a matter of ignorance of the penalty," he said. "They do it anyway." Immature students take the risk, realized Dr. Schoenherr, "to see how far they can go, to see if they can break the law without getting caught. . . . They know the consequences, but they don't want the consequences to come through."

Another aspect of the College's drinking policy reminds students that those under 21 years of age are subject to a State law which prohibits minors from transporting, possessing, or using alcoholic beverages. As the College catalogue indicates, " . . . the use of alcoholic liquors on campus (and) its illegal use anywhere . . . are very serious offenses, possibly leading to dismissal." We discour-

More Than Later Hours

Instances occurring as of late indicate that something is wrong in relation to an attitude that prevails concerning trust and responsibility of the students from the viewpoint of the administration.

SCOPE has made its recommendation in relation to women's saryhours. We feel it is warranted and far from unreasonable. It is necessary.

Now there appears to be some, more than slight, difficulty in getting these recommendations past the supposedly omnipotent and omniscient administration. It could be that the problem is not one specifically concerned with the proposal in itself, but the fact that it was presented at all, the fact that students are concerned about their own welfare and the fact that there is a trend to follow that concern with real action to change.

As we see it, this trend is just about the greatest thing that could have happened to Juniata. Why is the administration so afraid to recognize or at least admit that it is a positive trend, not—irresponsible and with significant direction?

It has now been suggested by some foresighted administrator that more needs to be done than just having a women's hours revision to foster, completely, a possibility of responsibility development on the part of the students. Absolutely. This being the ultimate purpose of the trend, it is hard to conceive of students not already having recognized this fact. Both factions agree that responsibility is to be developed and that many new measures and attitudes need to be established to further facilitate this development.

We feel it can be facilitated as long as the administration recognizes two matters of importance. Firstly, students themselves are not putting total faith in such a recommendation as the final answer to the problem. This we realize, and would hope that the administration realizes that we realize it. However, as a second complementary point, it would be as great an error to regard the proposal as trifling.

The proposal has merit in itself and also has large merit as the first—we hope the first of many—concrete manifestation in a trend resulting out of conflict. It is a relatively new conflict, almost paradoxical in nature, of an introspective student attitude, and a coddling administration that turns out to be a hindrance because of the student attitude. If we must be coddled, we want it in a way that will prove to be ultimately full of purpose in the direction that we want to go as responsible and mature educated individuals.

The Ultimate Correlation

For the past few weeks professors have been smugly hinting at the implications of Dr. Adams' recent study of the relationship between class attendance and grades. Feeling that perhaps this study was to narrowly conceived and two restrictively executed, that perhaps some pertinent data was inadvertently overlooked, several students have pooled their resources for a counter-study to protect their interests.

In spite of the limited funds available, this group of class-cutting enthusiasts has managed to obtain the services of the noted psychologist, Dr. Alfred "Numbers" Chartanograph. Dr. Chartanograph was catapulted into psychological fame recently with the publication of his book, Love and Studying—How to Make the Girl and Make the Grades. It has been a long-standing best seller in college bookstores.

"Numbers'" first task at rebuttal will be to formulate and carry out studies enlarging on Dr. Adams' thesis. For instance, finding the relationship between the organizational abilities of professors and the grades of their students is an excellent way of broadening Dr. Adams' idea. Another would be to correlate the ability of a professor to make a course exciting and stimulating with the grades achieved by the students.

Yet "Numbers'" need not stop here. The possibilities for relational studies at Juniata are countless. It is well known, for example, that academic achievement is to a certain degree dependent upon the physical condition of the student. Thus, he could examine the quantitative, qualitative and edible condition of Juniata food for its influence on grades. Or perhaps the medicinal value of the pills and tonics issued by the infirmary. It is likely, however, that after only preliminary research Dr. Chartan will have abandoned these, realizing that it is obvious they have a 95 per cent detrimental effect and require no validation.

It is only a matter of time before "Numbers'" or someone else stumbles upon what could be called the "ultimate correlation." That is, the total number of faculty and administrators compared to the total number of students, related to the ability of the administrator-professor clique to withstand mass student rioting. When this is realized the students will rebel to overthrow their chains and create a college of the students, by the students and for the students. Arise, fellow sheep; you have nothing to lose but your diplomas.

With a new accumulation of snow falling every day, there are many who have doubts as to whether or not spring will ever come. Last week's fair weather (the mercury was in the high 40's) brought a group of energy bound boys and one girl out to Oiler lawn for several matches in Lacrosse. After all, one can't wait forever for spring to arrive!

Juniata's Mid-Winter Weekend could not have been complemented more favorably than by the very cleverly decorated gym for the Mid-Winter Formal Saturday night. The freshmen really got the idea across with their skirts, poles, snow-capped mountains, and central fireplace. If this is any indication as to what's coming in the future, the class of '70 should really go somewhere.

A strange mustached figure, Gustave by name, appeared on this Lesher last week. Gustave twitched his mustache and caused quite a scene with the girls. The only hitch was that Gustave's mustache was carrot red while his own hair was brown.

That ever popular campus group, "The After Six," performed again at the well-known teenage night club in Harrisburg, the Raven, last Saturday night. They played on the same bill with a group known as the "Imitations." The numbers went over quite smoothly, but a little car trouble developed on the road down and back, leaving one member of the group on the verge of frostbite.

Those who attended the Stecher-Horowitz concert Sunday really received a treat. The program was sponsored by the Huntingdon Concert Association. When the two pianists ended the concert after four encores, the audience was still clapping for more. It was truly a marvelous performance. Many members of the audience were surprised at the large student attendance at a Sunday afternoon concert and took it to be a sign of increasing student interest in "cultural" events.

Women students will have a chance to display their various ideas of wit or criticisms of the school at the annual Skit Night to be held Sunday at 9:30 p.m. in South rec. room. The skits must be 6-8 minutes in length and will be judged on originality, participation, costumeing and props, popular appeal, and continuity. The first place skit receives $5. It's still not too late to get your skit going on a skit!

Purse or Mind

To the Editor:

After four years at Juniata College, we have come to the inescapable conclusion that the principal interests of the College lie, not with the student nor with intellectual achievement, but with the economic machinery of the school and the "business" of education.

This attitude has been incorporated into Juniata's very definition of a "liberal education."

... liberal education recognizes the need for young people to become established as early as possible in the adult social and economic pattern and to become self-sufficient in purse as well as in mind.

Juniata College Bulletin 1965-1967, p. 9)

We deplore this obligation, which Juniata apparently feels, to teach us how to make money, how to "become established" in the economic tradition of the "best" alumni. We are led to believe that undergraduate work and graduate work even more so are the means to a better position in the economic life—the adult life—of the society. An adult, by definition, becomes merely a money-maker, and in the eyes of Juniata College, a source of funds for the preparation of more future alumni.

There is more energy and vigor expended in fund-raising drives than in attracting an energetic and intellectually exciting faculty and student body. We question the value of an educational institution that does nothing more than sustain itself financially.

At Juniata, for instance, there is very little emphasis on educational opportunities beyond the limited facilities of the college and community.

Janet Kauffman

Letters To The Editor

Information about educational and cultural events at other institutions in other cities is often difficult to find. Transportation to such activities is rarely given freely, in both senses of that word. Encouragement to seek out these kinds of activities should be a principal obligation of a small liberal arts college, which should recognize its definite limitations in these areas.

Often financial obligations bind the student to the school even if he finds the college does not meet his educational needs. If he decides to leave, the student often has scholarship grants and loans to repay immediately, and he cannot afford, financially, to quit or transfer.

If a student remains, he rarely finds enthusiasm within the faculty or administration in such vital problem areas as finding a graduate school which meets his particular needs or a summer job which might relate to his seems unaware of many possibilities and procedures involved.

These are just a few of the more glaring examples resulting from Juniata's attitude towards education, an attitude which, in practice, is ingrained, self-perpetuating, and blindly self-righteous.

We believe that Juniata could be a better liberal arts college. It could even be a good liberal arts college. But to begin, Juniata desperately needs an administration, faculty, and student body who will be self-sufficient enough in mind to denounce such intellectually embarrassing statements as that quoted from the catalogue.

Let Juniata concentrate on teaching students, not how to succeed, but to think as independent adults.

Janet Kauffman

A Case of Space

To the Editor:

The editorial in the last issue of the Juniatian concerning the faculty for holding a "closed" reception for the cast of "An Evening's Frost" is well taken from this writer's position. However, my point in writing this letter is not to react to that criticism, for I believe the criticism was just, but to explain briefly why student facilities are used from time to time for faculty functions.

We, the faculty, like everything else at Juniata, have grown considerably larger in the last few years. Because of this growth we have found the faculty club to be too small for some of our functions. Thrice this year we have felt it necessary to hold our events in various lounges, recreation rooms, or in the women's gym (and thanks to the students for letting us have the gym on February 4 by shifting your own dance to Tussey). As President of the Faculty Club, I can guarantee you that we seek not to intrude any more than absolutely necessary. However, I do feel that since some of our functions require larger facilities than are now available at the faculty club the faculty has the same right as any other organization on campus to reserve and use certain facilities.

Let's hope that a new student union will help solve any situation that may be developing here. Until that time I am sure that we can work out some type of acceptable arrangement by which the faculty does not intrude any more than necessary. Until then please be patient with us and our mistakes as we would be with you and yours.

Dr. Howard Crouch

Detection of Desire

To the Editor:

The Focus Committee wishes to thank the Juniatian for the editorial concerning the reception given by a few members of the faculty for the cast of "An Evening's Frost."

We want to promote the idea of students' coming in contact with the people involved in the various events. The talk-back sessions after lectures are designed to do this and indeed we specify in the contract with the visiting lecturers that we want this opportunity to talk back.

As far as performing artists are concerned, at least with the larger groups, we have not until now detected a strong desire among the students to meet the performers. There were few, if any, students who remained after the show to express appreciation for their work.

To turn then from a simple expression of appreciation into a structured learning experience would, of course, require a modification of the contract. To invite an indeterminate number of people simply to help feed hungry performers creates a huge problem in logistics. We settled for something we could handle.

We welcome further suggestions on how we may improve the FOCUS program.

Book Prices Abuse Students

(ACP)—Why are textbooks so expensive, asks Western Michigan University's Western Herald? Is it the fault of the university-owned "non-profit" bookstore whose prices are as high as those of the profit-making bookstores? Is the publishing industry to blame?

Both contribute to the situation, the Western Herald concluded, but the greater culprit, without a doubt, is the publishing industry. Time magazine recently revealed that the book industry relies on textbooks and children's books to support gambling losses on adult grade books. All the major publishers, Time said, "print text and reference books, as well as children's books, which are dependable money-makers. Their profitable textbook and paperback operations enable them to gamble on adult trade books—which as a rule lose money." One publisher estimated that "60% of adult trade books end up in the red, another 36% break even, and only 4% turn a decent profit."

Should students be forced to bear the brunt of the industry's losses and non-profits? Publishers are fully aware that they have the students over a barrel since students must buy particular required textbooks.

There are two possible solutions to the dilemma. On a local level, student government could promote some type of competitive selling of new texts. We can buy everything from groceries to automobiles on a discounted basis; this opportunity should also be provided for students in the purchase of required books.

On a wider level, the National Student Association could make the public and the publishing industry aware of the abuse students face in textbook prices. If housewives can demand fairer prices for food, a nationally supported student effort to acquire more realistic prices is also feasible. It is no doubt true that profits from texts help to support great publications that otherwise never would be printed, but a 96 per cent support is entirely unrealistic.

age students under 21 from drinking, whether on or off campus," emphasized Dean Schoenherr. "We tell students that it is illegal and that it is wrong to break the law."

Ideally, then, the College does concern itself with student use of alcoholic beverages off campus. There is particular concern when students drink off campus and then indicate it obtrusively upon their return to the campus. Continues The Pathfinder, "Any student who, by his conduct, calls attention to the fact that he has been drinking, will be subject to disciplinary action." Dr. Schoenherr noted, for example, that a student is in jeopardy "when he is obviously 'loaded' at a campus function, as suggested by his overt actions," or when he is intoxicated to such a degree that he causes a rumpus in the dorm.

Does the College concern itself with those students who, after drinking off campus, are able to contain themselves on campus but yet involuntarily disclose their contact with alcoholic beverage, by way of telltale odors, for instance? In such cases, Dean Schoenherr acknowledged, "when we know the law is broken, at this point we do nothing. . . . A complex problem exists," he explained, "when there are people in our own subcommunity (the College) violating the laws of a larger community (the State); to what extent do we as citizens in a college community have a responsibility or an obligation with respect to the laws of the larger community of the State?"

To clarify the nature of the quandary, Dr. Schoenherr cited an analogous situation: "In the course of our everyday lives, we are able to contain ourselves on campus but yet involuntarily disclose their contact with alcoholic beverage, by way of telltale odors, for instance? A little bit closer to home would be a case of theft on campus: the preferred action of the administration would be to have the student perpetrator report himself to the local legal authorities; if he should refuse to do so, then the administration would have to report him. But," Dean Schoenherr realized, "it is tougher for us to take such action with respect to drinking. . . . We don't want to become a liquor control board."

When asked what effect a change in the State law (in order to permit the sale of alcoholic beverages to those over 18) might have, Dr. Schoenherr replied that "in thinking of the total educational goal and of the dormitory as an educational arm of the College, I would still oppose drinking in the dorms." He also noted that any developments would still have to be reconciled with the College's general conduct standards, which prescribe disorderly conduct or "any behavior which reflects discredit upon the College."

In light of the facts that alcohol affects the nervous system, can be habit-forming and can end independence, Dean Schoenherr noticed that alcohol may often be more harmful than some narcotics (such as marijuana) which in our society have taboos and rigid regulations placed upon them. He emphasized, though, that "I am not suggesting that we go back to prohibition."

Summer Employment Directory Available

Information on 45,000 summer job openings throughout the United States and Canada for 1967 has just been received by Dean of Women Frances Helms and Director of Placement, Robert A. Doyle, in a book titled "Summer Employment Directory."

Listed are names and addresses of employers, specific jobs they have available, salary and helps in making application. High school seniors, college students and teachers are invited to make application.

The outlook for 1967 summer jobs throughout the country is bright! Early application is strongly suggested, however.

There continues to be a heavy demand for camp counselors ages 19, 20 and older. Camp salaries are up; minimum salaries have increased $50-100 while maximum salaries have pushed ahead $200 to $400.

Openings are for waitresses, clerks, bus boys, maids, cooks, kitchen helpers, lifeguards, musicians, and maintenance workers at resorts and national parks.

Actresses, actors, technicians and other personnel are needed at summer theatres. Office help and workers of many types are wanted by ranches, restaurants, business, industry and government.

Information on summer jobs openings is obtained annually from extensive research conducted among many thousands of potential summer employers. The research findings are compiled before December for publication in each new edition of "Summer Employment Directory."

The 1967 "Summer Employment Directory" may be purchased through any bookstore or ordered by mail by sending $4 to the publisher, National Directory Service, Box 32065, Cincinnati, Ohio 45232.

At last night's Senate meeting, Maxine Phillips, chairman of the SCOPE sub-committee on women's hours presented the statement of rationale for the changes in hours which was requested by the deans at last week's Senate meeting.

Dean Helms, reporting on the recent meeting of the administrative staff, indicated that the administration wanted more time in which to evaluate the proposal. She said that the SCOPE recommendation may ultimately be incorporated into a larger system of changes which have yet to be established.

Concern was voiced as to whether the parties concerned were participating in the discussions in good faith. SCOPE members stated that several unofficial opinions had been voiced in favor of the proposals but that the students were waiting for a more official statement on the matter.

Mr. Holmes speaking as a representative of the administrative staff said, "You have everything but the final stamp."

In regard to the impatience shown on the part of students, it was suggested that they do not realize the seriousness and implications of the changes they are requesting. Dean Helms said that within two weeks some definite notice of progress on the proposals will be issued.

Steve Herr, Chairman of Education, said that a questionnaire will soon be sent to the students to determine their feelings concerning a five-day class schedule (no Saturday classes) and the implications involved.

Senate President Jim Donaldson raised the question of the origin of the Senate charter. This question in turn hinges on the question at what point is the Senate related to the institution as a whole. The question of the source of the Senate charter will be a point of discussion for the incoming Student Government members.

Kamin, an El. Ed. major; Judy Koval, a biology major; Danya Miller, a biology major; Pat Miller, a sociology major; Bette Salmon, undeclared; Candy Wamsley, a history major, and Barbara Woy, undeclared, are the freshmen to be named to the second list.

Grapplers Face Stiff Test At MAC's With Confidence

by John Wilcox

Wilkes, Temple, West Chester and Lycoming: these are among the teams Juniata is meeting this weekend on the mats at Moravian College in Bethlehem.

In spite of the fact that some of the 23 colleges competing in the MAC wrestling championships are national powerhouses, coach Bill Berrier expresses confidence that his Juniata team will provide a good showing, certainly better than last year's final placing.

The top wrestlers in each weight class will be seeded. Coach Berrier expects Juniata to have at least 3 seeds; Jack Hooper (7-3-1) at 123, Chris Sherk (8-2-1) at 145, and Pete Schuyler (7-2) at heavy weight. Don Hoover (5-3-1) at 160 is also a possible seed. The remainder of the team includes Dick Feigles (5-5-1) at 167, and Ron Hoover (3-5) at 152, Phil Eatough (2-2) at 177, and Mike McCartney (4-6) at 180. Juniata will have no participant at 137.

There are six champions returning to defend their crowns, five runners-up attempt to better their finish, and four more who finished third. The only weight class without a high finisher returning from last year is at 123, and it is here that Juniata has its best chance of bringing home a winner in Jack Hooper. At 145 Sherk will be up against some tough competition in Mike Dohover from West Chester, and Elliot from E-town. Sherk lost a heartbreaker to Elliot on the E-town mats and could reverse that decision at Moravian. Schuyler has the undeniable honor of wrestling in the class with Al Arnold of Wilkes, a 6'5", 240 lb. giant, and the heavyweight from Temple. Piller, also a big man at 6'4", 260 lbs. Piper from Muhlenburg will also be returning to defend his runner-up position. Schuyler will probably be seeded either third or fourth, Sherk likewise, and Hooper possibly in the first three seeds.

In the 130 lb. class is the champion and runner-up from last year from Temple and Wilkes respectively. At 137 Lebanon Valley's Willman is figured to win, even though last year's champ from Lycoming will defend his title. At 152 a West Chester grappler and Briner of E-town are the best bets. Don Hoover could do well at 160 as Tillman from West Chester is the only returning wrestler who placed last year. Dick Feigles finds himself in a strong class at 167 with last year's first two place winners returning to defend. Mucka (Moravian) offers an imposing challenge at 177, but Eatough might offer a surprise. He should finish high in the final standings regardless. Temple, which lost only to Penn State, West Chester, and Wilkes are favorites in the tournament, with Lycoming expected to finish strong. From there down, it's anyone's fight. Look for Juniata near the top of the second rank.

Wrestlers Lose To IUP, 24-11

JC's grapplers finished their regular season dual-meet competition with a 24-11 loss to Indiana University of Pennsylvania. The Tribe finished the season 6-5 while IUP wound up 6-7. The first six Indian wrestlers were as cold as the snow storm outside as mistakes and sloppy wrestling seemed to have infected the whole Tribe team. Co-captain Dick Feigles ended the state school's onslaught by dominating his match with IUP's Bob Burkett. Then Phil Eatough needed only 53 seconds to put away Indiana's Jim Barrett. Juniata's heavyweight, Pete Schuyler, was never in trouble as he defeated Ray Tomb of Indiana. The Summary:

- 123 Dave Lea (I) decisioned Jack Hooper (I), 10-5
- 130 Dave Kling (I) pinned Mike McCartney (I) with 23 seconds left in third period.
- 137 Dennis Murawski (I) pinned Larry Ribbles (I) with 41 seconds left in 2nd period.
- 145 Ed Eckberg (I) decisioned Chris Sherk (I), 6-3.
- 152 Todd Stevenson (I) decisioned Ron Hoover (I), 6-3.
- 160 Rick Camden (I) pinned Don Hoover with 1:07 left in 3rd period.
- 167 Dick Feigles (I) decisioned Bob Burkett (I), 4-0.
- 177 Phil Eatough (I) pinned Jim Barrett (I) with 1:07 left in 1st period.
- UNL Pete Schuyler (I) decisioned Ray Tomb (I), 3-0.

Indians Finish Season On Winning Note

The Tribe b-ballers played their last away game last Saturday and lost. Remembering its loss to Juniata in double overtime several weeks ago, Indiana University of Pennsylvania waited for the JC team to invade its reservation and made quite a ceremony of it. When the battle was over the Big Indians scalped the JC Indians 105-81.

This defeat, the worst for Juniata all year, extends to eight the string losing cage seasons for Juniata teams. The loss also made JC's log at away games this year 1-8.

Dale Broadwater continued his sparkling play and for the third consecutive game led the Indians in scoring with 17 points. He grabbed seven rebounds, blocked three shots and recovered two more. Clair Kenyon also scored in double figures with 13 against Indiana. Co-captains Jim Doyle and John Tussey each had nine.

Indiana's Gary Lupek, 6'6", hampered by Juniata's defense in the earlier meeting between the two schools, broke loose for 31 points hitting 100% from the field.

The Indians closed out their home campaign on a more successful note as they walloped Lock Haven 87 to 38 and avenged an earlier loss to the Eagles. The score is a true indication of the game's one-sidedness as the Tribe jumped to an early lead and employed a tight defense to extend that lead for the remainder of the game. JC's domination of the game was completed by complete control of the backboard all evening. Five men scored in double figures as Coach Russ Trimmer cleared the bench midway through the second half. Clair Kenyon and John Tussey had 14 points to lead the Indian scorers, but they received much support from Bruce Bader (13), Will Brandau (12), and Jim Doyle (11).

Special tribute goes to Jim Doyle, who played his last game as a Juniata athlete. His desire and hustle were indicative of the team he co-captained through his first season of pressure basketball and its best season of basketball in seven years with an 8 and 9 record.

The junior varsity, not to be outdone by its counterparts, easily defeated Lock Haven and in so doing closed out its season with a 9 and 3 card.

Congratulations to both teams and coaches for a job well done and an exciting season of basketball. But wait till next year, for the best has yet to come.

Dale Broadwater named "Warrior of the Week" and to ECAC first team for his play last week, goes up for a sure two against E-town.

Warrior Of The Week

Broadwater Named By Coaches

"A top competitor who goes after his opponents" is the way Coach Russ Trimmer describes his "Warrior of the Week" winner, Dale Broadwater.

Not having been satisfied to sit on the bench when the starting five took to the court early in the season, the Hummelstown junior worked hard against some tough teammate competition until he earned the starting berth he now has held in the past several weeks. If there was a selection of a "come around player," it would have to be Broadwater. When he came on strong, he continued this pace and, with a good offensive fight against Lock Haven this week he could jump into third place in scoring on the team.

Broadwater was named to the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference team for his play last week. He is the second JC player to be named this year. Clair Kenyon also has received this honor.

Broadwater possesses the highest shooting averages (on the foul line and from the field) on the team. In 16 games he has a .462 field goal average (56 for 121) and a .824 foul-line average (37 for 45) to give him 149 points. The 6' junior's 82 rebounds are second to Will Brandau's 150.

Broadwater has scored in double figures in six of the last seven games, his high being 23 against Bloomsburg this past week.

This is the second selection for Broadwater as "Warrior of the Week." He shared the honor two weeks ago with co-captain John Tussey following games against Wilkes and Albright.

Transferring from Hershey Junior College last year, Broadwater played first string on Pat Frazier's jayvees last season. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Broadwater, R.D. 3, Hummelstown, Broadwater was graduated from Lower Dauphin High School.

JC 'Move-Up Day' 1967 Promises Different Spirit And Procedure

Mention "Move-Up Day" on Juniata's apathy-ridden campus, and what is the first impression of anyone within gossiping distance? "Oh, another one of those traditional-type ceremonies which takes up our morning break, provides an otherwise painless convo credit, and theoretically advances us one class higher to boot."

True, Move-Up Days in the past have been traditional convocations during which the new Senate, club, and class officers have replaced the old, and each class has advanced its social standing. But Move-Up Day 1967 promises to be a bit different, in spirit as well as in procedure. The ceremonies, to be held next Wednesday in the regular convocation place and time slot, will afford convo credit, but the chief concern will be the replacement of the outmoded Student Senate with the newly-organized, newly constituted Student Government.

It is the need for a "fresh start," said outgoing Senate president James Donaldson, which is causing some breakage with Move-Up Day tradition. There is question, for instance, as to whether or not the traditional recessional procedures will be retained. Past Move-Up Days have seen the student body seated in Oller Hall according to classes; freshmen and sophomores were located downstairs, with juniors and seniors sharing the balcony. At the conclusion of the program the classes were dismissed by rank; the freshmen, being the last ones out, were obliged to pass through a corridor formed by the upperclassmen from Oller to the library. The singing of the Alma Mater provided the finishing touch. In light of the student government reorganization, such procedures are now old tradition, Donaldson pointed out, and it is hoped that they will be discarded.

There will also be obvious changes in the ceremonial portion of Move-Up Day 1967, resulting more from the structural reorganization of the Senate than from the purging of tradition. In the past the outgoing Senate was seated on the Oller stage, while the incoming officers sat in the front row seats below. The Dean of the College, during the course of the proceedings, announced the old and new senators one office at a time, and they thereupon changed seating positions. Because of the reorganization, the incoming Student Government members are not matched up office for office with the outgoing Senators, and a change in procedure has thus been necessitated.

Come Wednesday morning, the old Senate will once again be seated on the stage, with the new officers located down in the forward seats of the auditorium. Dr. Charles W. Schoenherr, dean of student affairs, will begin by speaking on behalf of the administration. Outgoing president Donaldson will then address the convocation, following which will be his introduction of the present Senate officers. Donaldson will subsequently introduce incoming president James W. Hamilton, entrusting him with the official Senate notebook, after which Hamilton will introduce the new Student Government members. The two groups will respond by exchanging seating positions en masse. Hamilton will then deliver a speech.

Donaldson was quick to note the symbolism inherent in the new procedure for exchange of positions: the old Senate will be walking out while the new Student Government will be making its entrance.

Last night the outgoing Senate officers conducted their last meeting, which, as a joint session with the incoming members, was aimed at acquainting the newcomers with general procedures. Things will be reversed at next Thursday's meeting as the new Student Government goes into action, with the old Senate sitting in to provide some sort of smooth transition. Since the new Legislature, presently inclusive of 12 members, must wait until next semester to receive its full complement of 16 (four more from the incoming freshman class), it has been proposed that four

Saturday, March 18 Rivalry Ripens All-Class Night

Rivalry between classes will reach its climax on Saturday night, March 18. All Class Night's central theme is Music. Each class with a budget of $25.00 will produce its own original 22-minute skit.

Needless to say, judging rules are quite important to the students in preparing their skits.

The first category of judging involves the script. Three subdivisions are originality, continuity, and class participation. The central idea must be cleverly initiated to permit adequate class participation.

The second category centers around performance with good direction, acting quality, and audience appeal as the subdivisions. Good staging techniques, timing of the sequence of events, and remaining within the time limit constitute good direction. The direction plus the acting, which involves a true portrayal of the character and projection and enunciation of voice, all produce a good audience appeal.

Costumes and make-up, set production, and lighting are the factors considered in the third division—staging. Originality is the important requirement for effective staging.

All scripts were submitted for approval on February 25. The script reading committee consisted of the Dean of Women, the Dean of Men, Mr. Holmes, Rick Allen, chairman of All Class Night, and Carole Peters, co-chairman.

Rehearsals will begin in Oller Hall Sunday with each class permitted an hour each evening.

On the big night the order of appearance of each class as determined by lot is: 1. Sophomores; 2. Freshmen; 3. Juniors; 4. Seniors.

The rivalry will be keen this year as the Class of '68 is determined to win to add to its advantage of retiring the gold cup, the aspiration of each class that has entered Juniata. The Class of '65 had the coveted honor of retiring the cup in 1965 after producing a winning skit for three successive years.

'Four Characters Penetrate Very Roots'

"Glass Menagerie," a memory play which is partly autobiographical in character and written by Tennessee Williams, is the current production being presented by JC students under the direction of Prof. Clayton Briggs. The play concerns the pathetic efforts of Amanda, a former Southern belle, to marry her crippled daughter to a young gentleman visiting the dingy St. Louis apartment.

The production of the "Glass Menagerie" features only four characters: the mother Amanda played by Judy Hershey, the daughter Laura played by Barb Rowe, the brother Tom played by Bob Frysinger, and the visitor and Tom's friend played by Gary Lindenmuth. The stage manager for the play is Barb Hay.

There "are only four characters," Prof. Briggs comments, "but they penetrate the very roots of life's anxieties, excitements, and pathos."

Prof. Briggs points out that this Williams play is in the same vein of imaginative and provocative playwriting as "Teahouse of the August Moon" which was presented as the fall term play.

Students may attend the production in Oller Hall this evening or tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. by presenting their identification cards and obtaining a reserved seat. General admission for visitors to the campus is $1.10.

Juniata Summer Session Boasts Promise And Vigor Under Kaylor

The Juniata Summer Sessions under its new Director, Dr. Earl C. Kaylor, Jr., shows more vigor and promise than at any time during its first 46 years.

Registration week for the summer sessions is April 17 to 21 and the cost this summer has been reduced to $30 a credit hour, per term. Considerable savings are possible, Dr. Kaylor pointed out, by taking courses during the summer.

All classes will be held in the completely air-conditioned Brumbaugh Science Complex. Summer classes are available in the three academic divisions. A catalog has been mailed to all the colleges, and high schools in a seven state area with a special mailing aimed at the parents of currently enrolled Juniata students.

Dr. Kaylor announced a number of new courses offered since the printing of the catalog. These include "The English Language" and "The Victorian Age" by Professor William L. Hofelt, Jr.; an exciting new course in archeology to be given by Professor Paul M. Heberling; "Introduction to Calculus" and "Introduction to Probability" by Professor Douglas Frank in the first session and "Calculus of One Variable" and "Algebra and Trigonometry" in the second session.

Spring Reading Festival

Tryouts for the 19th Intercollegiate Reading Festival to be held at Penn State on April 28 and 29 will be held in South Hall Rec Room at 4:45 (after the reading hour) on Thursday, March 16. Those interested in trying out should be prepared to read a selection of prose, poetry or drama NOT EXCEEDING 5 minutes in length. (Group readings are most welcome and may be proportionately longer.) Any-one interested in participating in the festival who cannot try out at that time should see Dr. Doyle.

Alpha Phi Gamma Journalists' Fraternity, Honors JC Students

To honor and recognize individual students' participation in campus journalism and help maintain and improve the quality of these ventures, a national journalism fraternity, Alpha Phi Gamma, has been established on campus. The local chapter, organized to fulfill the national functions here will be known as Delta Epsilon.

Application for a chapter of Alpha Phi Gamma at Juniata was made early in the fall semester, with approval of the national executive committee being received recently. Charter members listed on the original application include five junior students here: Jane Beeghly and Pat Reber presently studying abroad, Mark Faulkner, Jim Hamilton and Rick Kensinger. All members are or have been on the Juniata Staff. Adviser to the fraternity is Miss Lillian M. Junas, also an Alpha Phi Gamma member.

To be eligible for membership in the fraternity, one must be a bona fide student at Juniata with above Freshman rank; have a scholastic average in the upper two thirds of the college; and have served one semester as editor-in-chief, business manager, associate editor or department editor of the college newspaper or other campus publication; or served a minimum of two semesters in a lesser position. Students fulfilling these qualifications are elected to membership by invitation of the current members.

Move Up-And On-We Hope

It's that time of year for fresh changes — spring soon will be officially the weather word, and the Senate will become officially the Juniata Student Government.

We hope that Move-Up Day next Wednesday is more than just a symbol of change, of a formal, but insignificant turnover in student government personnel. Are they just the same old things with different titles and names? We hope not.

Elections this year seemed to be at least a little more than what the editor of the Penn State Daily Collegian has called The Annual Yawn. At least we yawned twice. The Student Government is bigger than ever as far as student involvement is concerned. This is a positive trend that we hope will mean something, that students are interested in their welfare.

Spring comes once a year, symbolically, with Hope at its heels. So do Senate changes. This Move-Up Day is surrounded by an aura of hope because of its newness.

Yet, were it not for a certain amount of pessimism on our part, we wouldn't have to hope. The implicit potential in all the new innovations of student government may be realized. We hope that it will be.

But Spring comes around pretty much the same every year and has become a symbol. It doesn't make much difference which Spring it is, it only means the same thing. Move-Up Day should be more than a symbol. We'd like to call it "Move Upward and Onward" instead.

So we're idealists. Idealists think - hope - they are right, but are afraid they are wrong. This new Student Government can do some really revolutionary things to investigate and procure what is in the best interest of the student body. We hope they will and will be anxiously watching to see the results. But we're just a little bit afraid that the results won't be what they could be.

We yawned, twice. — We hope the Senate will stay awake. We hope.

JC Movie . . .

Communist Directs Mathew's Gospel

To those who are used to Biblical extravaganzas such as The Ten Commandments or The Great Story Ever Told, this week's JC Movie will come as something of a surprise.

The Gospel According to St. Matthew, directed by Italian novelist, poet, and communist Pier Paolo Pasolini has been called the "finest religious film ever made." Using only amateur actors and shooting in the stark hills of southern Italy, Pasolini has captured the harsh poverty and bitterness of Christ's homeland and compatriots. The portrait of Jesus which emerges is a far cry from the sweet, gentle liberal of Sunday school texts. He is a radical social reformer obsessed with the fulfillment of his mission before his time runs out.

The almost Marxist interpretation of Christ as a reformer reveals an often overlooked aspect of the Messiah in films. The text follows almost word for word the Gospel of St. Matthew although purists may detect a few textual inaccuracies.

Because this is still a first-run film it will be playing both Monday and Tuesday evenings. Juniata College students will be admitted for 50 cents with their I.D. cards.

The Faculty Council is undertaking a study of the question of changing to a five day week class schedule. They would like to know student opinion concerning questions which are involved.

If this change should take place it would probably be necessary to hold all athletic events and social activities on the weekends.

Please answer the following questions and return the questionnaire to Stephen R. Herr, Box 227 within three days.

I. Would you be in favor of changing to a five day class schedule?
II. If you answered "yes" above please pick one of the following: A. I would be interested in changing to a five day week: (1) in a semester program, (2) in a three term program. (The three terms would run from Sept. to Christmas, January to mid-March, and mid-March to June.) (3) in some other term program. (please specify). III. Do you feel a five day week would encourage a mass exodus from the campus on weekends?

CIA Subsidizes NSA Abroad

Hilsman Concentrates On Viet Nam War

by Mark Faulkner

After listening to an intelligent, sophisticated discourse on foreign policy by Roger Hilsman Thursday night, the only disappointment might be that he has not remained in the government. A brief comparison between the policy of the Johnson administration and Mr. Hilsman's views, however, leaves little doubt as to why he left. The topic of concern among the listeners was, quite naturally, the problems and proposed solutions of the Viet Nam war, and Mr. Hilsman dealt with this subject extensively. This, unfortunately, might have been at the expense of the two primary areas of the main speech, both of which need to be reemphasized: the new nationalism and the People's Republic of China.

I think it is safe to propose that in the long run the crucial issue of international affairs will be this emerging new nationalism. The confrontation between the United States and the USSR still exists, overshadowing much of the political controversy among small nations; yet even this has been subtly transformed into part of the range of problems arising from the rapid increase in nation states. Our policies are directed more and more toward these countries to "protect them from communism" or prevent communist influence, etc.

Mr. Hilsman analyzed the importance of this new nationalism and clearly outlined some basic precepts we should keep in mind when making policy decisions. First, they want to modernize badly enough to dispense with ideology; we may or may not help them, but they will modernize. Secondly, we must recognize, whether we like it or not, that their anti-colonialism is a legitimate fear of western domination. Third, for all their rhetoric, they are not communist. Mr. Hilsman elaborated very little on this point, nothing merely that the economic systems will be neither capitalist nor communist in final form.

There is more, perhaps, that can be said here. These developing nations cannot possibly be communists in the orthodox sense, since Marx's theory required an economically advanced country for proletarian revolution. The appeal stems, then, not from Marx but from the Russian experience, that has illustrated the success of socialism in achieving economic development. In this respect they have been disillusioned on two counts. One, they either do not comprehend or refuse to execute the drastic measures that Stalin realized were necessary for unassisted economic growth. Two, international communism, dominated as it is by the Soviet Union, means that a nation declaring itself communist must immediately sacrifice some of its hard-won sovereignty. Now, of course, China also has come into its own as a usurper of nationalism through communism, as evidenced by Albania and the failure in Indonesia. The current trend indicates that nationalism is beginning to transcend communism even in the developed countries of Eastern Europe. Indonesia shows this to be just as true in the developing states.

300 campuses, first became known Feb. 13 through advance information from an article in the March issue of Ramparts magazine.

The money—estimated at $200,000 a year some years ago, gradually decreasing to $50,000 last year—was reportedly channeled to the association through about 20 foundations and individuals who served as cover agents. It was used, according to NSA President Eugene Grove, to send students to congresses abroad and finance exchange programs and other international activities.

Sam Brown, chairman of the NSA supervisory board, later said that several NSA officers had turned over to the CIA "sensitive information" on persons and activities in student organizations abroad. These individuals, Brown said, were threatened with imprisonment if they revealed the NSA-CIA connection. Few NSA leaders, however, were said to know about the relationship.

The reason for establishing the connection in the early 1950's, Grove said, was NSA's inability to get money from private groups. James Reston, New York Times columnist, said the financial crisis first arose when American students broke away from the Communist-dominated International Union of Students (IUS) in 1948 after the Communist take-over of Yugoslavia.

To briefly summarize Mr. Hilsman's statements on China: The People's Republic has been rational, realistic and prudent; it will remain communist in spite of Chiang Kai-shek; and the party bureaucrats will eventually be victorious over the permanent revolution of Mao Tse-tung. United States policy must be re-evaluated in light of these factors, especially concerning diplomatic recognition and admittance to the United Nations.

The Viet Nam issues, worked to death everywhere by now, will be omitted here. It might be interesting to note, however, that the solution in the talk-back session with Mr. Hilsman was remarkably similar to the one proposed by Robert Kennedy in his Senate speech recently. Knowing his background with the Kennedy's, would it be purely speculative to suggest that Hilsman already has found a spot in the next Kennedy administration?

'Round Campus

Men's IM basketball games are a thing of the past now with the choice of the championship team of each league. However, a special congratulations is extended to the heroes of B league, the Blue Bombers. Many hardships and traumatic episodes went into making their final victory—right, guys?

Well, the choir has returned from another tour—not as long this time, but nonetheless exciting. Those kids never run out of new and interesting things to do. One interesting characteristic of all the tours, though, is the places where the members are assigned to stay. Some refined city girls even had the privilege (?) of learning how to milk a cow at 5:30 a.m.

Just a reminder to all students that the memory play "Glass Menagerie" by Tennessee Williams is still being presented tonight and tomorrow night at 8:15 in Oller Hall. There is still ample opportunity to obtain tickets at the box office from 7:30-8:15 both nights.

With the recent abundance of snow have come numerous snowball battles and assorted snow sculpture all over campus. The joke was no many hale and hearty cloister men when two frail girls and four guys succeeded in battling them all into retreat in an exciting snow contest. O course it took a good fifteen minutes of ferocious fighting to the tune of "Stars and Stripes Forever" to bring about the victory. What's your excuse, fellow?

Humor in the form of satire was the main idea behind all the skits in the annual Women's Skit Night held Sunday in South rec room. Plots centered around anything from Super Duck, a knight in shining armor,

The Americans formed their own organization, the NSA. "From the first, however," Reston wrote, "the American students were hampered by lack of funds, while the IUS had enough money to put on world youth festivals, world rallies, conferences, forums, and regional conferences."

Former CIA head Allen Dulles acknowledged that the relationship was beneficial to the CIA. U.S. student representation at international congresses, made possible through CIA funds, provided a buffer against Communist student domination of such meetings, he said.

and Alice in Wonderland to just plain "cuts" about the infirmary and fire regulations. Walking off with top honors and the $5 prize was the freshman hall from Tom Brunbaugh with their extremely clever adaptation of Alice in Wonderland. The judges were the wives of several faculty members. Everyone involved really did a fine job.

Beginning Wednesday will be the first attempt in a long time at Women's IM volleyball here at Juniata. A minimum of six players to a maximum of eight players may be on the floor for any one team during competition. Rosters may still be turned in to Judy Walk or Judy Saylor in 325 Leshner or to Miss Kopac up until Sunday. For all those girls complaining there's nothing to do, here's your big chance.

Tomorrow and Sunday eight members of the Dep Club will be visiting Greensburg to meet with the Subdistrict of the Brethren Church there. Saturday's program will consist of an informal get-together in the evening to get the Brethren youth acquainted with Juniata. Then Sunday the usual task of the Dep Club of conducting the worship service will be performed.

A word of warning to any group a fire outside Leshner dorm in the of guys who happens to be changing early hours of the morning: Little windows sure do have big cars!

Speaking of Leshner, one floor in that residence hall has refused to sit back quietly and accept the titles of "prudes," "frigid ones," "knitters," and "bookworms" with which most of the campus has dubbed them since the results of a certain study were revealed. Only third Leshner could be ingenious enough to carry off the Synchronized Skit Night with such a "bang" as they did Monday evening. But the "bomb" really fell when the girls each received two reps for their little escapade.

They said it couldn't be done; well the Women's Basketball Team did it. They had the first winning season in many a year here at Juniata. The girls closed their season with a rousing 50-23 victory over Susquehanna at Selingsgrove last Friday to give them a five win—four loss record. For once the girls did something better than the boys in the way of sports! This is indeed a year to remember. JRE

JC 'Move-Up Day' Promises

members of the Class of '67 are invited to sit in on sessions this spring; if such is to be the case, the four quasi-legislators, having no voting power, will merely advise and provide for some degree of continuity.

Donaldson predicted that it will take the new Student Government a while to become oriented. He knows that Hamilton and Co. will face such concerns as the hiring of a treasurer and assistant treasurer, the making of decisions concerning SCOPE and the Judiciary, and the re-assignment of proctoring bureau, coffee house, and JC Movie Night responsibilities.

"No one has any more experience than the next guy," said Donaldson, referring to the interpretation of the new constitution and its new provisions. As one of the three writers of the constitution, Donaldson has his own interpretations and his own ideas, but he realized that he must remain aloof to some extent. "I want to help the new Student Government, but I'm afraid that, if I become too involved, they might seek my answers to questions when, in fact, they should be finding their own."

When he takes leave of his office next Wednesday, Donaldson thinks that he will "miss it quite a bit." For him Move-Up Day 1967 will signify the conclusion of two years of service in the JC Senate (he was chairman of athletics in his junior year). "It's been really rewarding," he reminisced, "but it's been enough: two years is plenty." He concluded, "But I'd never trade the experience."

Junas Speaks At CSPS

Lillian M. Junas of the Public Information Department and adviser to the Juniata will speak at the annual convention of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association today at Columbia University. Her topic will be "Candid Shooting Makes Pictures Move."

With Miss Junas at Columbia are Sandie Baer, editor-in-chief of The Juniata and Prue Engle, Juniata Senate Reporter.

Last spring Miss Junas discussed yearbook pictures at the same convention. She also has spoken at annual conventions of the Pennsylvania Scholastic Press Association.

About 1200 students and advisers from throughout the country are expected to attend the sessions on the Columbia campus.

Red Cross On Talent Search

"The American Red Cross is on a talent search," Mr. Donald Broadbent, Chairman of the Huntingdon Chapter said today.

Some 45 top college students from universities throughout the United States will be chosen to participate in a summer program titled "Friendship Mexico," Mr. Broadbent said. During a month and a half this summer, they will live and work in communities in Mexico, teaching health and safety. This is an extension of "Project Mexico," held last year with great success.

College students who qualify and are interested in the project are urged to contact Huntingdon Red Cross Chapter, or call 643-2610, Mr. Broadbent said.

strong student publications and usually those not having departments or schools of journalism. The fraternity's purpose is carried out by electing to membership students who have worked significantly on campus publications, including the radio station. More than 7,300 names are on the national roll in 52 active chapters throughout the country.

Formed in 1919, Alpha Phi Gamma—in addition to its main goal in recognizing individual student achievement—"helps to serve and promote the welfare of the college through journalism; to establish cordial relationships between the students and members of the profession; and to unite in a fraternal way congenial students interested in journalism."

An initiation dinner will be held March 14 at the home of Miss Junas. Later in the spring, new members will be invited.

Hazel And Preston Deliver Geology And Math Lectures

Dr. Joseph E. Hazel and Dr. Preston C. Hammer will be guests of the geology and math departments respectively this week for science lectures.

Dr. Hazel received his Ph.D. from Louisiana State University in Paleontology and did post graduate work at Harvard before taking a position in cooperation with the U.S. National Museum (Smithsonian) and the U.S. Geological Survey. He is also presently employed as a parttime professor in geology at George Washington University.

For his doctoral work, Dr. Hazel studied marine biology and oceanography in the North Atlantic. His special work was with Ostracodes a shrimp-like crustacean. He will use this research as an example in tracing the trends of evolution of Paleogeography and Paleocology.

A tentative schedule has been arranged for Dr. Hazel. In A100, Monday at 11:30, he will address the Historical Geology class on the Biogeography of Ostracodes in the Western North Atlantic. That evening, Dr. Hazel will speak at 8:15 on a Study in Evolution, illustrated by his work with Ostracodes. Tuesday at 10:30 Paleocology and Biogeography will be Dr. Hazel's topic when he addresses the Paleontology class in P118. At 4:15 in P118, he will present an informal discussion on Oceanography illustrated with slides of his research.

Under the auspices of the American Geological Institute, Dr. Hazel will be available to talk with students interested in graduate work or a career in Paleontology, Oceanography and Marine Biology.

Dr. Preston C. Hammer received his M.A. from the University of Michigan and his Ph.D. from Ohio State University. Presently he is a professor of math and the head of the Computer Science Department at Pennsylvania State University.

Dr. Hammer has served as manager of statistical quality control at Lockheed Aircraft Corporation and as the leader of computing and mathematics groups at Los Alamos. He has taught at Ohio State University, the University of Michigan, Oregon State College and the University of Southern California. Dr. Hammer has also delivered addresses at a number of leading European Universities and has lectured before many technical and non-technical groups in this country. From 1952 until 1965 he was the Director of the University of Wisconsin Computing Center and professor of math there.

Dr. Hammer's special interests lie in the areas of numerical analysis, integral geometry, computing, topology, and human communications. He is laying a foundation for a topological system aimed at providing a framework for numerical analysis and computer theory.

Dr. Hammer appears on campus as a lecturer for the society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics (SIAM). He will speak at 4:45 Wednesday on the Continuity Concept for students with at least one term of calculus from Apostol. That evening, at 8:15, he address a general college audience on Information and Communication. Thursday at 4:45 Dr. Hammer's topic will be An Atomic Chart for Mathematical Systems.

Judo Team Sends 10 To West Point

Juniata College once again goes Ivy League! This Saturday and Sunday the Juniata College Judo Team will send ten men to compete in the Eastern Intercollegiate Judo Championships to be held at the United States Military Academy, West Point, New York.

Under the capable coaching of Prof. Robert Fisher, the Juniata Judo Team will challenge Cornell University, last year's Eastern Champions, and other top Judo Teams such as West Point, Princeton, and VMI, for the Eastern Championship.

Those competing in the individual championships on Saturday are: George Durfee, Junior, and John Schulz, freshman, in the 150 lb. class; Ron Schilling, Soph., and Bill Keen, Sr. in the 165 lb. class; Paul Freeman, Freshman, and Chuck Locke, Soph., in the 180 lb. class; Seniors Leroy Mell and Peter Schaffer in the 205 lb. class; and Phil Eatough, Senior, and Bob Monti, Soph., in the unlimited weight class.

In the individual competition each player is pooled with two opponents. Thus, each player is guaranteed at least two matches. The winner of each pool will then continue to compete in his weight class and the player with the least number of losses will be declared the individual champion of his weight class. Winners of each weight class will then compete for the overall individual championship.

On Sunday, the Judo Team will enter its five best men to compete for the Eastern Intercollegiate Team Championship. The team will consist of Senior Leroy Mell, three year veteran and President of the Club who holds a third degree brown belt; Senior Pete Schaffer, also a three year veteran, a third degree brown belt and Vicepresident of the Club; Senior Phil Eatough, a three year veteran and white belt; Sophomore Ron Schilling, a two year veteran, secretary of the club and holder of a white belt; and Paul Freeman, a Freshman who holds the club's highest rank of first degree brown belt.

The Judo Team boasts the only undefeated team on campus so far this year. In five previous matches, the Judo Team has defeated Princeton, Columbia University, Cornell University, New York State College, and Newark College of Engineering.

Although this is only the team's second Eastern Championship, Coach

Juniata wrestling hit the recognizable ranks this weekend when the Indians placed fifth in the Middle Atlantic States Conference championships at Moravian College, Bethlehem. Three wrestlers also brought home medals.

This is the first time in the college's short nine-year history that any wrestler has placed in the MAC's and the first time that Juniata rated among the top half in the final team standings.

The three finalists were freshman Pete Schuyler, heavyweight from Wilmington, Del., third; junior Phil Eatough, 177-pounder from West Chester, fourth; and junior Don Hoover, 160-pounder from Duncansville, fourth.

The Juniata team scored 22 points to place behind Wilkes (65), Temple (53), West Chester (40) and Lycoming (44). Juniata coach Bill Berrier rated this year's MAC's as a much better balanced championship than previously, with no team running way ahead of the others point-wise.

Schuyler, gaining a bye in the first round, wrestled four times in the championships, winning three. In the final rounds he was defeated by Muhlenburg's Piper who went on to win the heavyweight class. Both Eatough and Hoover won three and lost two matches.

The farthest any previous Juniata wrestler went in MAC post-season competition was to the semi-finals. This was Duane Ruble, JC's top heavyweight and possessor of the most impressive Juniata wrestling career record from 1961-65.

Chris Sherk (145-Mt. Joy) won two matches before losing on a referee's decision in the Friday night eliminations. Mike McCartney (130-Corning, N.Y.) won the first round, and lost in the semi-consolations. Jack Hopper (123-Newark, Del.), Ron Hoover (152-Duncansville), and Dick Feigles (167-Hughesville) lost out in their first bouts. Since their opponents failed to win their next matches, neither of these JC wrestlers had another chance.

This is the second year that Juniata has had an entire team represented in the MAC's. Last season the team recorded three points when Galen Dively (123-Clyde) won the first round, and Ron Hoover (137-Duncansville) won by default and advanced into the third round.

This MAC showing by the Juniata team is indicative of the kind of season Coach Berrier's young team had. They beat Washington & Jefferson (17-11), St. Vincent (30-5), Bucknell (25-11), Kutztown (18-15), Dickinson (18-13), and Lebanon Valley (19-13). Their losses came at the hands of Gettysburg (14-13), Lycoming (6-29), St. Francis (9-24), Elizabethtown (11-17), and Indiana (11-24).

Szendroi Wins Chess Tourney

Eighteen chess player competed in the Pennsylvania Individual Collegiate Chess Championship which Juniata hosted last weekend. This was the first major chess tournament on JC's campus and probably will not be the last.

Penn State's Bob Szendroi posted a 5-0 record including a fourth round come-from-behind victory over Jerry Bergman also of Penn State. This was a revenge match for Szendroi, because in last year's tournament Bergman defeated Szendroi to win.

Bergman came in second with a 3½-1½ record. Penn State's Clauser won the class "B" trophy with a 3½-1½ record. Robert Scott of Bloomsburg won the class "C" trophy with a 3-2 score and Juniata's Darwin Kennepp won the unrated trophy with a 3-2 record.

Ratings which determine a player's class are made by the United States Chess Federation which sanctioned the tournament.

Four schools were represented. Bloomsburg, Penn State and St. Vincent sent players in addition to Juniata.

JC was represented by five players. In addition to Kennepp, Glenn Aston-Reese finished with a 3-2 score. Allan Burkett was 2-3, while Paul Shaffer and Dave Crider had identical 1½-3½ scores.

Fisher believes the team will place high in this year's competition. This year, the Eastern Championship will travel to San Jose State College, California, to compete in the National Intercollegiate Judo Championships. As far as the Juniata Judo Team is concerned, it is "California or Bust".

In the A-league final, the Has-Beens jumped to a quick lead and were never threatened as they downed the Dwarfs, 67-39. Don Weis, Jeff Barnes, and Nat Mitchell scored in double figures for the Has-Beens, while Weaver and Terry Turnbull hit double figures for the Dwarfs.

The Blue Bombers upset the Spastics, 58-44, to take B-league. The game was close until the last quarter when the Blue Bombers broke loose for 23 points. Phil Sipling, Bill Rudwick, and Smokey Clough had 19, 14, and 13 points respectively for the winners.

The Grossmen preserved their perfect record with a close, 47-40, victory over the Wee Five in the C-league final.

In D-league, the Hatchets finished with an unblemished record as they beat the Chickennens, 54-43. Wood with 21 points was the high man for the Hatchets, while Ken Mack had 18 for the Chickennens.

Bill Berrier

JC Coach Will Join Dodger Organization In Florida

Juniata College's Bill Berrier will hang up his wrestling togs for baseball spikes Wednesday (March 15) when he heads to Vero Beach, Fla., and the Los Angeles Dodger baseball camp.

Wrestling coach at Juniata where his teams have won 26 and lost 24 in dual competition (6-5 this year) Berrier also serves, from September to March, as assistant dean of men and an assistant coach of football. He has been with the Dodger organization since 1960.

Following spring training April 26 Berrier will go to Dubuque (Ia.) in the Mid-West League (Class A) to be player-manager of the same franchise he headed at Jamestown (N.Y.) last season in the New York-Pennsylvania League (Class A). His playing role will be limited to pinch-hitting for injured players.

Berrier's Jamestown club finished in second place last year—only two games out. One of his players, Dave McCammon of Miami, was the leading hitter in the league, and four others received big league contracts for this season. He cites this second-place finish and managing the league's top hitter as the greatest satisfactions in his first managerial role. There is no longer a Dodger club at Jamestown. One of Juniata's all-time great athletes, Berrier was a Little-America fullback and an outstanding center fielder and 400 hitter on the Indians' baseball teams. He was first signed as a "bonus" player by the Dodgers following his graduation in 1960 and was assigned to Panama City in the Florida State League, hitting .290 in his rookie year. He then spent two seasons with Greenville in the Sally League (hitting .299 and .287) before going to Albuquerque, (N.M.).

In three years at Albuquerque, Berrier maintained a near .300 average and in the final season with the Dukes served as a player-coach.

A graduate of William Penn High School (Harrisburg), Berrier gained athletic fame at Juniata with his twin brother, Jim, from 1956-60. He holds eight all-time and eight Middle Atlantic Conference individual football records in scoring and rushing for the Indians.

During football season, Berrier is the offensive line coach at Juniata and then takes over the wrestling helm during the winter. He just completed his fifth year, having posted two winning seasons, two tied seasons, and one losing season.

Warrior of The Week

Doyle Named Again

Senior co-captain Jim Doyle who was the first Warrior of the Week has been named by basketball coaches Trimmer and Frazier as the last Warrior of this season.

Doyle who was the only senior on the team was one of the best ball-handlers on the team. He definitely was the leader on the court and this will be missed next year.

Offensively Doyle ended the season with 164 points which was third best on the team.

Doyle, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Doyle, 832 Vickroy Avenue, Johnstown, played under coach Richard Rigby at Fernside High School.

Chem. Majors Explore Summer Research In Conjunction With JC Science Profs

Research topics covering a wide variety of fields in chemistry will be explored this summer by selected undergraduate chemistry majors during a research program to be held here June 19 to Aug. 25.

According to Dr. Dale L. Wampler, assistant professor of chemistry and director of the program, "It provides students with an opportunity for research experience."

Students chosen for research this summer are Michael Rohrbach, David Pysnik, Michael Auker, and Charles Lyle, juniors; James A. Hamilton, Kenneth Hess, and Howard DeLozier, sophomores; and Kay

McCarthy, and William Staplecamp, freshmen.

The program, in its ninth year, is open to all Juniata chemistry majors who demonstrate superior or above average ability in the laboratory or classroom.

"Juniata working on research problems can continue these projects into their senior year when they take the introduction to research course," added Dr. Wampler.

The program will be supervised by four members of Juniata's chemistry department. Each professor will direct research concerning a specific problem.

Dr. Donald M. Rockwell, professor of chemistry and chairman of the division of natural sciences, will direct a study of "Reactions Leading to a Phosphorus-Carbon Double Bond."

Dr. Wampler will do "Structural Studies of Transition Metal Ion Complexes of Biquanide," in which he and his students will use single crystal x-ray diffraction to elucidate the structural features of biquanide complexes.

"Heats of Solution of Amino Acids and Polypeptides will be investigated by Dr. Charles H. Spink an assistant professor."

Dr. William Russey, a new member of Juniata's staff, will supervise a study of Cationic Cyclization of Olefins.

"Only better schools would have a program of this sort," commented Dr. Wampler. He noted that the research program has been in effect since 1958, when it was originated with the help of a grant from the National Science Foundation. "At that time these programs were uncommon in small colleges," he added.

Four students will be supported by a National Science Foundation Undergraduate Research Participation Grant to the College. An additional grant from the National Institute of Health to Dr. Spink provides support for three more students, and Juniata pays for additional students. In addition, the college provides free housing on campus for the students so that they will only pay their board.

Dr. Kihl Directs JC Participation In Wash. Semester

Juniata has been selected to participate in the Washington Semester Program of the American University in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Young Kihl, assistant professor of political science, made the announcement as director of the program here on campus. He said that he expects Juniata to send at least one student this fall and perhaps three or four in later programs.

The students will spend a semester in the nation's capital where they will participate in seminars and research projects to give them greater insight into national government. The students will also become familiar with the sources for study of specific governmental problems.

Dr. Kihl explained that the program is a cooperative arrangement between American University and certain accredited colleges throughout the United States. The student receives a realistic picture of the processes of government, richer in detail and more accurate, than can be gained in an ordinary college environment.

Six semester hours credit will be given, and the seminar work consists principally of meetings with public officials, political figures, lobbyists and others active in the government. Through the meetings and in sessions led by professors, a student is brought into intimate contact with a broad range of governmental and political activity.

Interested students should apply to Dr. Kihl, Washington Semester Representative here. The deadline for applications for the fall semester is April 18.

SCORE Presents Musical, May 14

The Student Committee on Racial Equality will undertake the production of a musical program. The Insurance Company—A Cantata in Illumination and Mine, to be presented in Oller Hall on the evening of May 14.

Written and composed by Prof. Donald C. Hope, chairman of the Dept. of English at Bradford College, Bradford, Mass., and Prof. Elmer Maas, assistant professor of philosophy and musician, the production will incorporate the elements of a jazz orchestra, a chorus, electronic effects, narration and dramatic action; and its theme of social satire is intended to point "an itchy finger at a few matters of more than passing interest."

Positions are currently open for singing roles, choral and spoken parts, sound and lighting, costumes and production. Both campus and community are invited to participate. Tryouts will be held Tuesday, March 21 from 2 to 5 p.m. at 1608 Mifflin St. or by personal arrangement with SCORE (643-3325).

Students will note that rehearsals for The Insurance Company will be arranged to avoid schedule conflicts with other musical and dramatic programs planned for the spring semester.

The Easter Recess begins at noon Thursday, and the campus will be following the regular Saturday class schedule.

Harsanyi and Kauffman Earn Wilson Fellowships

Mary Harsanyi

Janet Kauffman

Mary Harsanyi and Janet Kauffman have made history in their being awarded Woodrow Wilson Fellowships for graduate study of which they were notified last week.

Mary, a biology major, intends to continue her studies at Harvard University in Boston in microbiology. Her ultimate goal is to teach in college and do further research in microbial genetics after obtaining her doctorate.

Janet is an English-French major who hopes to go to McGill University in Montreal, Canada. She is primarily interested in comparative studies in medieval French and English literature, and would eventually like to teach in college.

Mary and Janet were chosen from more than 13,000 entrants who were recommended by faculty members in 1,022 colleges in the United States and Canada "as giving promise of becoming valuable members of the academic profession, according to Sir Hugh Taylor, president of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation. There were 1259 winners of the Fellowships for the coming academic year. The award provides graduate education with tuition and fees paid along with a living stipend of $2,000. In addition, the graduate school receives a supplementary grant.

Both seniors have been Dean's List students throughout their years of studying at Juniata. Jan was one of the juniors last year who spent the year in France in the Brethren Students Abroad program. She has been active in SCOPE and writes for KVASIR, the literary magazine. Mary has been active in Scalpel and Probe, the biology club. Her identical twin sister, a psychology major at Penn State, has been awarded a fellowship at the University of Pennsylvania.

Enrollment Statistics Prove Sciences Most In Demand

Registrar John Hollinger, in his registration report for the Spring Semester, indicated that Juniata is typical of the small church-affiliated school in America which finds itself growing and changing with new trends and far different orientations.

The current enrollment is 1,041. Of these only three are majoring in classics, and only three in religion.

Of the three academic divisions, the highest enrollment is in the sciences with 373 majors comprising 35.8 per cent of the student body. There are 345 currently enrolled in the social sciences and 223 in the humanities.

The student body is made up of 227 seniors, 214 juniors, 288 sophomores and 312 freshmen. The men students still outnumber the women by a large majority: 638 to 403.

Keeping pace with American society is a trend among students seen significantly in the marked enrollment increase in economics during the past four years. In 1964 3.8 per cent of the students majored in economics while this spring 8.2 per cent are concentrating in economics.

State Band Presents 'Modern Jazz', Tonight

Alumni Hall will swing tonight at 8:15 with the sounds of modern jazz played by a 14 piece stage band. The band, which will present big name band selections, is directed by Mr. Douglas Fleshman, instructor in music.

Mr. Fleshman said of the band, which first performed during last year's May Day celebration, that this is the "first time we have assembled a complete instrumentation for a stage band."

The Passing Hours

And the hours have passed. . . for the most part, at least. The new women's hours proposals have only yet another minor stumbling block to get around. SAC acts on them tomorrow. They should make it, as word from upstairs sounds positive.

And after all the fuss they are passing intact. One begins to wonder if the administration really has it out for us after all. It isn't the menace it seems. We (i.e. SCOPE) asked; we got.

Maybe the mess was just a big act on the part of both factions. Change seems to be inevitable, and it could be its own virtue. But it is hard to admit that and feel worthwhile. So a fuss has to be made, stumbling blocks have to be encountered and overcome. There has to be a conflict between the students and the reigning body. Ultimately change must occur—and much of the success is in the struggle. It isn't worth it without the struggle. The fuss, the aura of student revolt, the unapproachable and omnipotent administration are all part of the essence. And so we appreciate it.

Perhaps they love us after all and play the game along with us as unconsciously as we play ourselves.

We hope none of the women will forget just what it means that they can stay out later.

Bells Are Ringing

Will those bells never stop ringing? We wish someone would do some thing about that faulty bell system that is driving everyone in Students Hall mad. Is it a psychology experiment? It certainly isn't proving much. Really, one bell is sufficient to alert us all to the fact the class is over if the fact wasn't already known. A bell every ten minutes does not serve to break up the long class period. It makes it longer, in fact, by keeping better track of the time that one would do himself by a neighbor's watch. The distraction is too much. Help! Or we shall be forced to adopt a new alma mater. (Ah yes, we do have an old one.) How about the old Poe masterpiece in madness set to music: "Bells, bells, bells, bells, bells, bells, bells, bells, . . ."

Juniors Reclaim Cup At All Class Night

Junior Class Production of "A Trip With Alice"

by Paul Keely

In its attempt to make a clean sweep of this year's inter-class competition, the Senior Class earned the last (and perhaps the best) laughs, but it had to settle for second place as the juniors paraded off with the All Class Night cup for the second consecutive year Saturday evening.

During what might have been more properly dubbed "All Orgy Night," each class, through the medium of an original 22-minute musical, took its turn in none-too-subtle mockery of administrative regulations by seeing who could out-debauch whom. The judges used somewhat different criteria, however, as they pronounced the Class of '68 the victors with a 20-point rating, followed by the seniors, sophomores, and freshmen, with 14, 11, and 5 points respectively.

The Sophomore Class began the evening in rip-roaring fashion as it depicted the amorous dilemma encountered by a Canadian Mountie (John Batchelor) in a demoralized mining town saloon: in The Mountie Gets His Man or the Mountie Gets His the hero found himself torn between the licentious lasciviousness of Loose Lizzie (Joan Gilchrist) and the pristine purity of Virtuous Virginia (Bobbi Wayne), the bartender's (Dave Fleck) daughter from the East. Had there been a prize for the most realistically staged orgy, the Class of '69 might not have found itself in an empty-handed third-place finish.

The second installment of the thirtieth annual All Class Night featured the Freshman Class production of Peter Panlines, starring Bruce Hockman as the blundering agent of F.U.N., an organization dedicated to the preservation of pleasure. When he wasn't too busy holding up his pants, super-hero Peter found time between scene changes to curtail the sinister subversion of F.L.U.S.H., a gang of ne'er-do-wells intent upon taking the fun out of life for students who frequented such likely retreats as "Square Bottom" and "Pow Wow Place." Said the announcer for the Class of '70 at the beginning, "This play is supposed to be a flop, but we're going to go through with it anyway." From the reactions of the audience and the last-place ranking they suffered, the freshmen might have been better off not bothering. Commented one dissenting viewer, "Even the intermission will finish higher than that."

One factor which perhaps aided the Junior Class cause was its practice of temperance and chastity, relatively speaking, in its parody of Alice Adventures in Wonderland. A Trip with Alice began for the audience when Alice (George Zupko) sampled a marihuona cigarette compliments of the White Rabbit (Clair Kenyon). Thereupon, Alice commenced a whimsical journey through a Wonderland complete with dancing flowers and wildly-costumed characters, including the Cheshire Cat (Bert Mazzuto) and the Mad Hatter (Ed Rodgers). If the Mad Hatter's Party-goers were really devoted to Tea, then the juniors did have a distinct advantage over the other three classes who portrayed rather profitless indulgences in sex and alcoholic beverages throughout their presentations: Alice's escapade was comparatively innocuous.

Realizing that their four years on College Hill are rapidly coming to a close, the seniors appropriately seized All Class Night as an opportunity to voice their grievances with respect to the administration's perspective on

Alumnus Answers

To the Editor:

On a recent visit to Juniata's campus, I happened to read a letter to the editor which deplored the college's pre-occupation with such mundane matters as preparing its graduates with the means of earning a livelihood and fund raising. I found myself going back to the first paragraph to make sure of the senior status of the writers because of the sophomoric nature of the writing.

I should like to ask the writers a number of questions. First, how many a college perpetuate itself, let alone expand, if it does not engage in fund raising activities? The students cannot be asked to pay for the actual cost of their education. The student pays less than half of the total cost of his education at Juniata—the balance must come from other resources which must be requested by means with which I am sure you are familiar.

Alumni giving at Juniata is made especially difficult since the vast majority of her graduates go into fields of service. This leads me to my second question. If the college is primarily interested in its graduates' economic condition, how is it that the majority of her graduates enter the low-paying fields of service such as education, the ministry, and social welfare work? Why hasn't the college encouraged its students to consider the more lucrative careers in industry, business and finance? The answer is that Juniata permits freedom of educational and vocational choice. While the college may have certain graduation requirements as regards specific subjects and curriculum, the student may choose to study any field for which he has the mental aptitudes and the necessary academic preparation.

Applications are still being accepted for Juniata and Alfarata positions. Enquire: Glenn Aston-Reese, Box 14.

In the final paragraph the writers ask to be taught to think as independent adults. Yet in the preceding paragraphs, they condemn the college for not providing certain assistance and information. What is to prevent the students from discovering and disseminating information about cultural events at other institutions? Have you really asked for help regarding transfer to another college or admission to a graduate school? I seriously question your facts about loan repayment becoming immediately due upon transfer to another college. I further question the faculty refusing to help a student with graduate school admission.

What brings students to Juniata? What makes an alumnus like me want to write a letter (my first) to the editor? It is the excellence of the college, but it is more than such a single factor. Is it possibly the emphasis on the spiritual life of man? Is it interested faculty or is it the commonality of fraternity pervading the total campus? Or is it all these things that attract and hold students and finally keep Juniata close to the hearts and minds of her graduates?

We alumni of Juniata owe much to our beloved college. We were trained for our immediate vocations and for graduate study. We were fortunate and privileged to study under professors who cared about us as individuals and who gave hours to dialogue in helping us to develop our philosophy of life. No question about which we were deeply concerned was turned aside. We were plagued by the same questions which you ask—who am I? Why am I here? Does life have a purpose? Fortunately is the student who attends a college today which follows the Christian Ethic and whose motives are directed by love for humanity.

Does this sound like a college concerned with the main with material things? My own testimony is to the contrary. While Juniata gave me a sound foundation for graduate study, I learned something much more important while a student at the college. I not only learned how to live, but for what I was living. I learned those things which would sustain me even though all my material possessions were taken from me. Ideals which no human can destroy; i.e., a personal relationship with a Supreme Being, love and understanding of the values of goodness, truth, beauty and, lastly, the great satisfaction of a life of service to others.

Personnel Reply

To the Editor:

I was interested in the letter "Purse or Mind" published in a recent issue of the Juniatian. I was disturbed by the fact that it was so full of generalizations. For example,

1. What is the criteria for an intellectually exciting faculty and student body?

2. What is the definition of a good liberal arts college?

Further, I question a few of your conclusions.

1. Does Juniata College or any college for that matter really teach students how to make money?

2. While Juniata's Alumni have supported the institution very well, there has been little or no emphasis on "How to become established in the best economic tradition" while attending. In fact in past years the majority of Juniata's Alumni have gone into social service careers which are not the most lucrative. You would be amazed what some other colleges are doing in attempting to raise funds from students while on campus.

3. It is true that the college has an obligation to provide opportunities for cultural exposure but have specific proposals been made through the student government to the Administration concerning transportation to surrounding metropolitan areas?

4. Have you bothered to visit the Placement Office for information about Summer employment or graduate school opportunities? A full time staff member is employed to assist students in Placement and Career Counseling.

I feel that if Juniata is classified as "ingrown, self-perpetuating, and self-righteous," it is perhaps a presumptuous judgment not informed about the issues facing small colleges today. With what credentials does a student rule a faculty, many of whom are intellectual enough to obtain the Ph.D. from renowned institutions? What exposure have you had to the operation of a college and such mundane things as meeting a payroll, balancing a budget, recruiting people to work in an isolated section of Central Pennsylvania?

There are many of us who work here who share your concerns about doing a better job academically and financially. We realize, all too well, the weaknesses of Juniata College and are very concerned about such vital issues as whether this college can even survive in the immediate years ahead. Others as well are concerned about the survival of this type of college in light of rising costs.

It is unfortunate that the operation of a college gets very involved with finances and that the extent of many academic and cultural programs depends on the amount of dollars available. The amount of money available depends on tuition, gifts and grants, and income from the endowment. The ability to keep and attract top faculty, institute imaginative ideas in education, and to offer extensive cultural programs all depends on dollars. The financial success depends on the number of students admitted, generous alumni and friends, and the strength of your investments. It's all very distasteful but a fact.

I believe there is one basic problem here—that the dialogue between students, faculty, and administration is very poor. While more can be put into written communications, I wonder how many would read them. I would welcome the challenge of discussing issues with students concerning Juniata or higher education problems (at least the financial aspects) at informal seminars or in student meetings.

I would be pleased to discuss this further at anytime. In the meantime, I am sure we all appreciate receiving the Harsanyi-Kaufman rating prior to their departure from the campus.

Prue's Views

It was a new and somewhat bewildered Student Government that met Wednesday evening in its first session. Much of the bewilderment was hidden in silence as Student Government President Jim Hamilton dispensed with the preliminary business of electing a recording secretary the Legislature and appointing three students to the Student Activities Council. Anita Smith, one of the four senior representatives, was elected as secretary. Joe Peters, Bonnie Cave, and Sally Palmer were approved as student members of SAC.

The meeting progressed quickly, with the formalities of Parliamentary procedure getting lost amid first-night jitters and a desire to get the necessary business taken care of with as little trouble as possible. With little discussion, either because the representatives weren't quite sure of what was going on or because they were all in agreement, the Student Government decided to ask President Ellis to issue a charter for the government through his office.

Dean Helms reported that the SCOPE recommendation for Women's hours has been passed by the Personnel Staff. The recommendation now goes to SAC. For all students supporting the proposal, this was a long awaited answer. The tensions which developed between the students and administration and within the administration itself were the result of a basic lack of communication and misrepresentation. The fact that this student proposal has been accepted and approved by the Administration points to a closer student-administrative relationship in the future.

Bonnie Cave's remark, "We're all new. We don't know anything," reflects the basic weakness which one can only hope the new structure of the Student Government will remedy. This year's body of students should be the last one where all members but one came to their office with no past experience. With freshmen and sophomore representatives on the governing body, there should be representatives and even chairmen who will be returning for two or three years.

It was disappointing, however, to see that the only other students present, besides the members of the Student Government, were some of the "retired" senators. Where were all the other students who ran for election to the Legislature? The surprisingly large number of candidates for office seemed to indicate that there was a growing interest in student government and its role in student affairs. But, perhaps this burst of enthusiasm was merely a desire to become something with a name attached and did not reflect a genuine interest in doing something.

This first meeting of the 1967-68 Student Government was the last meeting for Dr. Cherry, who has served as Senate advisor for the past four years. If there is one thing that Dr. Cherry can do extremely well it is ask questions! But, if one looks beyond the constant hand-waving and sometimes irritating, "Mr. President, if I may interrupt..." he does notice that it was usually Dr. Cherry who somehow found his way through muddled discussions and trivialities and pointed out exact problems and clarified issues. He could answer questions too.

As a very necessary and helpful "gadfly," Dr. Cherry brought to the Senate meetings his knowledge of procedural technicalities and college policy. And, although he doesn't believe in student rights, or "rights" for anyone, he did his best to represent the students fairly and communicate faculty and administrative opinions and policies.

The Student Government met in closed session immediately following the regular meeting to select a new advisor.

Post Season ECAC Honors Go To Kenyon

JC's 5'7" junior guard, Clair Kenyon, was named to the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference's Division III team for the 66-67 season. Receiving a nomination almost every week during the past season, Kenyon was named to the ECAC weekly teams three times.

The only other player in JC's history to receive this honor was Don Burnich a 5'6" guard on the 1958-59 team. Burnich led the team in scoring that year with 442 points in 22 games and also led the team in assists.

During the past season, in addition to leading the team in scoring for the second year (250 points), Kenyon made some outstanding defensive contributions. He also led the team in foul shooting percentage with 44.45 for 81%.

Joining Kenyon on the ECAC division III team were Rick Eppheimer of Susquehanna and Ron Travis of Lycoming. Travis also topped the JC all-opponent team. On the Division II ECAC team were Rhett Jenkins of Scranton and Billy Kudrick of Albright. These four were the only JC opponents to be placed on ECAC teams. All four were also named to the tribe all-opponent team.

JC's Clair Kenyon drives around two E-town defenders. Kenyon became the second player in Juniata history to be named to the ECAC post season team.

Basketball Coach Russ Trimmer displays the exuberance with which he led the Tribe to an 8-9 record in his first year at JC.

Congratulations go to heavyweight Pete Schuyler (center) as he had just pinned his Lebanon, Valley opponent to give JC a 19-13 victory.

JC's Will Brandau, sandwiched in by two Ursinus players, reaches for another rebound. Brandau was named to the MAC honorable mention team.

Even wrestling coaches get excited. Bill Berrier, who's only losing season was first and that was five years ago, led his team to a 6-5 record in dual meets and 5th place in the MAC's this season.

FROM THE TEE-PEE

Sports Editor
Glenn Aston-Reese

Juniata's Will Brandau was given honorable mention in the Middle Atlantic Conference All-star Northern College Division Basketball team. The 6'5" center led JC in rebounding with 166 and was second in scoring with 204 points for a 12.0 average. Brandau had the best field-goal shooting average of the regulars hitting 85-184 for 46%.

Ron Travis was voted the top player on an all-opponent team selected by JC's varsity players. He hit for 35 points, including 12 field goals, as he team downed JC 103-85 early in the season.

Judo Team Plans Triangular Meet

Juniata College's Judo Club will host Newark College of Engineering and Princeton University in a triangular meet, tentatively set for April 29. Plans also are being made for a meet at Army April 22.

Several weeks ago the Juniata club slammed NCE 52-7 at Newark. Princeton participated here in the first invitational tournament in December and was runner-up to the winning Juniata team.

This past weekend Fele Schaefer of Lewistown, a senior brown belt, went to the final section of round robins at the sixth annual Eastern College Judo Association Championships at West Point, but the Juniata club failed to place in the individual and team standings.

Schafer, George Durfee of West Chester, and Chuck Locke of Medford Lakes, N.J., were the top point getters for Coach Bob Fisher's judoists. All of the JC participants won at least one match but not enough points were acquired and each of the judoists were eliminated in the round robins.

In the team competition, Juniata beat Oswego State 25-0 but lost to Army 10-34, eliminating the JC club. Locke, Phil Eatough of West Chester, and Leroy Mell of Carlisle scored points in the Oswego win. Locke had a throw for the only Juniata points against Army.

won the team championships, with Army second; and Catholic University of Puerto Rico, third. The grand champion was Jodie Glone of Army.

Other players named to the first all-opponents team were John Lentz, senior forward from E-town, Rhett Jenkins, senior forward from Scranton, Rick Eppheimer, junior forward from Susquehanna, and Gary Lupek, sophomore center from Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

Named to the second team were Billy Kudrick, senior guard from Albright, Reuben Daniels, sophomore guard from Wilkes, Ned Russell, junior forward from Franklin and Marshall, Charlie Witaconis, junior center from Scranton, and Don Smith, junior forward from Washington and Jefferson.

The Lycoming Warriors were selected as the top team faced by the Tribe this year, with the Scranton Royals a close second.

Ten varsity b-ballers and three managers earned letters for this year. Four players had previously earned letters. Heading the list was senior co-captain Jim Doyle followed by juniors Clair Kenyon, Will Brandau and Jim Biello. Earning their first "J" letters were juniors Dale Broadwater, John Tussey and Ed Herrick, sophomore Bob Chandlee, and freshman Bruce Bader and Adam Barnhart.

The three managers were juniors Mike Eisenhauer and Jim Biechler, and freshman Eric Woodward.

Eleven JC grapplers and the head manager earned letters for the 66-67 wrestling season.

Five of the wrestlers earned their third "J". They are senior captain Dick Feigles, juniors Chris Sherk, Don Hoover, Phil Eatough and Bob Butz. Two are now two-year winners: sophomores Jack Hopper and Ron Hoover.

The first year winners were all freshmen: Pete Schuyler, Mike McCartney, Tom Light and Bud Scott.

The head manager was junior Joe Peters.

This year Juniata will host the MAC's in golf May 1 at the Bedford Springs course. Back from last year's team which came in 16th in the MAC's and won 8 out of 11 matches are 6 lettermen. Heading the list are seniors Dan David and Henry Hartman with juniors Rick Gieg, Russ MacLissac, Ken Stevens, and Phil Tompason, another letterman is junior Joe Shull, but he lettered his freshman year.

Catlin Explains Benefits Of Library Cooperative

Over one million books are available to the students in ten central Pennsylvania colleges who are members of the Area College Library Cooperative program.

A model for inter-library cooperation throughout the United States, the arrangement makes available 4,000 periodicals in the various colleges and is back-stopped by the 600,000 volumes in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania State Library in Harrisburg.

Librarian of the Juniata College L. A. Beeghly Library, Mrs. Anne Catlin, who serves as treasurer of the organization, explained that the membership is "limited to libraries operating chiefly in support of undergraduate curricula in four-year liberal arts colleges."

"All a student needs to do, if he wants some material his own college does not have," Mrs. Catlin said, "is to ask for Xerox copies of pages or request that the volume be sent to his school."

Xerox copies of material are free—up to ten copies—and the college library receives 200 xerox copies free each year as part of the membership.

On the other hand, if a student needs a volume from another college he can have it sent to his library for his use within a few days.

Organized in September 1965, the recent addition of the Capitol Campus of the Pennsylvania State University, located in Middletown, Pa., has brought the total membership to ten college libraries. The other members are: Millersville State College, Shippensburg State College, Franklin and Marshall, Dickinson, Elizabethtown, Gettysburg, Messiah, Wilson and Juniata College.

Each college is developing an area of special concentration," Mrs. Catlin pointed to the Juniata College Myers Science Library as an example. Located in the new Brumbaugh Science Complex near the main Juniata Beeghly Library, this collection specializes in the sciences.

"We hope to achieve a total regional strength which will be far greater than would be possible individually," Mrs. Catlin said. "Each one of the ten member colleges adds its specialty to the group and our students have resources they could never expect from any one college."

College Prepares For UN Semester

For the third year Juniata College has participated in the U.N. Semester at Drew University. During this year 78 students representing 35 colleges have taken part in the program. Harold Rhoads, a sophomore is presently in the program. Paul Baker, Mark Faulkner and Joyce Rosenberger were Juniata participants during the Fall 1966 term.

The total expenses including tuition, room, board and a seminar room fee are $1487.50.

Since the college is making an estimate as to the possible number of students for next fall's semester, anyone interested in the program is asked to contact Dr. Kihl, immediately who acts as the coordinator of the program for JC students.

JC Focus Series Offers Film Festival Exemplifying History Of Motion Pictures

In conjunction with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library in New York City, Juniata College's Focus series will offer, during the month of April, a three-part festival to exemplify or illustrate the history, development, and technique of motion pictures.

The Film Library, which was established in 1935, is an educational institution which collects and preserves representative motion pictures (dating back to 1895) with the object of making them available to all educational and cultural institutions as tools for examination of the history and influence of such a distinctively 20th-century art form.

Films of the 'teens comprise the first installment of the Focus festival, beginning tonight at 8:15 in Oiler Hall with four silent comedy shorts featuring Charlie Chaplin. The 1915-vintage, Essanay Studio productions, a total of 85 minutes in duration, include The Tramp, A Woman, The Bank and Police.

Another silent production of 1915 is D. W. Griffith's The Birth of a Nation, a three-hour presentation scheduled for tomorrow night. Starring Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish and Robert Harron, it has been rated by the Film Library as "unquestionably the most important film ever made. . . . This film convinced everyone that the motion picture was indeed an entirely new form of expression with unguessed power to stir the imagination."

The Roaring Twenties will be brought to life next week by four typical and outstanding films of that era. The evening of April 13 will feature two 1929 productions, Big Business, a silent 25-minute comedy directed by J. Wesley Horne and starring Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy and Jimmy Finlayson, and The Virginian, a 90-minute film version of Owen Wister's famous novel. Featuring Gary Cooper, Richard Arlen, Mary Brian, Walter Huston and Eugene Pallette under the direction of Victor Fleming, The Virginian, according to the Film Library, "was made in the first year of sound and contains . . . fully matured passages which point firmly to the way which the newly unfolding medium was later to develop."

Films of the 'twenties are in store for the night of April 14 also. Underworld, dating back to 1927, was the forerunner of all public-enemy films since it appeared at a moment when taste for crime and violence had just been whetted by the notoriety of Chicago gangsterdom. The 90-minute production stars George Bancroft, Clive Brook and Evelyn Brent under the direction of Josef von Sternberg.

Moana (1926), an 85-minute documentary produced by Paramount, represents director and photographer Robert Flaherty's penetration of the emotional aspects of Samoan life in the South Seas. As the Film Library finds, "Moana is a film of the inner meaning, in traditional Samoan culture, of such everyday pursuits as hunting, fishing, dancing, and the ritual of the Tattoo. . . . It was a review of Moana for an American newspaper that forerunner first introduced the term 'documentary' to the language."

The third portion of the Focus film festival, including films of the '20s, is scheduled for April 27 and 28; introductions to the features will appear in a forthcoming issue.

Twenty juniors and seniors were inducted into the Juniata College Honor Society at the annual dinner at Motel 22 Tuesday evening.

The nine seniors are: Christine Bailey, Beth Clopper, Marilyn Deane, Marcia Highhouse, Myrmice McCormick, Jim Myers, Terry Reed, Sally Schmidt and Carolyn Wetzel.

The new juniors are: Prue Engle, Sue Esch, Judy Heberling, Paul Leber, Joe Peters, Linda Ronning, Ruth Williams, Jim Carter, Donna Hunter, Mike Marzio and Paul Van Orman, the last four of whom are studying abroad this year.

President Calvert Ellis served as toastmaster; Phil Jones, president of the society, introduced the new members. Dr. Wilford Norris presented the speaker Dr. Andrew DeRocco, associate professor in the Institute of Molecular Physics at the University of Maryland.

Dr. DeRocco spoke on the Integration of Arts and Sciences. "The arts is the right way of doing things that need to be done," he said, "and science is the same thing."

Election to the society is made on the basis of scholarly achievement, moral integrity and broad cultural interests. The society has 29 in come members as well as other faculty and alumni members. There are the charter members who were in the original group when the society came into existence 26 years ago, alumni members who were elected after graduation on the basis of outstanding scholarly contribution. Any Phi Beta Kappa member on the faculty is automatically received into the society while honorary members can be non-alumni who have achieved a high standard of scholastic achievement after graduation.

Visiting Lecturer Hyde

To Speak Fri. And Sat.

On Lens Spectroscopy

Professor W. Lewis Hyde, Director of the Institute of Optics, The University of Rochester, Rochester, New York, will serve as a visiting lecturer here next Friday and Saturday.

He will visit under the auspices of the American Association of Physics Teachers and the American Institute of Physics as part of a broad, nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics. The program is now in its tenth year and is supported by the National Science Foundation.

The American Association of Physics Teachers is one of the seven member societies of the American Institute of Physics. Other member societies are: The American Physical Society, Optical Society of America, Acoustical Society of America, the Society of Rheology, American Crystallographic Association, and the American Astronomical Society.

Professor W. Lewis Hyde, who was named director of the University of Rochester Institute of Optics in June 1965, joined the Rochester faculty in 1963 after serving as director of development of the American Optical Company's J. W. Fecker Division in Pittsburgh. A specialist in the design of lens systems and in spectroscopy, he is a vice president of the International Commission for Optics. He is also a director-at-large of the Optical Society of America.

Dr. Hyde is a member of The American Physical Society, the Royal Microscopical Society, the Physical Society (London), and the XI, national research honorary. He is a former secretary of the Rochester section of the Optical Society of America.

Change T.G.I.S. To T.G.I.F.

So what about Saturday classes? Somewhere in some shuffle the issue seems to have lost interest to student awareness. And with Fall registration occurring soon, we know that nothing will happen in the very near future.

The issue is certainly significant enough to warrant keeping it before the public eye. What happened?

We feel that a schedule rearrangement is desirable, and any problems caused by replacing the obnoxious 6 day schedule with a 5 day system would only be positive ones. Any subsequent changes should be accepted in the name of progress, and by overcoming what appear to be detrimental effects (empty weekends, for example) would reverse to become assets.

We urge that students consider and accept a 5 day schedule. But lets not forget about it.

Letters to the Editor

Alan Downer, dramatic critic and chairman of the department of English at Princeton University, said to me recently, "It's no fun to go to the theatre anymore." Having just seen America Hurrah and Harold Pinter's The Homecoming, I was inclined to agree with him. Both plays pointed up what Robert Brustein in The Nation called "a desperate need to de-sacrate and destroy—not only material things but also moral values that civilized man has considered important for more than 2,000 years. Both plays were presented from a point of view that was coldly impersonal and inhuman. The characters in America Hurrah were robots, in The Homecoming, abstractions.

JC's All Class Night on March 18 reflects this world. It's no fun to go to All Class Night any more. "It's too gross," said one student. "I feel unclean." As a townsperson. Because I had as my guest a student from a foreign culture (I had brought him so that he could see how American students looked at theirs) I felt embarrassed and ashamed. By the end of the evening one's senses had been dulged by references to sex and alcohol so that he could finally only be bored or disgusted by the sameness and the excess. So far All Class Night follows the pattern of the professional theatre I have been talking about. But there is one major difference. The point of view of America Hurrah, so devastating in its mechanical approach to life, makes us see the folly of our lives. It is coolly detached. The skits of All Class Night tended to be hot and personal. "Thank God we are free!" sang the Hallelujah Chorus. Are we? Is there freedom in the malice of spirit that not only desecrates and destroys, but is itself delight in doing so? This is license, license that when all this is done, can end only in self-destruction.

In two decades of All Class Night I have watched many a luncheon of the administration and faculty (oh, the joyous freshman skit of two years ago), many a ridicule of mores and seemingly fogey-ish traditions, but for the most part it has been fun. Now we are on dangerous ground. To shock merely for the sake of shocking is decadence, and results only in history. (See 2,000 years of theatre history.) The marvelous dramatic talent shown in producing such a technically superior show as 1967's All Class Night can be put to better use—as can the human talent we have at JC.

Outlook Optimistic For Spring JC's Teams Show Experience

Starters For Baseball Team Are All Lettermen

This year's baseball team is loaded with experience. Twelve lettermen, six of them seniors, back from a team that posted a 9-2 record, indicate that JC could easily have its fourth consecutive winning season.

The probable starting lineup shows all lettermen. In the lineup for rookie coach Russ Trimmer will be tri-captains Gary Sheppard, second base, Denny Cowher, catcher, and Dave Shimp, third base; Lance Shomo, first base, Randy Rolston, shortstop, Terry Reed, left field, Ernie Moyar, center field, Steve Horner, right field, and Jim Sutton, pitcher. All are seniors except Horner, a junior, and Shomo and Rolston, both sophomores. Humber two pitcher for JC is junior letterman. John Good and freshman Gene Galbraith will be the third starters.

Next week JC has two away games, one at Albright on April 10, and another at Dickinson on April 13.

All four top hitters are back to help with the batting chores in Coach Russ Trimmer's first baseball season. Third baseman Dave Shimp of Pitman, N.J., was the leader with .424, followed by outfielder Steve Horner of Roaring Spring .378, shortstop Randy Rolston of East Hartford, Conn., .357, and catcher Denny Cowher of Queen .333.

Golf Team Has Six Back

Coach Bill Germann's first six golfers are back to form a strong nucleus that could hit the high mark this season.

Lettermen are seniors Dan David of Pittsburgh and Hank Hartman of Lampeter; and juniors Rick Gieg of Hollidaysburg, Russ MacIsaac of Willow Grove, Ken Stevens of Media, Phil Thompson of Huntingdon, and Joe Shull of Waynesboro, who wasn't out with the team last season but lettered in his freshman year.

The JC golfers host the Middle Atlantic Conference championships May 1 at the Bedford Springs Country Club.

Senior Bieber Leads Tennis Team

Senior Larry Bieber of Hummelstown, repeating as captain of the tennis team, heads the list of seven lettermen returning under Coach Ernie Post: seniors John Katonah of New York City, Ken Dick of Oaks, and Jim Dinger of Camp Hill; junior John Solis-Cohen of Elkins Park, and sophomores Dave Newcomer of Lititz and Al White of Noylan.

Coach Post also has several promising freshmen who may break into the lineup before the season gets too far. Top rookies are Tom McAuley, a number one netman at State College High and winner of the Juniata fall singles tournament; and Jay Patete and Bill Shoaf, the one-two pair at Altoona High School.

Track Team Looks For Winning Season

After three straight losing track seasons, Coach Mike Snider is anxious to upset the platter and has the ingredients to do it this spring.

Junior co-captain Bill Williams of West Mifflin, who last season broke the high jump and triple jump records he set the previous year, heads a list of several returning point producers: soph. miler Rich Beard of Annville, the cross country ace; junior co-captain John Stultz of Hollidaysburg and soph. Dave Fleck of Coraopolis—both sprinters; junior Tom Beam of Johnstown and soph. Jeff Dunkle of Manheim, jumpers; and soph. Bob Monti of Bristol, the top weight man. The jumps and sprints are the strongest areas, with experienced lettermen holding down several slots. However, the strength in the sprints may depend heavily on how well Stultz's knee responds to exercise. The football halfback had the knee operated on during semester break.

After the annual inter-class track and field competition April 4, Coach Snider expects to pin-point the cream of his squad—with more than 20 freshmen and sophomores in the drawing.

Humanities Div. To Sponsor Primitive Poetry Reading

Willard R. Trask, translator and author, whose most recent work is the published translation of Casanova's "History of my Life," will give a reading of the poetry of primitive peoples in Alumni Hall Monday evening at 8:15.

Mr. Trask's reading is being sponsored by the Division of the Humanities.

Born in Berlin, Germany of American parents, Mr. Trask spent his childhood in Germany, Russia, France, England and Panama. He received his formal education in New England and France, eventually specializing in medieval literature.

Mr. Trask will read from his anthology, "The Unwritten Song: Poetry of the Primitive and Traditional Peoples of the World," for which he received a Bollingen Foundation grant for compilation and partial translation.

Another Bollingen grant was awarded Mr. Trask for translations from medieval Galician-Portuguese poetry. He has twice held the E. A. Robinson Fellowship of the Edward MacDowell Association.

Mr. Trask has published a biography, "Joan of Arc: Self Portrait" and some thirty translations from German, French and Spanish, among them Thomas Mann's "The Black Swan," Ortega y Gasset's "Man and People," Erich Auerbach's "Mimesis," Ernst Robert Curtius's "European Literature and the Latin Middle Ages" and Mircea Eliade's "Yoga" and "Shamanism."

Richner To Render Piano, Organ Recitals On Campus

Thomas Richner, pianist, organist, musicologist and educator, will give a piano recital, Tuesday evening at 8:15 in Oller Hall as a part of the Focus series. The following morning, Richner will play an organ recital for convocation.

This musician has made a reputation as one of the leading performers of music by Mozart. For the Focus program he will play the "Rondo in D major (K485)" and the "Sonata in C major (K330)" by Mozart as well as other works by Bach, Chopin, Debussy and Khachaturian.

A native of Pennsylvania, Dr. Richner earned his way through the University of West Virginia by repairing organs. Later, in New York City, he studied with Harold Morris and won the coveted Walter W. Naumburg Foundation Competition which brought with it a New York Town Hall debut.

The Town Hall debut was followed by 10 more recitals, several of which were all-Mozart programs. The New York Times critic commented that "anyone who can play Mozart as sensitively and poetically as he did is rarely encountered on the concert platform. Dr. Richner is a born Mozart player, and they are few."

Dr. Richner made an intensive study of Mozart and the results were published in a book titled "Orientation for Interpreting Mozart's Sonatas."

Colby College in Waterville, Maine, gave Dr. Richner an honorary Doctorate. Beside his many concerts, master classes and clinics on both piano and organ, Dr. Richner is an Associate Professor of Music at Colby College, Rutgers University. In the summer he teaches at Columbia University Teachers College.

Juniata College — Huntingdon, Pa. 16652

April 14, 1967

Dinner, Doctorate Award To Augment Traditional Founders Day Activities

Ever since its inception in 1908, the observation of Founders Day has served to pay annual tribute to the men who, on April 17, 1876, laid the foundations for what is now Juniata College. This Monday, the 91st anniversary of the birth of Juniata, will be surrounded not only by the characteristic air of tradition but also by an aura of progress, as the successful completion of the College's six-year, $5,350,000 Development Program is celebrated.

Preliminary ceremonies take the form of a Recognition Dinner in the Lesher Hall dining room this evening, at which time six men will be honored for their leadership in campaigns for the financial support of the Development Program. William Ward, chairman of the board, Ward Trucking Corp., Altoona, will be the principal speaker.

Awards will be presented by President Calvert N. Ellis to the following fund drive leaders: Dr. Newton W. Long, Sr., chairman of the board, Miller Chemical and Fertilizer Co., Baltimore, Md.; John H. Biddle, president, Penn-Central National Bank, Huntingdon; Joseph R. Good, president, Hollidaysburg Trust Co.; Dale W. Detweiler, vice president, New Enterprise Stone and Lime Co.; James G. Thompson, president, General Finance Service Corp., Huntingdon; and Edgar G. Diehm, county court judge of Mahoning County, Youngstown, Ohio.

Reflecting upon Juniata's recent expansion, Dr. Ellis noted that the "six years of the Development Program have seen the Juniata student population grow by 33 percent, the faculty by 53 percent, while the operating budget has reached $2,800,000." In recognizing Ward for his service to his community and to higher education, President Ellis acknowledged, "Because of his support, and others like him, we will be able to serve our constituency and carry the educational goals of the founders into the future."

Founders Day proper will feature the conferment of an Honorary Doctor of Laws degree by the College upon David L. Luke, III, president of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company. During a special convocation in Oller Hall at 10 a.m., Dr. Ellis will award the honorary degree to Luke, who will follow with an address.

In his announcement of the Founders Day ceremony, Dr. Ellis praised the strong support given to higher education by Luke and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company. President Ellis went on to state that "Mr. Luke is associated with the broad economic interests of the nation, but he is especially devoted to the development of the resources of the Juniata Valley of Central Pennsylvania."

Born in Tyrone, Luke was graduated from Yale University in 1945. Before joining the paper company in 1952, he was associated with Arthur Anderson and Company, New York, and the American Research and Development Corporation, Boston. Luke is a director of B. F. Goodrich Company, United States Envelope Company, American Enka Corporation, and the Irving Trust Company, New York City; and he is a member of the board of directors of the American Paper Institute as well as a trustee of the American Museum of Natural History.

The traditional Founders Day reception for faculty and administration members who have served Juniata for 10 or more years will be held in the Faculty Club lounge, Monday afternoon, in honor of the three newest additions—Mrs. Mary H. Horoschak, director of residence; Mrs. Grace M. Shuler, catalog librarian; and Paul M. Heberling, associate professor of sociology and dean of men.

Mrs. Horoschak, a native of Danville, attended the Bucknell University Music School and studied at the Penn State Summer School. Having served as a supervisor of public school music in Danville in 1928, and

JCF Reaffirms Tutor Needed

Individuals may still volunteer to be a part of the JCF tutoring program. Nancy Pentland, director of the program, said that tutors are always needed.

According to Nancy, the purpose and goal of the program is helping children who come from a totally different moral background by exposing them to a more desirable kind of atmosphere, and at the same time helping them make academic progress.

Tutors are needed mainly for Mondays and Wednesdays. Tutoring takes place from 3:30 to 4:30 those afternoons downtown at the Salvation Army headquarters. Those interested in helping may contact Nancy Pentland through intercollege mail, Box 384.

Women Function With Dean To Effect Proposed Hours

Now that the Student Activities Council has approved with only a few minor changes in wording the proposed women's hours submitted by SCOPE, a committee of women students has been formed to work with Dean Helms in implementing the administrative details.

The committee, composed of SCOPE and Women's House members Ruth Bartleson, Sandy Andonides, Nancy Maust, Chris Persson, Joan Edwards and Anita Smith, is presently discussing the problems involved and systems to be established to deal with the later hours.

The new hours which will go into effect in September are 10:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday for freshmen, 11:00 p.m. for sophomores and juniors and 12 midnight for seniors.

Freshman women will have 12 o'clock permissions Friday and Saturday nights and sophomores and juniors 1:00 a.m. permissions. Seniors with parental permission will be allowed flexible permissions on those nights whereby they must return before the opening hour of the dormitory.

Discussion on realization of the new hours centers on the monetary difficulties in hiring night hostesses for the extended time and on establishing a system, either with student volunteers as night hostesses under which each girl in the dorm under a turn on the weekends, or with modified "key club" as used in many colleges to cover Friday and Saturday nights.

Faus To Offer Marriage Seminars

Engaged couples will have the opportunity again this spring to participate in the seminar on marriage at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Faus, minister to students. The seminars will be held from 4:30 to 5:15 p.m. each of the remaining Sunday afternoons this month.

The discussion will center around topics from emotional and psychological elements in adjustment to marriage and each other to planning the wedding ceremony, music, and other aspects related to engagement and planning for marriage.

Rev. Faus stresses that the seminars are in no way a replacement for ministerial counseling prior to marriage. Rather, he hopes that they will complement and supplement such counseling by allowing a number of young couples to share views and problems concerning their marriage plans.

tion of research papers in Alumni Hall this afternoon from 1:45 to 4:45, and tomorrow morning from 9:00 to 10:30. These papers will cover a wide variety of topics, from "The Abundance of Earth-Like Planets" to "Emission Spectroscopy."

The general public is invited to attend the presentation of papers and the talks delivered by guest lecturers.

Heading up the list of speakers will be Dr. W. Lewis Hyde, director of the Institute of Optics at the University of Rochester. Dr. Hyde will present two talks, the first being on the subject of the gas laser, and the second dealing with polarized light.

In addition to the presentation of papers and the guest lectures, the Association will hold its annual dinner on Friday evening, April 14, at Motel 22. Dr. Wilfred G. Norris, chairman of Juniata's physics department and vice-president of the Central Pennsylvania Section, will preside.

The American Association of Physics Teachers is one of the seven member societies of the American Institute of Physics. Other member societies are: The American Physical Society, Optical Society of America, Acoustical Society of America, the Society of Rheology, American Crystallographic Association, and the American Astronomical Society.

Someone Must Be Blind!

To the Editor:

The proposed Student Government budget has been formulated and presented, and for the most part it looks good, falling short of our hopes in but few areas.

Yet one area was surprisingly slighted. Though on some campuses the newspaper's endorsement of the radio station, and vice versa would be unheard of, we endorse WJC. It was shocking to hear of a decrease in budget, greater than 50% for an area of such infinite potential.

One way in which this potentiality, which we recognize so obviously, was to be realized was by the procurement and installation of a teletype machine, a valuable asset and embellishment to the station's resources. But the request was defeated.

It is strange and disappointing that the Chairman of Communications did not defend WJC's request for $1400 for lease and installation of the teletype. This is strange in itself in light of the nature of the position as spokesman for communications. It is disappointing in that the machine would prove to be valuable and resourceful both to the positive development of WJC and as an implement for broader kinds of coverage by the Juniatian.

Clearly the necessity of the machine might be questioned. However, this hardly seems valid. By the same token, we might question the necessity of big name entertainment which constitutes a considerable request within the budget of the Social Activities Committee. Although we endorse that request as well, it's nature gives us legitimate ground for foot-stomping by comparison.

What does it take to make people recognize that some things are more important than the purely utilitarian function they might serve? And how do inconsistencies in reasoning keep cropping up in important matters?

The teletype could have been one step toward the defeat of the base and apathetic attitudes on this campus, and yet its source of defeat was precisely these attitudes. This was something important. It isn't hard to see why.

Someone must be blind.

KVASIR Organized Poetry Reading Session Draws Comment, Commendation And Criticism

by Richard D. Kensing

Promptly at 8:19 p.m. members and contributors of KVASIR, JC's literary magazine, orally presented their self-styled poems to an eager audience of less than twenty JC students. The purpose of the session was to enhance KVASIR sales and supposedly give each poet a chance to offer his best poetry at its best.

The master of ceremonies (sic) was Phil Jones. After prefatory announcements, Phil gave the audience a brief history of KVASIR including its intents and purposes. After a thanks to all members, contributors, and sponsors, Phil introduced the first of the evening's poets, Bob Frysinger.

Bob began the readings by boldly breaking tradition and reading poems that were not published in the KVASIR. The first of his poems was a lengthy but good creation, the writing of which Bob accredited to some sort of undefined inspiration. He further thought that it might have been a "subliminal recall of Pilgrim's Progress." Regardless of what it was or where it came from it was a success in its combination of impressionism and expressionism. Bob followed this poem with a "stream of consciousness" five page sentence of mixed clichés and "in" jargon which "began anywhere and ran till it turned to consume itself." Bob certainly hit the nail on the head when he said that this sentence led nowhere.

Following Bob was Sally Schmidt, a pleasant girl with a pleasant voice and two pleasant poems: "George" and "A Walk."

Marta Daniels then took the stand prefacing her readings with, "since Robert has already broken tradition, far be it from me to break Robert's tradition." She too read poems that were not published in the KVASIR. The audience was duly awed by both Bob's and Marta's daring boldness. It has been said that often the best poet is the worst oral interpreter of his own works, and Marta proved the validity of this statement. She poorly presented some of the best work in the program which had but one flaw, except for three quick pauses it was prose rather than poetry. In introducing her last presented poem Marta said that her poem had much meaning to herself but perhaps little meaning to others—she was correct about the latter.

The next student poet delivered her very short poem so rapidly that she had made her presentation and returned to her seat by the time I had spelled her name, P-e-g-g-y-M-c-C-a-r-d-l-e.

Maxine Phillips then delivered a poem, which seemed more a story, about the Greeks returning home to Germany during epiphany. Her poem was nice though I never did figure out why the Greeks were returning home to Germany.

SCORE's own Gary Rowe read three poems which he called "subversive." The first, "Soon Forgotten," ended "decayed bricks that shelter the unborn." The second, "South Fork," ended "across the hills of the buried dead." The third, "Poem for Christmas," ended "tear drops against a winter night." Subversive, indeed, with the joy of life as the target. But, all-in-all, Rowe's mellow deep voice and his dramatic self coupled to be credited as the best delivery of the night.

Phil Jones then presented the "Diz Kuhn's Flora and Fauna" Award to Billy Bockfuss. Mr. Ralph Church accepted the award (a daffodil) for Billy and read the winning poem, "Reality and Illusion." What the "Diz Kuhn's Flora and Fauna" Award is I know not. Phil neglected to reveal this secret but rather enjoyed the supposed joke with a few of the informed of the audience. The awarded poem actually was written by a nine-year-old brother of one of Mr. Church's students as a spelling exercise. In short, the poem offered serious competition to all poets present.

Following Billy Bockfuss, Roy Heinz presented two love poems which asked what is love and what does the beloved offer through love. Love to Roy was the pain and pang on the other side of any human joy.

Rick Allan, with "When I Awoke," told of a recent unsuccessful operation he had undergone. After this poem, Rick read "Advice to a Prophet," a poem by Richard Wilbur (a modern professional poet). Richard Wilbur is a very good poet, it seems.

Following Rick was Debby Fries whose first poem "Blues for Hester," was admittedly checked full of so many obscure allusions that Debby had to explain it to the audience even before she read it. We were all glad for Debby's help. This poem might have been good, I don't know, I was too busy trying to remember the definitions of the allusions to pay much attention to anything else that Debby might have said. But at least I now have an increased repertoire of obscure allusions.

Sally Anderson read a French Poem. She explained that the reason she had a French poem published in the KVASIR was that she had written no English poems, and, in fact, only one French poem. It was offered for audio enjoyment.

Proving her skill in alliteration, Janet Kaufman read two poems "Woman in Mourning" and "Autumn." Kaufman captured curious connotations in carefully constructed clauses.

Phil Jones concluded the session with a plea for all to buy KVASIR, which is now on sale almost everywhere. Price $1.00 may be slightly higher in the bookstore).

Letters To The Editor

The letter to the editor by Dr. Doyle which was printed in last week's Juniatian left me with a feeling of disappointment which far exceeded the senior defeat on March 18.

I had a small part in the planning and production of the senior play and am proud to say so for two reasons. First of all, it was fun. There were some hectic and anxious moments, but most of all, it was fun. I felt no "malice of spirit," no delight in desecration and destruction. Perhaps her very accomplishments as a drama critic led Dr. Doyle to analyze more than was intended. The play was not deep, nor the symbolism far reaching. Though some of the characters were personalities we all know, the play was not a personal attack. It was simply the story of some college kids, harassed by a complex of regulations and its administrators, who found a way to escape to their own paradise where they would no longer hear "Never Never." To their horror the deans (the personification of regulation) also found a way into Never Never Land, but with the help of Tinkerbell were given a taste of "the good life." Rather than cart the kids back to the world of regulations, Hook and Smee are convinced that all should stay and let the kids in proclaiming, "We're free!" A large part of the play was fairytale. We would not want Juniatia to be without Deans, regulation, or even the good ol' "lunch line" (which was also satirized in the first scene.) The class effort and unity which results from All-Class Night competition is the most important reason why I am proud of my participation. I think this is true for most classes in most years. The close feeling of oneness, the unity of purpose, and the all enveloping atmosphere of excitement and dedication is the gift of All-Class Night to all who participate. Those who have never taken part in the competition have missed out on one of the best things Juniatia offers. Those who could not enjoy All-Class Night for what it was, really missed out on an enjoyable evening.

In closing I would again refer to Dr. Doyle's letter. In the last paragraph she said, "The marvelous dramatic talent shown in producing such a technically superior show as 1967's All-Class Night can be put to better use. . . I wonder if she was present at last year's All-Class Night? Does she remember which class dared to be different and for their efforts saw 'Herodius' rated as a very low third? We can no longer say 'We'll try again next year,' but I for one can look back on our efforts with pride.

"Free Press And Foreign Policy"

Topic Of Conference Attended By Kihl

What relation has the traditional American free press to the political determination and execution of foreign policy?

This was the major issue at the conference on the Free Press and Foreign Policy held recently at Penn State, at which Dr. Kihl, professor of political science here, was a delegate. The conference drew a wide variety of participants including newspaper editors, civic leaders and college professors.

We found Dr. Kihl's remarks on the conference to be extremely interesting and pertinent, partly in relation to recent Juniatia Focus series which featured Godfrey Spertling and Roger Hillsman.

Dr. Kihl described the conference as an attempt to define the relationship between the press in this country and the government officials who seem to control the source of information and to manage the flow of news in the field of foreign affairs. A spirited discussion ensued as both sides tried to rationalize their respective positions, always in the name of public interest. Dr. Kihl was impressed, however, that even though no startling conclusion was reached, the conference provided a useful forum through which a meaningful dialogue can be established among these groups.

Dr. Kihl said that initially the press harbored suspicion and even hostility toward the governmental practice of manipulation and managing the news on foreign affairs. For example, Robert Mosken of LOOK magazine supported his view by discussing his frustrating experience while covering the news in Vietnam and trying to gain access to the US secret bases in Thailand. The question arose as to where the line between freedom of the press and the national security should be drawn in the context of the war in Vietnam.

The governmental spokesmen at the conference defended their stand in directing the flow of news in the name of national interest and security. It was interesting, Dr. Kihl felt, to hear, for example, the former assistant defense secretary Arthur Sylvester explaining the situation in October, 1962 (over the Cuban missile crisis) when he was involved in the controversy over the so-called doctrine that "the government can lie to the public." Given the emergency situation at that time, his argument was quite understandable.

Dr. Kihl stressed that in the midst of much rationalization, it became obvious that neither the press nor the government has the monopoly over the public and the privilege to act as the guardian of the public interest. It is the job of the government to help the press, and of the press to get information to convey to the public.

The question therefore appears to be, according to Dr. Kihl, not whether hostility exists between the government and the press but rather, how to turn the potential conflict into a co-operative arrangement and a symbiotic relationship. It largely involves a smooth communication between the press and the government. In this sense the academic community, with its disinterested and impartial stand, helped the partisans to come to grips with the problem and to see the issues in a proper perspective.

However, Dr. Kihl suggested that the spirited debate still left a host of questions unsettled or dealt with in a least satisfactory manner. For example, just what is the role of the press and its responsibility as a participant in policy making? Who is to decide press content and where to draw the line between the freedom of the press and the exigency of national security and interest?

In Vietnam, for the first time in history, the press is transmitting the news of the actual combat engagement directly to the people through the television as a news media. What is the impact on the public as regards this fast, instantaneous reporting of the war?

Ultimately, Dr. Kihl asserted that it is also legitimate to raise this final question: contrary to the popular notion, isn't the American public exposed to the news excessively as far as the war is concerned?

the all enveloping atmosphere of excitement and dedication is the gift of All-Class Night to all who participate. Those who have never taken part in the competition have missed out on one of the best things Juniatia offers. Those who could not enjoy All-Class Night for what it was, really missed out on an enjoyable evening.

In closing I would again refer to Dr. Doyle's letter. In the last paragraph she said, "The marvelous dramatic talent shown in producing such a technically superior show as 1967's All-Class Night can be put to better use. . . I'll take this opportunity to extend a belated, but no less enthusiastic, welcome to Dr. Kaylor, the Student Government's new advisor. Dr. Kaylor is an extremely busy man, but Juniatia community, and I feel it is a compliment to the students that he is interested and willing to give his time and know-how to serve as their Student Government advisor.

New officers appointed by the Legislature are Jim Reber, treasurer, Laura Lingenfelter, executive secretary, and Sue Stober, publicity chairman.

The new Student Government no longer seems new, at least in the way the legislators take issues and problems and wrestle with them through all-out discussion. There is still a bit of tugging and pulling within the harness of parliamentary procedure, but even last year's Senate never quite mastered all the intricacies of the system.

One thing I have noticed about the new Student Government is that it seems a bit tight. One could argue that the budget of over $27,000 for the Student Government indicates that it is anything but tight. Perhaps the legislators are just being cautious with the funds.

Last Tuesday night's meeting dealt mainly with the proposed budget for the coming year. One large request concerned $1400 for WJC in order to rent a teletype machine. This would enable WJC to broadcast up-to-the-minute news. This involved a considerable amount of money and carried several implications of importance to the college community. Yet the manner in which the request was handled seemed very unsatisfactory.

The request for these funds was made by Chairman of Communications, Glenn Aston-Reese. From the beginning he made it clear that

'Round Campus

It seems that Miss Sincerity and her partner were overcome by the Shadow and her cohort during an undercover bridge game one night in Leshner's smoker. Miss Sincerity made a "sincere" bid of three, but the Shadow outsmarted her and took the lead so that she and her capable partner could take ten tricks to set Sincerity by seven. To anyone with any knowledge of bridge, this would be quite a victory.

A word of congratulations goes out to all fellow French and German students who were accepted to study at Strasburg or Marburg. After about a month and a half of waiting, word finally came. Now we busily begin packing, getting shots and making passport arrangements. Bon Voyage!

Spring is here, or at least just around the corner, as is evident by the number of students who have moved out into the good ole' fresh air. An even further indication of the recent rise in the mercury has been the steady stream of feminine forms one can spot eagerly heading for the notorious Oneida sun roof to get an early start on their tans.

Dr. Doyle's Oral Interpretation classes are continuing the Spring Reading Sessions in South Lounge every Thursday at 4 p.m. These programs offer a wide variety of works and are presented in the individual expressive styles of the students.

The Charlie Chaplin movies presented on Juniatia's campus last week seemed to be enjoyed by all—students and professors alike. The films were particularly enjoyed by the son of one of the professors as he squealed with delight at Charlie's humorous antics.

To those who were disappointed a second time by the failure of the Bishops Players to appear for their dramatic presentation, look on the bright side—an easy convo credit!

Tomorrow should prove to be an exciting day with three home sports events. The hard part is trying to decide which one to support. Good luck to all our tennis, baseball, and track athletes!

he opposed the request. This seemed surprising since, as chairman of communications, he would be responsible for advocating and securing improvements in the various campus communications. He did point out that he felt the radio programming could be improved by other means.

In addition to Aston-Reese's outspoken opposition to the request, there was no one present to represent WJC. Several legislators tried to present reasons for granting the funds, at least on a trial basis, but no one could carry a strong argument for the request.

A motion had been made to deny the request. In the middle of the following discussion, a legislator called for "the question." In effect, this is a call to vote immediately on the motion with no further discussion. The discussion was stopped. A vote was taken and the motion was carried, thus denying the funds to WJC. The entire discussion seemed to have been one-sided and the call for an immediate vote was unfortunate.

Jeff Pooler, newly appointed chairman of the Coffee House, presented a report concerning current Coffee House problems. He asked for Student Government support in finding suitable entertainment and providing publicity for Coffee House function, and by granting a small sum to help the Coffee House get back on its feet financially. The legislators granted him $25.00 and asked that he submit a report in four weeks.

The total Student Government budget was then discussed. It was accepted with minor changes.

A native of Manheim, Mrs. Shuler graduated from Juniata in 1956, and earned an M.L.S. from Carnegie Library School, Carnegie Institute of Technology. Having also joined the College staff in 1957, she presently holds the rank of assistant professor.

Dean Heberling assumed his position in 1957, following his service as director of treatment at the State Penitentiary at Rockview. He was a psychologist at the Pennsylvania Correctional Institution in Huntingdon from 1949 to 1953, and instructor in the community recreation program at State College (1947-49).

Beginning next fall, Dean Heberling will assume full time teaching duties in sociology and will, this summer, be in charge of Juniata's first Field School in Anthropology and Archaeology. The work will be conducted under the direction of the Penn State Field School at the Sheep Rock site on the Raystown Dam.

A native of State College, Dean Heberling received his B.A. and his M.S. from the Pennsylvania State University. He has taken graduate study in anthropology at the University of Colorado.

Recognition of Juniata personnel with 10 or more years of service began during the College's 75th anniversary in 1951. The list includes 29 present faculty and administrators, 30 former members, and 35 deceased.

Baseball Team Faces Two New Schools

JC's baseball team entertains Allegheny College for the first time in the 63 year history of the diamond sport tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 on Langdon Field.

Next week the Tribe has three contests, one away and two home. St. Francis will visit JC Monday at 3:00. Juniata has an 11-3 record against SF. On Wednesday the Indians travel to Delaware Valley. This is the first baseball game between the two schools. Then on Friday at 2:00, Indiana University of Pennsylvania brings a club which has lettermen back at every position from a team that posted a 16-5 record last year. IUP's strongest department is its pitching. Five lettermen are back at this position. In its series with IUP, Juniata leads 13-8.

The Tribe dropped their first contest of the season, 5-3, to Penn State. Freshman right-hander Gene Galbraith took the loss in relief. Then two days later Galbraith pitched a four-hitter as JC downed Shippensburg, 7-2.

On Monday the Indians dropped a contest to Albright 10-6 as Juniata pitching allowed 13 walks.

Tennis Squad Swepts Up IUP And S-burg

JC's tennis team swept their way over Indiana University of Pennsylvania and Shippensburg, downing both 9-0.

Tomorrow the Tribe faces G-burg at home. The Bullets have five returning lettermen, including last year's number one man, from a team which posted a 2-6 record. Rick Falk, a junior, will lead G-burg again. The other returning lettermen are: Jay Bortner, senior, Dave Green, junior, Elliott Stringham, junior, and Allen Strunk, junior. In their overall series record, JC is behind 1-4-2. Last year G-burg won 2-7.

Next Wednesday, JC battles Susquehanna at home. This will be the 31st meeting between the two schools with Juniata winning 18, 3 ended in a tie. Last year the Crusaders won 4-5.

The probable order of players for the Indians will have Larry Bieber, captain, in the number one spot. John Solis-Cohen, junior, Dave Newcomer, sophomore, Tom McAulay, freshman, Al White, sophomore, and John Katonah, senior, finish up the singles list.

Against Shippensburg, Bieber and Newcomer, Solis-Cohen and White, and Jay Patete and John Waite made up the doubles pairings.

Golf Team Travels To S-burg and JH

Next Tuesday afternoon, the Indian's golf team travels to Shippensburg. This will be the 11th meeting between the two schools with JC leading the series 6-4. Last year JC won 13½-4½.

Then next Wednesday JC travels to Johns Hopkins to meet G-burg and JH.

Against the Bullets last year JC won 10½-7½. In the school series JC leads 5-4. Last year G-burg's record was 5-5. They have six lettermen back: Steve Baksa, senior, Bob Britcher, junior, Roy Fairman, Junior Paul Haldeman, senior, Dale Heiges, senior, and Mike Mercer, junior.

Against JH last year JC won 15½-2½. In their overall record against JH, the Indians are down 9-10.

In their first meet of the year JC lost to Indiana University of Pennsylvania, 3½-14½. JC's Phil Thompson was high for the Tribe with 2½ points on a 78 score. Captain Russ MacIsaac scored the other point as he won the backnine.

Against Lebanon Valley JC won 16-2. All six of the Indian's golfers won their matches.

This past Tuesday JC split against Bucknell and Western Maryland. The Indians shut out WM 18-0 while losing to Bucknell 6½-11½.

The six JC golfers in their playing order are: Russ MacIsaac, Phil Thompson, Rick Gier, Den Stevens, Hank Hartman, and Dan David.

Randy Rolston scores in action from last season against Lock Haven. Rolston the third leading hitter on last year's team with a .357 average is an important part of JC's hitting attack this year.

Golf captain Russ MacIsaac shows the form which makes him JC's number one golfer.

Penn Starter Appointed As Assistant In Three Sports

Jerry Sandusky, football end for the Penn State Nittany Lions from 1963-65, was appointed assistant coach in three sports at Juniata College, it was announced today by Fred Prender, athletic director.

The former State griddler will be an assistant coach of football, replacing Bob Holmes, defensive coach for the past two years, who has resigned to assume added duties as coordinator of student activities; assistant basketball coach, replacing Pat Frazier, who resigned recently after piloting the Indian jayvees to four winning seasons; and assistant track coach.

Sandusky also will be an instructor in physical education. He will begin his duties Aug. 15 when he reports for pre-season football practice.

Prender, also head football coach at Juniata, referred to Sandusky as an "outstanding addition to our athletic department. We feel fortunate to have a man of his qualifications on our staff," he said.

A graduate assistant in the College of Health and Physical Education at Penn State, Sandusky assisted freshman football coach Earl Bruce during the 1966 season and has helped with varsity football spring training.

Recognized both scholarly and athletically, Sandusky was voted the outstanding senior male physical education major at Penn State and served as marshal for his college at commencement, an honor given to the top student in each college. He also was selected the outstanding senior (fall) athlete by the Varsity "S" Club.

At Penn State Sandusky was noted for being an over-achiever on and off the playing field. Despite his size (6:1, 195) he played regular end, mostly defensive, for the Nittany Lions, winning three football letters. His coaches have ranked him as "hard working, energetic and capable of gaining the respect of the players."

Jerry Sandusky

The new Juniata assistant coach was graduated from Washington (Pa.) High School where he won eight letters in football, basketball and baseball. He also was nominated for the Pennsylvania Big 33 football team.

Sandusky is a member of the Physical Education Graduate Student Association and the American Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. He has done youth and service work for the Neighborhood House Association in his hometown.

He is married to the former Dorothy Gross of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Track co-captain Bill Williams soars on the last leap of the triple jump. Williams has been a consistent point getter for JC.

Thinclads Lose First Meet To Lock Haven

Tomorrow JC's track team faces Shippensburg at 3:00 on College Field. This will be the 17th meeting between the two schools. The Indians have won only twice. Last year Juniata lost 37-108.

Next Tuesday Delaware Valley will visit College Field. This will be the first meeting in track between the two schools.

Last Saturday JC lost its opening track meet to Lock Haven, 41-104. Only three first place finishes were turned in by the Indians. Jim Nicolosi won the 120 high hurdles with a time of 16.5. Co-captain Bill Williams took two firsts and a second. Williams won the high jump (5'10½") and the triple jump (41'1½"). Other points for JC were scored by Rick Beard, mile (3rd) and two mile (3rd), Bill Weighley, 440 (2nd), John Stultz, 100 (2nd), Ken Mack, 880 (3rd), Don Barrett, 440 intermediate hurdles (2nd), Ken Mickelson, pole vault (2nd-tie), Ed Herrick, javelin (2nd), Bob Chandler, high jump (2nd), Bob Monti, shotput (3rd), Terry Burk, discus (3rd), and Eric Woodworth, triple jump (3rd).

Classics Club To Co-sponsor Lecturer Ridgway In Talk On "The Dolphin Rider"

A study of the dolphin as a decorative element in ancient art will highlight the meeting of the Central Pennsylvania Society of the Archaeological Institute of America, on campus, April 25. The lecture, The Dolphin Rider in Ancient Art by Mrs. Brunilde S. Ridgway at 8 p.m. in Alumni Hall, will be open to the public.

The Classics Club, Pi Delta Gamma, is sponsoring the lecture. According to Dr. Evelyn G. Guss, associate professor in the Department of Classics and advisor to the club, the lecture will include a discussion of the popularity of the dolphin as a "mount" and the various persons who are likely to be riding it. Mrs. Ridgway will refer to the decorative elements of vase painting, sculpture, terracottas, and jewelry.

Mrs. Ridgway, assistant professor at Bryn Mawr College in the department of classical and Near Eastern archaeology, is a naturalized American citizen. Born in Italy, she received the degree of Dottore in Lettere Classiche at the University of Messina, Italy. At Bryn Mawr she earned her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees. A recipient of Fulbright and other research grants from American Philosophical Society and the American Council of Learned Societies, she has published in several journals including American Journal of Archaeology and Hesperia.

Next year, Mrs. Ridgway will be a member of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J., where she will be working on a book on the Severe Style in Greek sculpture.

May Day To Allow JC Women To Be Queens For A Day

Attention all JC women who wish to be treated as queens for one glorious morning! You will be honored guests at the May Day Breakfast next Friday at 7 a.m. Oneida Dining Hall will become the inside of your castle to correspond with the theme, "Castles and Kilts." Women's House is sponsoring this event in your honor and has invited the members of the J Club to serve you.

Seven girls will be seated at each table with one guest, who will be one of the 200 invited women associated with the college.

The candidates for Prince Charming will escort Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Heberling, Mrs. Donald Rockwell, Mrs. Schoenherr, Dean Helms, Mrs. Fike, Edwina Smith, chairman of the May Day Breakfast, and Ruth Bartleson, president of Women's House.

Master of Ceremonies is Ed Rogers. Bill Brubaker, Bob McDowell, Paul Morse, and Dave Gould will provide entertainment as they have done for the past three years. The queen and her court will be announced and given charms.

The menu for the breakfast will consist of a fruit cup, Spanish Omelet, Canadian bacon, blueberry muffins, hot cross buns, and coffee or tea.

After the breakfast the girls will form a double line through which the May Queen and her court will walk to the steps of Founders Hall.

On the night before the breakfast a layout of tables will be posted on the bulletin board at the desk in each dormitory so that everyone will know where she will sit.

On Thursday the members of Women's House will decorate the dining hall.

Students To Participate In Reading Festival

Nine Juniata students have been selected to participate in the 19th Annual Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Reading Festival at Penn State University next Thursday and Friday.

Chosen on the basis of reading tryouts, the students will participate in the poetry and drama programs and competition at the two-day festival. All are members of a class in oral interpretation, taught by Dr. Esther Doyle, acting chairman of the English department.

Two of the selected readers are seniors: Ken Culbertson and Dave Gould. Tom Conrad, Prue Engle, Connie Glesner and Carolyn Peters are the juniors, and Carolyn Bugel and Jennifer Swigart are the sophomores who will be representing Juniata at the reading.

Comps Cop Concern Corner As Seniors Begin The End

Ed. Note: This is reprinted from April 22, 1966 issue of the Juniatian.

by Sandie Baer

Probably the greatest and most immediate concern of Juniata's seniors today is the upcoming comprehensive examinations. To the seniors, the exams have become the most obvious realities. Juniors are only slightly apprehensive—they have yet another year to wait. Sophomores and especially freshmen are only vaguely aware of them, and these students remain quite unconcerned. For them, other concerns take precedence, such as merely trying to stay here to eventually take the comprehensive.

For those who are not fully aware, the comprehensive exam was introduced at Juniata in 1934 when the use of such a procedure, particularly at the undergraduate level, was relatively rare. The comprehensive is being adopted presently by more and more schools. However, Juniata was among the first to recognize the value of such a procedure and to make use of it.

The comprehensive exam, or "comps," as we know it here, is generally encountered at the graduate level, but it has been adopted quite effectively and fits especially well in the liberal arts scheme.

As a whole, the comps consist of a two part written test totaling no more than seven hours, and a one-hour oral exam. It does represent a graduation requirement and, to be sure, is developed around a student's major. Eligibility to take the exam is determined by academic standing and by having attained the required competencies.

But just why do we have comps and what is the philosophy behind them? What practical purpose do they serve? The exam is hopefully designed to test the student's understanding of general principles and to encourage him to develop maturity of thought and aptness of judgment. It serves as an incentive to the student to bring together into an integrated and intelligible whole the knowledge acquired in the several courses of his principal field of study. They are not to be regarded as a magnified course examination or as any kind of a final hurdle set up to trip the senior just prior to graduation.

Attention is directed primarily to the student's exercise of critical judgement, his evaluation of knowledge and his manner of approach to problems. He must prove his command of inter-relationships of knowledge across departmental and divisional lines by his use of perspective, rather than by the mere recollecting of factual data. Little importance is placed on objective learning no matter how prodigious and amazing the memory of the student may prove to be. In a word, the examination is designed to prompt the student to inquire into the significance of what he has learned.

This practice, common especially at liberal arts institutions, has two purposes. In the first place it motivates the student to integrate the accumulated knowledge from all the areas of his study. Secondly it serves to weed out what one might call the memorizers and the knowers from the knowers and the thinkers.

Before considering how the seniors themselves view the idea of comps, it might be interesting to first look at an opinion expressed by a recent graduate, Robert Doyle, present director of financial aid at Juniata. As one who has had the experience of comps rather recently, he feels that, in spite of the fact that the exams tend to be over-rated and over-emphasized by all concerned with them, they have a basic good in that they serve several important functions. They function, he said, not only as effective checks for the individual student but also as checks for the departments of the college itself.

Since the results of these examinations can be compared with national norms the college can see if its operation is up to par, and in so doing provide an opportunity for improving the college's various departments. A few regard the exams as a necessary evil, a graduation requirement, another test to pass—or fail. Then there are those who insist that everybody passes anyway so why bother. (But does everybody pass anyway?) Others think that the sudden deluge of tests is just too overwhelming. But there are those who, even though quite terrified, are aware of the ultimate purpose of comps, a purpose which comes to represent the epitome of the liberal arts education.

One of these alert seniors has said that, even though they're rough and horrifying, they make one review his material, pick up the loose ends and tie everything together—these are all three divisions. This quite fully expresses the liberal arts ideal—the awareness and the appreciation of all aspects of knowledge.

Members of various clubs and organizations will transform Juniata's campus into a Spring Carnival beginning tomorrow at 8 p.m. and ending with a dance, featuring the

Focus Film Festival To Finish With Films of '30s, '40s And '60s

Juniata College's Focus series will round out its three-part Film Festival next Thursday and Friday with productions representing the thirties, early forties, and even the sixties. Next week's features (with sound) will provide the finishing touches for the Festival, which, in conjunction with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library in New York City, has intended to illustrate the history, development, and technique of American motion pictures.

The Grapes of Wrath (1940), a 123-minute production directed by John Ford, with Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, and John Carradine, will be presented in Oller Hall Thursday night at 8:15. "This brilliant and courageous achievement," notes the Film Library, "brought alive the essence of John Steinbeck's monumental epic of the Okie mass migration. Here, for the first time, millions of Americans saw their faces and their fate on the entertainment screen. No other film has so precisely captured the folkways and speech of a vast minority of Americans."

A 25-minute color presentation of the Rockefeller Foundation, Rice (1964), will also be presented Thursday evening. Made by Willard Van Dyke and Wheaton Galentine, Rice deals with the problem of the exploding population of the Asian Rice Bowl, its dependence upon neolithic-age agricultural methods, and the resultant widening gap between the supply of and demand for its staple food (rice).

In reference to Rice the Film Library comments, "The International Rice Research Institute, sponsored by the Rockefeller and Ford Foundations, is shown at work attempting to improve the fertility and cultivation of rice by scientific methods in time to reverse the inertia of millennia. Shot in the Philippines, Thailand, Nepal, Japan, and Bali, this sensitively developed film confronts its audiences with a human dilemma freighted with danger to everyone everywhere."

Friday night, Duck Soup (1933), a 70-minute film directed by Leo McCarey, will feature the Marx Brothers, who, according to the Film Library, "spoof patriotism itself in a gloriously irrational and profoundly American vein of lawless humor that respects nothing and light-heartedly probes human weakness to its depths."

A 38-minute film portrayal of the Russian ballerina Anna Pavlova will also be presented Friday evening. Only recently coming to light after having been presumed lost or destroyed, The Immortal Swan, directed by Edward Nakhimov, was assembled in 1935 four years after Pavlova's death, by Victor Dandine, her husband and manager. In addition to the sequences of Pavlova dancing, there are scenes of her relaxing and strolling in the garden at Ivy House, and a fragment in which she is heard talking to her pet swans.

A reviewer, writing in 1936 in the British publication Life and Letters Today, said of The Immortal Swan: "In slow motion one sees, more than has previously been possible, not only the unbroken flow of her dance, but the confirmation of one's impression of that fluidity. . . I am grateful to think that there is preserved, and that M. Dandine has allowed us to see, so restrained and rewarding a record of the life and work of Pavlova the undying."

161 Grads Honor JC By Receiving Ph.D. Degrees

William Alexander, instructor in the department of economics and business administration, has conducted study of Juniata graduates receiving the Ph.D. degree. The most recent data is found in the National Academy of Sciences' Doctorate Production in United States Universities 1920-1961.

A total of 161 JC graduates have received the Ph.D. degree between 1920 and 1961. Twenty graduates have received degrees in the Arts. This represents 12.4 percent of all doctorates received by JC graduates and 15.3 per cent of all the doctorates received in the U.S. in this field. Of JC graduates receiving doctorates 14.3 per cent received their degrees in the social sciences. These 23 alumni represent 20.4 per cent of the awarded degrees in this field. Fifteen and four-tenths per cent of JC doctorates in education were earned by 40 graduates, who consist of 24.8 per cent of JC's graduates.

The physical sciences have produced 64 graduates receiving doctorates. This 39.7 per cent of all graduates represents 30.4 per cent of the degrees earned in the physical sciences in the U.S. Fourteen alumni have received their Ph.D. degrees in the biological sciences. They represent 8.5 per cent of the degrees received by JC graduates and 18.5 per cent of all doctorates awarded in this field.

"After Six," on 18th Street from 10 p.m. until midnight.

The lawn between Totem Inn and Students Hall will be the location of a wide variety of entertainment in the form of booths sponsored by campus organizations. Several booths already planned are dunk-the-prof (Class of '70), frisbee throw (JBSF), softball throw (J Club), five-minute chess games (Chess Club), ping pong blow (JCF), and blood typing (Scalpel and Probe). Other clubs having booths are the Judo Club, Outing Club, International Cultural Relations Club, and Barrister Club. In the event of rain, the carnival will be held in Memorial Gym.

There will be a five-cent charge made for each turn at the booths, and tickets will be on sale at the ticket booth on the carnival grounds. Door prizes donated by the merchants of Huntingdon will be awarded throughout the evening. While students are testing their skills at the various booths, Frank Petho and his "Huntingdon Hot Shots" will add to the overall carnival atmosphere by providing appropriate music.

Don Hoover is chairman of the Student Government classes and clubs committee, the organization sponsoring the event. Other students and their responsibilities are Cheryl Bantz and Barbara Brogan, organization; Dona Detwiler and Joan Edwards, prizes; Peggy Berkble, Ann Soltenberger, and Nancy Stover, publicity; and Carl Pote and Regis Beighley, door prizes (for College students only).

Soc. Dept. Adds Research Course, Statistics Course

In keeping with the trend of the social sciences to become more empirically oriented, Juniata's department of sociology is working on additional changes and innovations in its curriculum, particularly the introduction of a course in research methods and a required course in statistics.

According to Dr. Duane Stroman, chairman of the department, increasing student interest in social affairs and social problems in our society has been reflected here at JC in the growing popularity of sociology as a major or in the more frequent choices of sociology courses as collateral course work. The number of sociology majors has doubled in four years, from 40 in 1963, to 84 in 1967. While the college student population has grown 25 percent, the number of sociology majors has increased 110 percent. In 1963-64, a total of 387 students took at least one sociology course, but this year (1966-67) the number increased to 840.

Five years ago sociology was essentially a one-man department with a limited range of course study. Next year, however, the department will have four full-time faculty members: Dr. Stroman, Dr. Helen Meahl and Paul Heberling, associate professors, and Joseph Veneral instructor.

In addition to an enlarged staff, the general scope of the sociology department has been extended by the introduction of six new courses and the regular scheduling of courses which before were only offered periodically. One of the new courses offered to sociology majors is Special Topics, a seminar approach to a particular subject which the class investigates in depth. Introduced two years ago with a seminar on Appalachia taught by Dr. Stroman, the course has since studied the sociology of education and next year will offer a course in family functioning.

Other new courses introduced during the past five years, which bring the total curriculum to 17 courses, include Racial and Cultural Minorities, History of Social Thought, Social Stratification, and Physical Anthropology.

Students entering as sociology majors are now advised to set up curricular programs suited to their particular occupational goals. Students planning to do personnel work, for example, are counseled to take a number of courses in economics. Those going on to graduate school are advised to become acquainted with methods and principles, social theory, and other more specialized courses related to their particular interests.

Letters To The Editor

Ed. Note: In the interest of The Juniata we wish to correct a certain misunderstanding that exists on campus. A by-lined Comment is the only resource accessible by Staff members who wish to publish their personal opinions. In short, the by-lined Comment is to the Staff as the "Letter to the Editors" is to the reading audience. The only personal opinion which The Juniata as a publication endorses is the un-by-lined Editorial written by the Editor-in-Chief or a designated member of the Editorial Staff. A by-lined comment is the personal opinion of the Staff member who wrote and is not the opinion of The Juniata.

Personal Comment Or Competency?

To the Editor:
It is surely a double-blow to journalism at Juniata College that a person of Mr. Kensington's academic caliber has to prostitute both himself and the newspaper in the obviously personal attack against Kvasir. His approach was shallow, both literarily and journalistically. There was no attempt on his part to discover the motives and goals of the Kvasir reading. He did not employ objective criticism to the poetry and then draw his conclusions. (I find this typical of Mr. Kensington's efforts in the past. His articles of a year ago on the Kvasir charter and the student picketing of the science complex dedication showed the same symptoms. In both of these instances, he made no effort to discuss the matters with the students involved. There was no apparent effort to examine motives and intents. In both cases the result was a reactionary stand that had nothing to do with the real issues at stake.) Thus Mr. Kensington is a poor journalist indeed—in the sense of being one interested in and willing to dig for all the facts involved in a particular area of student unrest or student endeavor.

I feel the reason for this is a sense of haughtiness generated solely by his position on the newspaper staff. It could not come from an accepted status of literary critic. For who but the most brilliant critics write off new poets with a few rich phrases and pseudo-amusing clichés? I demand a written statement by Mr. Kensington explaining why he was so base in approach and explaining exactly what he was trying to prove. His article proved, at best, to be a direct slap in the face to all those who participated in the reading. Is this all he was trying to do in the first place? If it is, a statement of reasons is in order.

I think it would benefit the campus as a whole if the air was cleared on this matter. The anti-intellectual, "teeny-bopper" atmosphere on this campus is coming along fine without Mr. Kensington's hackneyed, invective-filled diatribe. His article was personal—directed more against the people involved than the works presented. I doubt if this tactic would be even accepted by a high school paper for publication. I thought the Juniata could tell the difference between trashy journalism and competence. I guess it can't.

Creative Outlet And Expression

To the Editor:
The importance of Kvasir in the Juniata community is too great to be as poorly represented as it was in last week's poetry reading review by Richard D. Kensington. Kvasir serves a portion of the student body for which there is virtually no other outlet. This in itself gives it value. But it does not exist merely as a container for student creativity. It serves to initiate and stimulate student awareness of and involvement in creative expression.

Last week's student poetry reading was another in a series of poetry programs Kvasir has sponsored this year. The fact that it presented Juniata students reading their own poetry made this program particularly significant. It served to credit and encourage the creative talents of Juniata students. It also gave students and faculty an opportunity to meet the Kvasir contributors and hear more of their poetry. Such recognition and appreciation is valuable in furthering the creative efforts of the students.

This year's edition of Kvasir is also significant. For the first time in its short history Kvasir includes art and photography as well as poetry and fiction. These additions not only enhance the design and appearance of the magazine, but they also increase the range of student creativity presented through it. Contributions to Kvasir come from members of all four classes, a further indication of the interest and talent to be found on campus. Kvasir's value to at least a segment of the campus community cannot be ignored or denied.

Who Is Blind?

To the Editor:
Concerning the remarks made in last week's Juniata ("Someone Must Be Blind") about the Senate's action on the WJC request, I would like to present a few points which I feel the student body should be aware of.

First, WJC received an excessively large amount of money last year ($2750) for the purchase of equipment with the promise that their budget would be lower this year. Instead they fell short of last year's request by less than a hundred dollars. Since last year's allocation was made under these special circumstances, the fifty per cent decrease you mentioned hardly seems significant.

Second, it should be understood that the $1400 in question covered rental fees only. This sum would have to be granted yearly to retain the use of the machine.

Third, as was mentioned, WJC was indeed poorly represented. If we were so interested in securing this money, why wasn't someone there to fight for it? The Chairman of Communications was elected to make improvements and recommendations in this area, not to support every proposed purchase. If he felt the teletype would not be worth its cost, he may disagree with some people, but there is certainly nothing "strange" about it.

But most important, the newspaper had an obvious interest in this machine. You mentioned it would be "an implement for broader kinds of coverage by the Juniata." Why weren't you present at the Senate meeting when this was discussed? Why didn't you make that statement then instead of after the decision was made? This was something important. And yet it was a onesided discussion until after the vote was cast. Why did you wait till now? It isn't to see why.

Someone wasn't looking.

Patrick E. Miller

Practical Benefit, Not Frivolity

To the Editor:
I should like to take this opportunity to thank the editor of The Juniata for his concern expressed in last week's editorial statement in favor of the teletype for WJC. As manager of the station I can truly say that about 90 percent of those students I confronted with the idea of a news service seemed highly enthusiastic, with dissension seen in only a few isolated corners.

There are a few areas in your statement, however, which bear some comment, for they might at first appear slightly confusing to your average reader.

First of all, your statement that our budget was cut by over 50 percent, leading, our budget was submitted to Mr. Glenn Aston-Reese, Chairman of Communications; and it was at his suggestion that we included everything that we felt would be of assistance to us next year in our program efforts. At no time did we expect to receive the entire sum of $3800 requested. When I presented Mr. Aston-Reese with the completed product (hailed by some as "one of the most humorous budgets of 1967"), I informed him that I had complied with his request. The items which I felt would be most beneficial were listed at the beginning. The teletype request was first.

When originally handed the idea of a teletype, Mr. Aston-Reese was highly enthusiastic stating that he saw no reason why the request might be denied. His enthusiasm dwindled considerably, however, after he had talked with Mr. James Reber, appointed recently by President Jim Hamilton to fill the position of Senate Treasurer. Mr. Reber from the beginning clearly showed negative attitudes toward the actual value of a news service. Apparently, a teletype more weight than Mr. Aston-Reese. Mr. Reber managed to persuade the former gentleman to deny the real necessity of a news service on this campus. It is at best disappointing and disillusioning to see an elected official such as Mr. Aston-Reese swayed this easily, especially by one who is only appointed to his office. Mr. Reber told me that a teletype was not worth the $1400 investment and offered to call in an impartial student to give his views on the matter. This he did. The impartial student, a senior here at Juniata, agreed that the $1,400 was a good deal of money, but that under the circumstances and considering the isolation of the average college student from up-to-date news media that the money could be well spent on the investment.

Mr. Reber, however, was strangely unimpressed. I suggested to him the possibilities of trying the service for just one semester at a cost of $700. But Mr. Reber didn't like this idea very well either. It was at this point that Mr. Reber suggested that we try a newspaper recopying news from the wire. When it became necessary for me to point out that the news would be at least one day old and that the task of rewriting news from a major city newspaper was somewhat less than a labor of delight, Mr. Reber informed me that it was better that way. I told him, "Not much." I further informed him that obtaining a competent staff willing to put in the necessary time to complete this task was impossible. As I now understand it Mr. Reber and Mr. Hamilton eliminated the teletype as being (if I may quote Mr. Reber) one of "the frivolities" on our budget.

Second, as is pointed out in your editorial, the teletype could have benefited the Juniata greatly, providing the newspaper with actual reporting from the important news fronts of the world. It would have allowed considerably more editorializing and "news-and-viewings" than is presently possible. But of necessity (as the service provided would be a "radio" line as opposed to a "news" paper) line) the teletype would have had to come out of WJC's budget, and it was therefore necessary that WJC alone had to carry out the fight for the unit.

All this brings me to my third point, one mentioned by Miss Prue Engle in her Senate News column. WJC was very poorly represented at the Senate meeting on the night of the discussion. This was due to a series of unavoidable conflicts including impending examinations and mandatory meetings elsewhere by members of the radio station staff. It was this series of conflicts which permitted WJC to produce only one member of its staff at the Senate meeting, and regrettably he arrived there too late to do any good (i. e. after the voting had occurred). Unfortunately this was our dilemma, and it may explain to some students why we were not present in force at this meeting.

In closing I should like to point out that it seems somewhat ridiculous to me that the Senate feels it is more worthwhile to spend (on "big-name entertainment") in an hour and a half almost three times our request of $1400 for a teletype. It would appear that the Senate is confusing student enjoyment with student benefit, two entirely different subjects. But the decision has been made, and to the victors belong the spoils. I hope the victors enjoy these spoils quite well. It is their choice, and we must go along with their decision. But I hope that they remember when they learn a week after it has happened that there has been an East Coast power black-out, or that a new Alaskan earthquake has occurred, or even that New Jersey has managed to sink itself into the sea leaving perhaps only Hoboken high and dry watching other cities around it gargling salt water (this may be a bit strong, but I think you get my point), I hope that then they will at least say to themselves, "Sure, but we got to spend. The Four Tops anyway." This last diatribe is not in any way meant as a cut at the Social Activities Committee. Entertainment certainly is important in that it provides us all with escape from our problems for a while. Further the money for a teletype could have come out of any of several other sources. But still it remains somewhat strange and horrifying to me to see what some of our leaders feel is important.

If WJC manages to raise $1400 through advertising for next year we shall install the news service. If not Juniata students will remain "news poor."

Terry Wickham,
Station Manager, WJC

On Support

To the Editor:
May I address the creator of last week's editorial "Someone Must Be Blind"? Why is it strange that the Chairman of Communications did not defend WJC's request for $1,400 for lease and installation of a teletype?

Someone must be blind! As chairman of communications on the student government, I am not only spokesman for communications, but also a representative for the students.

As representative for the student body I must make sure that their senate money is spent wisely, but as spokesman for communications I must attempt to obtain money which is needed for improvements in the area of communications.

Certainly the teletype would improve WJC, but do these improvements warrant the immediate outlay of $1,400 with the present financial situation facing us. The senate must be careful about how it spends its money.

Before Easter WJC submitted their budget for next year. The total came to about $3,800.

Of course the radio station could use more money, but the amount that they did obtain was felt to be adequate. They can now purchase an FM tuner which would permit WJC to pick up a station from Pittsburgh and broadcast 24 hours a day. They have money to cover the expenses of broadcasting five away basketball games, to purchase test equipment, to purchase a record library and an emergency transmitter plus a few miscellaneous items. It was felt that these things were needed more than a teletype.

The question of spending an additional $1,400 on the teletype was raised and considered. However, this would mean cutting down on other spots, like the social committee, Alfarata or Jumbie. This could have been done, but how many students would benefit directly from the teletype as compared to the number that benefit from the money spent by the social committee, Juniata and Alfarata? It is my feeling that fewer students would be affected by a $1,400 teletype than by a $1,400 cut in the other areas mentioned.

In light of this I did not feel that it was so strange for me to deny my support to WJC's request for an additional $1,400 to rent a teletype.

Currently the radio station is attempting to make a survey of how much money they could raise by selling newscasts to local businesses. This would mean that they would pay part of the $1,400. This was proposed before, but no action was taken by WJC to find out how much money they could raise. (And it was important that the senate know this.)

As Chairman of Communications I pledge my support in WJC's efforts to find out how much money they can raise. I am not against the idea of a teletype, but against spending $1,400 on a teletype considering the present financial situation of the senate.

Glenn Aston-Reese
Chairman of Communications

Objections Invalid

To the Editor:
Radio station WJC is owned and operated by students of Juniata College as a source of information and entertainment above and beyond the classroom. These words preface every broadcast made by WJC; the station acknowledges its responsibility to provide both entertainment and information.

While the station has seldom been criticized on its entertainment value, many students are vocal in their dissatisfaction with WJC's information program. Frankly, they are altogether correct in their criticisms of this area. In spite of all emotional cries to the contrary, Juniata students are poorly informed on national and international events, to say nothing of campus news. It is precisely this problem that radio is best able to solve, and it is precisely this problem that WJC is being denied the opportunity to resolve.

Obviously I refer to the rental of a teletype; just as obviously I support this expenditure. Granted the need for better news coverage of all types on campus, and given the ability of radio to supply the immediate coverage necessary in our fast changing world, the rental of a teletype seems to me to be not frivolous but actually necessary.

Objections seem to fall into three main classes: objections to the need for further news coverage, objections to the amount of money needed, and objections to the idea that the only way to provide news coverage is through a wire service. The first is only ridiculous, ask any Juniata student about a recent happening and if the answer isn't completely incorrect, it will undoubtedly be partially so. The idea that $1,400 is too high just won't stand up. In a student body of only a thousand students that comes to less than a dollar and a half per student per year. As far as I'm concerned that's the best bargain will be offered for a long time. I'm sure that WJC is open to suggestions for an alternate supply of raw news, but the sources that I can think of are highly inadequate. Newspapers, since they deal mainly in background and are hardly immediate, are obviously not satisfactory.

It seems strange, to me at least, that a program such as this with its high potential and low per capita cost cannot at least be given a trial.

Larry N. Osborne

Educational Value Warrants Try

To the Editor:
The question of a teletype for WJC is one of great importance for students interested in being well informed. Whether we like it or not, the majority of students at Juniata neither read daily newspapers nor listen to radio newscasts. WJC is the natural answer to the news gap which exists for most students. The news gap is so bad that often when I go home on vacation I'm amazed at what has happened that I haven't heard about. While I don't read newspapers and rarely read magazines, like most students I do listen to WJC and I would certainly appreciate absorbing some news along with the music.

While it is true that the teletype would be relatively expensive, the cost per student for the entire year figures to less than a monthly subscription to a newspaper. This would be well worth the convenience of having the services of a modern wire service as a part of our campus communications. In addition the teletype would aid not only the radio station but also other Juniata communications media. At the same time it would provide invaluable experience in news editing and analysis to those involved, which, after all, is one of the station's primary functions. Both as a news service and as a training device, the teletype would be educational in every sense of the word. It certainly deserves a try.

William Phillips

Only $1.50 To Be Better Informed

To the Editor:

There has been some discussion lately about the need of a teletype for WJC. A few flimsy arguments have been presented against the rental of the teletype but arguments supporting it are much stronger.

It's quite evident that a vast majority of the students at Juniata are very poorly informed about national and international affairs. Major world crises have past before students have become aware of them.

A teletype would greatly aid in informing JC students about happenings when they happen, not a week afterwards. It would increase the number of people who would be working at WJC. Besides just having recorded music all day long with a single person doing all the work it would give people who are not interested in actual broadcasting a chance to gain experience in communications work.

WJC would not benefit alone; I can't see why the Juniata itself wouldn't be able to draw from its news reports and thus present world affairs to the students on a weekly scale.

The cost per person would not be that great. The teletype is supposed to cost about $1,400 per year. This is only a $1.50 per student which is considerably less than a daily newspaper would cost for the same amount of time.

I am entirely in favor of WJC receiving a teletype and feel that money should be appropriated so it can be put in next fall.

Ignorance Is Strength?

To the Editor:

"Ignorance is strength" seems to be on the lips of students as well as Senate members who did not back the teletype for WJC. The most disappointing part about this whole situation lies in the fact that the majority of the campus is in favor of being informed.

The teletype would cost the students $1,400, less than three percent of the total budget; a small price for an invaluable service. It seems strange that many other organizations had increases in their budgets, while WJC lost over $1,000 from last year.

Actually it is not so unusual when you consider how WJC was represented during the Senate meeting. It is true that very few members of the staff attended the Senate meeting, but WJC's budget was supposed to be supported by the chairman of communications. This support never appeared; it is doubtful if the chairman was concerned enough to discuss even the possibility of having a teletype.

The students want to be aware of the news, sports, and weather, but at the moment there is a very slim chance that this will happen unless some drastic actions are taken. The Senate is supposed to represent the students, so where's the teletype?

For a pleasant after dinner relaxation period on Thursday, why not drop over to South Lounge for a chat with Mr. and Mrs. Dolnikowski. This get-together will take place at 6:45 p.m. immediately following dinner, and is a project of Women's House. All are welcomed.

Sophomores are reminded not to forget the big banquet next Friday. Check table numbers on the list on Tote bulletin board. From the sound of the plans that have leaked out thus far, it should be quite a shindig.

Be a part of the village atmosphere and see the new entertainment being featured at the Coffee House weekly from 7:55 to 10:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday, and from 7:55 p.m. to midnight on Saturday. Tonight's special attraction will be a poetry reading by Prof. Church. Come one, come all!

More films are in line as part of the Focus on Art and Life Series. Some very fascinating ones have been shown thus far and those of this week promise equally fine entertainment. "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Rice" will be presented Thursday in Oller with "Deck Soap" and the "Immortal Swan" following on Friday. Who's complaining about having nothing to do?

No one will want to miss the excitement of JC's annual Spring Carnival tomorrow with all its colorful booths, decorations, and games. If you're in the vicinity of Tote Lawn around 7 p.m., why not try your luck at a few events? If that's not exciting enough for you, stick around for the dance in Women's Gym at 9 p.m. Wherever the "After Six" goes, there's always excitement.

There is still time remaining to take advantage of the opportunity to see the Prints by Great Masters on exhibition in Shoemaker Galleries until May 4. The works in this collection have been selected from the resources of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Real live Rembrandts!

Juniata students had the thrill of hearing the accomplishments of Dr. Thomas Richner twice this week — which was indeed a privilege. Dr. Richner's piano concert Tuesday evening met with so much response that there was an almost capacity crowd in Oller for his organ recital during Wednesday's Convo. That was the most enjoyable convo credit many of us ever received.

In case you happen to notice a strange decrease in the student population on campus, have no fear. It's due to the fact that all the seniors have taken to their rooms in busy (?) preparation for written comps on Monday. Good luck to all you seniors and look on the bright side - After Monday you'll only have Orals and finals to go.

"Kastles and Kilts" will be the theme of this year's May Day Breakfast which promises a good time to all those girls attending. In the royal atmosphere of a Scottish castle, this year's May Day Queen and her court will be announced along with her Prince Charming. The doors will open at 6:45 a.m. next Friday to a delicious breakfast served by handsome Scottish Laddies. This alone should be enough to get all you lassies up and at 'em!

Three Nigerian students who are studying at the University of Pittsburgh for Masters degrees in Library Science, guests of Rev. Clarence Roemer, will be available to students for discussions with students in Stone Church Sunday morning at 9:30 in the Fellowship Hall. They are Mwajim K. Garrawa, and Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Jacobs.

Prue's Views

... on SG News

This week's Student Government meeting was a hodge-podge of reports, requests, demands and considerations, with a few humorous though exasperating situations mixed in to keep things lively.

A week too late, yet still not completely defeated, representatives from WJC asked the Legislature to reconsider their request for the teletype. All advocates of the teletype, both representatives from WJC and legislators, stressed the importance of the teletype for the entire college community. As one student said, the money would be used "to buy a service, not merely a piece of equipment." The fact that the budget has already been turned in to Mr. Fike and that the budget may even be cut, necessitated denying WJC's request. However, members of the WJC staff are still going ahead with plans to try to raise at least part of the necessary funds through advertisements.

Jeff Cawley, representing the Forensic Society, also asked the reasons for the slash in budget this club received. The answer was the answer to why this Legislature seems tight in comparison with the last Senate: the new Legislature is trying to establish a set policy regarding the granting of funds to campus clubs. The last Senate felt that money was granted too freely and advised the new Legislature to be more discerning and careful with the money.

Motions were passed to establish an Education Committee to handle academic problems and concerns of the students, and to re-establish the rather dormant Totem Inn Committee. Students interested in working on either of these committees should contact Jim Hamilton, Linda Romington, or Mike Eisenhour. One stipulation of the Education Committee is that members be from either the junior or senior class.

Richard Sackett reported on his committee's investigation into library procedures. He reported that the greatest factors affecting student library conditions are that students do not take full advantage of available facilities and that the library has become too much of a social center. Some students have advocated extending the library hours but this involves an expansion of the staff which must be approved by President Ellis and the Board of Trustees and involves more money.

The library is now open for 70 hours each week. Since money is allotted to areas of greatest need, it is felt that an increase in library hours is a minor issue when judged in relation to the needs of other departments. It was also noted that at other schools where the library remained open later in the evening, students did not begin studying until later.

Glen Aston-Reese, chairman of communications, presented the names of three students recommended for executive positions on campus communications. The Legislature approved Anne Kent as editor of the Alfarata, Richard Kensing as editor-in-chief of the Juniatian, and Terry Wickham as station manager of WJC.

With many motions made during the meeting, I noticed a surprising number of abstentions from voting. Since the majority of motions required merely a yes or no decision, this amount of abstention bothers me. If the legislators feel that they cannot vote on certain issues because they are unsure of the feelings of the students they are supposed to be representing, then something must be done to insure that students are made aware of issues coming to the Student Government. They must then be responsible for seeing that their representatives know their feelings.

If, on the other hand, the abstaining legislators simply cannot make a decision, then I think they are wasting their time as well as the students'. The Legislature was set up giving all members equal privileges. The right to vote is the heart of the Legislature's ability to make policy decisions. Realizing that some issues may arise about which certain legislators cannot make objective decisions, too frequent abstentions will only weaken the legislators' ability to make important decisions and undermine the inherent power of the Student Government.

Baseball Team Loses Away, Beats Gators

by Denny Shank
On Thursday, April 13, the Indians traveled to Dickinson where they found themselves on the short end of a 2-0 score. Jim Sutton gave up six hits, two earned runs, and five walks to take the loss for Juniata, while going the full nine innings. The Indians collected three hits: a double by Horner, and singles by Sheppard and Reed.

In a high scoring contest on Saturday, coach Russ Trimer's Indian hitters drummed five Allegheny pitchers for fourteen runs. Two freshmen handled the pitching duties for Juniata, giving up six runs. Gene Galbraith hurled the first five innings, then he was relieved by Tom Diehl, who turned in a good relief performance for the last four innings. Galbraith was awarded the victory which brought his record to 2-1.

Monday's game with St. Francis was postponed because of rain and was not rescheduled.

Linksmen Win In Sudden Death

JC's golf team travels to E-town next Tuesday. This will be the second meeting between the two schools. Last year the Tribe won 16-2.

The Blue Jays have three lettermen back from a 4-5 season. Holding down the number one spot for the second year is junior Gary Penn. Gerald Rhoads, junior, held the number three spot last year. The third letterwinner is Tom Hindle, a junior.

Last week Junior avenged one of their three losses from last year with a thrilling 10-9 victory over Dickinson. The match ended 9-9 after the six pairs had finished the 18 hole course. The number one men from each team had a sudden death playoff for one point and a team victory.

JC's captain Russ MacIsaac birdied the first hole to give the Tribe the victory, 10-9. MacIsaac beat Steve Hopper last year's MAC champ.

In the regular match, Hopper defeated MacIsaac, 2-1; John Zimmerman (D) beat Phil Thompson (JC), 2-1; Rick Geig (JC) beat Robin Tula Ferro (D), 3-0; Steve (JC) beat Tom Domstodk (D), 2-1; Hank Hartman (JC) beat Reese Llewellyn (D), 2-1; and Harry Calcutt (D) beat Bob Vanyo (JC), 3-0.

Juniata's tennis squad travels to E-town tomorrow afternoon. In the series between the two schools dating back to 1929, JC leads 30-12-2. Last year the Tribe won 9-0.

Last week against Dickinson, the Indians won three singles and two double matches to capture a 5-4 victory.

In singles Larry Bieber (JC) lost to Greg Abelin (D), (2-6, 5-7); John Solis-Cohen (JC) beat Dick Hollinshead (D), (6-4, 4-0); Sam Cupp (D) beat Tom McAulay (JC), (11-9, 3-6, 4-6); Don Yotzler (D) beat Dave Newcomer (JC), (1-6, 8-6, 3-6); Al White (JC) beat Paul Kaplan (D), (6-4, 6-4); Jay Patete (JC) beat Clint McClintock (D), (6-3, 6-2).

In doubles Bieber and Newcomer combined to down Abelin and Kaplan, (6-1, 7-5); Solis-Cohen and White lost to Hollinshead and Cupp, (3-6, 5-7); and McAulay and Patete beat Yotzler and McClintock, (6-1, 6-4).

JC wound up on the short end of the score in a hard fought match last Saturday against Gettysburg. The final score was 4-5 with the Tribe winning two out of six singles and two of the three doubles.

In singles Bieber (JC) lost to Rick Falk (G), (6-8, 2-6); Solis-Cohen (JC) lost to Elliott Stringham (G), (6-4, 3-6, 1-6); McAulay (JC) beat Dave Green (G), (7-5, 6-4); Newcomer (JC) lost to John Runne (G), (4-6, 5-7); White (JC) beat Jay Bortner (G), (6-4, 4-6, 6-1); and John Katonah (JC) lost to Al Strunk (G), (6-3, 2-6, 1-6).

In doubles Bieber and Newcomer beat Falk and Green, (6-4, 6-4); Solis-Cohen and White lost to Stringham and Bortner, (6-3, 4-6, 6-8); and McAulay and Patete beat Runne and Strunk, (6-4, 6-4).

Spotlight On IM's

The Spastics, led by Tom Beam, Toby Dills, Ron Duncan, and Larry Beiber, posted a perfect, 10-0, record to win the men's volleyball championship. The Headless Horsemen (9-1) were second and the Castaways (7-3) were third. The rest of the teams failed to turn in the results of their games.

IM softball starts Monday. In the American League, the team to beat is Leudie's Gang, led by pitcher Clair Kenyon and last year's champions. The Bad Attitudes will also offer tough competition with John Bauer pitching. In the National League, the Bat Men, a sophomore team, and Smokey and the Miracles, a junior team, are the teams to beat.

Chess Team Plays In Phila. Tourney, To Visit Penn State

The Juniata College Chess Team participated in the Pennsylvania Collegiate Team Tournament held April 8-9 in Philadelphia. The tournament was won by the University of Pennsylvania, the host team, with a perfect 5-0 record.

The Juniata team finished fifth in competition, defeating Bloomsburg by a score of 3-2. The team made a very good showing against such highly ranked teams as Penn State and the University of Pennsylvania.

Representing the team in tournament play were Allan Burkett, Paul and Clark Lantz. Scoring two points Shaffer, Darwin Kenep, Dave Crider apiece for the JC team were Burkett, Shaffer, and Crider. Kenep scored one victory.

This weekend the team will go to Penn State for the Eastern individual-Team Tournament.

Track Team Wins 1st, In Tri-meet Tomorrow

A tri-meet at PMC is on the agenda tomorrow for JC's track team. In addition to JC and PMC, Lebanon Valley will participate.

PMC, defending MAC college division champs for the past two years, will offer the stiffest competition. Previously JC has defeated PMC five times while losing four.

In the tri-meet last year, PMC beat the Tritons 47 1/2-69, while Juniata defeated LVC 47 1/2-45 1/2.

Against LVC, the Indians are leading the series 6-3.

Last year the Flying Dutchmen were 7-5. Losing only two lettermen, LVC had strong hopes on their ten returning lettermen. As of last Saturday they had won three and lost two.

Included in the ten returning lettermen are four who hold track records for LVC. Co-captain Larry Painter is the 880 yard run record holder; Glen Horst holds the record in pole vaulting at 13' 1 1/2"; Michael Kamuyu and Larry Light are co-holders of the high jump record at 6' 1/2".

St. Francis visits Juniata for the first meeting in track between the two schools next Tuesday at 3:00.

Next Thursday Dickinson visits JC for a meet starting at 3:00. Last year's meet with the Redmen was cancelled because of rain.

Dickinson has twelve lettermen returning: Dave Ainley, mile, 2-mile; Bob Feld, javelin; Rick Jacobs, shot; Peter Jacobson, 100, 220; Bob Jefferson, 220, 440 relay; Bob Martin, 120 HH, 440 Int; Dan Reger, 120 HH, 160; Chuck Smith, 440, 880, mile relay; and Brooks Warner, pole vault. Juniata lost to Shippensburg last Saturday, 66-79.

JC took six firsts with co-captain Bill Williams getting two, one in the triple jump and the other in the high jump. Terry Burk took a first in the 440. JC won the mile relay (Burger, Paulhamus, Mack, Weighly) and the 440 relay (Davenport, Barn-dollar, Weighly, Stultz).

Getting seconds for JC were Rick Beard, mile and 2-mile; Chuck Davenport, 100 and 220; Jim Nicolosi, 120 HH; Don Barrett, 440 Int; Ken Michaelson, pole vault; Bob Monti, shot put and discus.

Scoring third were Ken Mack, 440; Barrett, 120 HH; Rick Paulhamus, 880; Rich Baradollar, 440 Int; Ward Becker, javelin; Bob Chandler, high jump; Steve Keppen, shot put; Toby Dills, broad jump and triple jump.

This past week JC defeated Delaware Valley 77-63 for their first victory this year.

JC Field Trip Studies Ocean From Trawler

Studying the sea from the open deck of an ocean-going trawler was part of a weekend for 19 Juniata students and their instructors at the Duke University Marine Laboratories at Beaufort, N.C., where aspects of modern oceanography were observed.

Fifty-million-year-old fossils were among the samples brought back to the Juniata laboratories by the students of the three professors: Robert Fisher, assistant professor of biology; Dr. J. Peter Trexler, associate professor of geology and chairman of the geology department; and Dr. Robert N. Washburn, assistant professor of geology.

Fish and plankton native to the sea bottom were dredged from the deck of the trawler. Algae and animals were observed later on an offshore rock jetty, and Juniata made an additional study of animals in salt water marshland.

Juniata students from classes studying sedimentary petrology, ecology and paleontology, classified and catalogued the samples in the Duke University laboratories. "Both the biology and the geology students were able to see how animal life varies with environment," Dr. Washburn said. "Our students could compare modern sea life with the remains from the past."

The 1967 May Day Queen was announced at this morning's annual May Day Breakfast. To reign over this year's traditional May festivities is Pat Dove, a senior biology major from Hagerstown, Md. Pat's Maid of Honor for the weekend will be Judy Hershey, senior in psychology from York.

In the voting which took place last Monday, students also chose Kirsten Miller and Norma Jean Edgar as senior attendants.

Sue Eshelman and Carolee Williams will be the junior attendants.

Sophomore attendants chosen were Bonnie Cave and Pam Haskell. Freshman attendants in the court are Barbara Brogan and Mary Ellen Davis.

Prince Charming Gary Sheppard will escort the Queen at the coronation next Saturday afternoon on Oller Hall lawn, after which will follow the traditional May Pole Dance with other entertainment for the queen and her court.

'Brigadoon' Plans Progress Despite Activity Conflicts

Brigadoon, the musical about a mythical Scottish village, will be presented in Oller Hall on May 5 and 6 at 8:15 p.m.

Frederick Loewe and Alan Jay Lerner wrote this story concerning two Americans, Tommy Albright and Jeff Douglass, (played by Tom Conrad and Bill Brubaker), who, while on a hunting expedition in the woods in Scotland, stumble upon Brigadoon. This mystical town was created by a miracle because of the corruption of the rest of the world. The two hunters have entered the town on the wedding day of Charles MacPherson Dalrymple, (played by John Batchelor) and Jean McClure, (played by Jennifer Sweigart and Bobbie Wayne). Tommy falls in love with Fiona, the bride's sister, (played by Chris Wagner). Harry Burton, (played by Eric Kinsey) is quite upset because he would like to marry the bride. He threatens to leave Brigadoon. This could never be done because if one person leaves the town, it will cease to exist. But Brigadoon is saved by Harry's death.

The two hunters return to their home in New York City, only to find that life is no longer wonderful there. When they again find Brigadoon and live happily ever after, the fairy tale, taking place in May, 1967, comes to an end.

Others in leading roles are Jim Laskaris, Bob Hale, Bob McDowell, Rich Stahl, Dave Gould, Kirsten Miller, Clara Gudalonis, Kearney Steele, Dave Knepper, Ed Rogers and Karen Landes.

"Brigadoon" is co-directed by Prof. and Mrs. Bruce Hirsch. Prof. Hirsch is directing the backstage chorus. Prof. Hirsch is extremely proud of everyone involved in the production, especially since May Day, comps, orals and "Brigadoon" are happening at the same time.

Nancy Janusz is production manager. L.J. Janusz is stage manager; lighting director is Briggs, and coordinator of costume design is Emily Fiedler.

Rockwell Announces Three New Faculty Appointments

Three appointments to the faculty were recently announced by Dr. Donald M. Rockwell, Acting Dean of Academic Affairs.

The new professors will start their teaching assignments next fall. They are Dr. Harry V. Klug, a native of Huston, Texas, as associate professor of political science; J. Michael Pentz, a native of Long Beach, Calif., as instructor in physics; and Kenneth D. Marum, a native of Fall River, Mass., as assistant professor of psychology.

Dr. Klug is a Professor of Political Science at Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, West Virginia. He received his B.A. from the University of Iowa (1948) and also his M.A. (1949) and his Ph.D. (1950). Prior to this he served in the U.S. Navy from 1942 to 45.

At present a mathematic teacher in the Owen J. Roberts High School, J. Michael Pentz attended the Hill School, earned his B.S. from Juniata College (1962) and a M. Ed. in Science Education from Temple University (1964).

Mr. Marum spent two years on active duty with the U.S. Air Force (1951-53) before earning his A.B. at Fresno State College (1957) and his M.A. from Brown University (1963). At the present time he is working on his Ph.D. at the University of Vermont and expects to submit his thesis this summer.

Research at the State University of Iowa (1958) and at Brown University has centered on time perception in sensory isolation. Mr. Marum is a Phi Beta Kappa and a member of the American Psychological Association.

Committee Seeks To Improve Social Life

Soon after Student Government elections, JC students received the opportunity to voice opinions about campus social activities as the result of the efforts of Linda Conning and her Social Activities Committee to discover ways of improving Juniata's social life.

The questionnaire which was circulated became a guide for needed improvements in three areas of interest: 1) a demand for big-name entertainment and a willingness to pay $.50 to $1.50 to see it, 2) more dances with live music, and 3) more movies on campus that are better in quality and more recent in production. These results became the basis for composing a budget to meet the requests.

The budget presented before the Student Government requires $9,750, $4,000 of which is planned to be used for big-name entertainment. This budget has been approved by both the Social Activities Committee and the Student Government and must now be evaluated by a committee consisting of President Clavert N. Ellis, John T. Fike, college treasurer, Dr. Charles W. Schoenherr, dean of student affairs, and Dr. John C. Baker, chairman of the board of trustees.

A petition which was presented to President Ellis shows student support for the budget and for the allotment for big-name entertainment. When the Student Government receives its money, Jim Hamilton, president and Jim Reber, treasurer, will decide upon the portion to be received by the committee. Linda considers her budget to be a modest proposal and hopes to see it approved.

All the money is carefully planned to provide funds for 5 areas: 1) a band each weekend and dance bands for the Midwinter Formal, Homecoming, Christmas, and May Day dance, 2) movies, 3) big-name entertainment, and 4) business work and advertising. The fifth area arose from requests noted on the questionnaire. Transportation to Penn State and nearby colleges and communities will give the students an opportunity to enjoy entertainment that the Juniata is not able to obtain. At first this will

Dills To Conduct Monopoly Marathon In Largest Effort of College Career

Dills has done it again! Because of Toby Dills, in 1964 and 1965, football and softball marathons held at Juniata College attracted much national attention.

And tomorrow, another marathon will begin — this time a giant monopoly game, which seems to be "in" for 1967. Organized by Toby Dills, the game will use for a board area the streets and sidewalks of more than a city block of campus. The attempt is to conduct the largest monopoly game ever held.

(Earlier this spring Mt. Holyoke College and Yale played what they claimed was the biggest monopoly game, using students in place of tokens on their giant board. Last week in Beverly, Mass., according to Sports Illustrated, scuba divers were to play a monopoly game underwater.)

When one mentions marathons around the Juniata campus, the name of William L. "Toby" Dills is part of the same breath. The lanky senior from Wilmington, Del., truly has had monopoly on marathons since he first came to Juniata four years ago, and he looks forward to achieving his last collegiate marathon record this week.

Beginning at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon, Dills said that members of each of the four classes will start the game on the corner of 18th and Moore Streets (about middle campus) and proceed on the whitewashed, drawn street "board" for one block to Leshar Hall, where they will jump onto the campus sidewalks and continue around the block. Messengers from each class will deliver money and tokens via bicycles to players on various sides of the block and also will take the large styrofoam dice to the third floor fire escape of Student Hall to be dropped (rolled) for the next move.

A dean's list chemistry student, Dills explained that the monopoly game will be played outdoors for about seven hours and then be moved inside Totem Inn (student union). When Tote closes for the evening, the game will be continued in a different dormitory each night. Through the use of walkie-talkies and WJC, there will be communication between all players and continuous reporting of the game. To avoid any lapse in playing time while the game is being moved indoors at night and back outdoors during the day, a smaller board will be set up off the interim, and an airted announcement will signal the next group as to the status of the game prior to transfer.

The outside board will be made of heavy cardboard, painted and drawn to regular game specifications. Money, tokens and cards will be made of green, pink and white newspaper received from The Daily News in Huntingdon.

Because of final examinations (end of May) it is doubtful that Juniata will attempt to beat the longest (600 hours) monopoly game (set by McLean, Va., High School students in 1966).

When Dills was a freshman, he also was in charge of a monopoly marathon which was conducted in early December in the laundry room of North Dormitory for 151 hours and 19 minutes. Only freshmen fellows played.

In May of that year he supervised a frosh football marathon that received national attention when the game lasted 63 consecutive hours, surpassing their intended goal of 50 hours. The Guelphs defeated the Ghibellines 1303 to 1231 — and Dills, to whom most of the credit was given, was high scorer with 214 points.

The energetic Dills, as sophomore class president, then conducted in 1965 a headlining softball marathon between the sophomore and freshmen classes May 14-15-16. The game lasted 50 hours and five minutes (1:45 p.m. Friday to 3:50 p.m. Sunday) and went 265 innings with the frosh nipping the sophs in the closing hours 618-599. The sophs led by 30 runs after the first 24 hours.

Organizer of the monopoly marathon, Toby Dills rests on one of the styrofoam dice as preparations are underway in Tote. Painting hotels and 'marking money' has been a familiar sight in Tote this past week.

Editorial . . .

It is with a certain amount of renewed faith in the Student Government that we view the steps toward resolution of the WJC teletype controversy. (See story, this page.) Through the responsible and sincere efforts of those concerned of the radio station, WJC proved itself to a doubting senate. Of course, it is sad that they had to prove themselves. The senate should never have doubted. To be sure, they should have been aware of the potential of the station. We never doubted WJC.

So those in charge of the purse strings and subsequently, the mind strings, to an extent, have finally realized that the request was not unreasonable at all, and have, more or less, sanctioned it.

That WJC did come through with something positive, which apparently surprised some, and that the Student Government has committed itself to the cause is indeed a step in the direction that will lead to new heights of communication and a needed broader awareness on this campus.

We hope that in the future such demands as may be made on the legislators, et al., will be recognized and evaluated in light of their broadest and highest significance to all of campus life.

An issue such as this is certainly of merit. The consideration is encouraging. Does this mean that the student government is on the way to real concerns?

It looks that way. As usual, we hope it is.

JC Mimes Mimic "Blow Up"

Tennis Match In Alumni Hall

Some of Mr. Barbash's points in his Integration lecture yesterday morning on Blow-Up, the current film which has been drawing considerable comment, were certainly demonstrated as Juniata's own mimes came bounding down the aisles in Alumni Hall and proceeded to "play tennis" in the stage area.

A surprised Mr. Barbash said of one of the mimes, Toby Dills, who, though not the organizer of this even, seems to be becoming notorious for happy antics, "I thought he majored in monopoly."

Then, someone pulled down one of the blackboards revealing the statement inscribed beneath: A New Scene Needs A New Prop. At this point Fred Bailey presented Barbash with a tiny red airplane propeller.

Barbash calmly replied that, "he hadn't brought his beanie." He went on to say, "well, if you don't participate in an illusion it ceases to exist, . . . perhaps a greater illusion might be the monopoly game."

After the white faced tennis players bounced over the seats of the front rows to take their places in the class, Barbash continued to deliver a lecture which enhanced the general appreciation of Blow-Up, the demonstration having enhanced the general appreciation of the lecture.

Photographed live at the scene. . . though we have no intention of doing a "blow-up" of the picture.

"After College What?"

To be featured as part of the May Day program next weekend will be a panel discussion entitled "After College What?" sponsored by the Juniata Parents Association.

The panel, moderated by Dean Charles W. Schoenherr will include Mr. Robert A. Doyle, Director of Placement here; Mr. Carl Anderson, Personnel Manager of Price Waterhouse of Pittsburgh; and Dr. Edward Van Ormer, Assistant Dean of the Penn State Graduate School.

The discussion will take place in Tussey-Terrace rec room May 6 from 10:45-11:45 a.m. The association cordially invites parents and students to attend in order to hear a timely discussion of opportunities available beyond undergraduate training.

The association has desired to sponsor programs of interest to students and parents. The primary objective of the program is to have students and parents spend time together while on campus and not to have meetings and activities for parents only.

The president of the Parents association, John S. Andoniades of Baltimore, Maryland will preside over the program. The newly elected President for 1967-1968 is Dr. Nelson F. Robbins of Ocean City, New Jersey who will be presented on May 6. The newly elected Vice-President is Donald F. Hoover of Duncansville, Pa.

Ed. note: We offer this reprint from The Carolinian of the University of North Carolina in hopes that it may put a smile on the nervous faces of Seniors Sweating Comps. It goes out with our sympathy and best wishes. (Freshmen, sophomores and juniors might read it, too. . .)

Wind-up dolls have had their day; magazine hybrids never got started; "would you believe" has been run into the ground—it's time for something new. A new rhetorical pastime suggests itself—exams for the examined. "The examined" are those whose foibles are on the collective lip of the nation. The exams are designed to represent those foibles. The following are several to get the ball rolling:

The Hubert Humphrey exam: You start off with an original thesis, but end up repeating the lectures verbatim.

The Bob Dylan exam: Good answers, but you can't read the handwriting.

The William Manchester exam: You have to cross out half the essay. The Warren Commission exam: Convincing at first glance, but tends to fall apart on second reading.

The Stokely Carmichael exam: Most of the class flunks.

The George Hamilton III exam: You flunk the exam, but get an "A" in the course.

The Adam Clayton Powell exam:

. . . on Senate News

WJC has done it—or almost! At Tuesday night's Student Government meeting, a WJC representative announced that the WJC staff members have gotten $1,042 through advertising to pay for the rental of a teletype. This is less than $400 short of their goal and they still had several prospects to visit. In answer to WJC's questions about securing the teletype, the Legislature assured WJC that it could install the teletype with no legislative intervention, and if WJC cannot secure the rest of the money the Student Government will get it "somewhere."

The members of the WJC staff deserve the whole campus' thanks for showing the initiative and determination that they have. This seems to be a clear indication of the radio station's awareness of its responsibility to the College and its willingness to do whatever is necessary to fulfill this responsibility. The astonishment of everyone present when the report was given is well expressed in one legislator's comment when asked if there were any questions, "What can you say!"

Fred Witmer, chairman of the student proctoring bureau, presented a proposal for paying student proctors. The whole issue of paying proctors ultimately ended in a discussion of who actually started student proctoring, the students or the faculty. Legislative opinion was divided as to whether or not the students or faculty want to continue the proctoring system as it now exists. The initial proposal will be presented to the Administrative Committee, Faculty Council, and Education Committee in order to determine student and faculty opinion.

Mike Eisenhower, Student Government vice-president, announced that Leadership Conference for fall 1967-68 will be held Sept. 14 and 15 at Camp Blue Diamond. Any student interested in attending this interesting and important conference may secure a form from either Mr. Holmboe or Mike Eisenhower. A fee of $3.50 is necessary to cover expenses. However, the fee does not have to be paid this spring. A follow-up letter will be sent to all participants sometime in August and the money can be paid at that time. The deadline for registration is Friday, May 20.

The Student Government has established an Education Committee to bring any academic problems of the students to the attention of the administration. The committee is composed of members from each division: Roy Hantgan (Sr. chemistry major), Prue Engle (Sr. English major), Bill McClelland (Sr. sociology major), Mary Kay Stom (Jr. Biology major), and Darlene Vaglia (Jr. psychology major).

New members appointed to the Totem Inn Commission are Carolyn Barwise, Mark Faulkner, and Ann Sollenberger.

Chuck Lytle was appointed chairman of JC Movie Night.

Review . . .

"The War Game"

Ed. note: Reprinted below from the Penn State Daily Collegian is a review of "The War Game," a film currently showing at the "Twelve-trees" theatre in State College. The film, heralded with outstanding reviews as a most important and worthwhile comment that "could change the course of history," has been released on a limited basis to selected university centers and will be playing Sunday, with features at 5:00, 6:30, 8:00 and 9:30 p.m. with matinees at 3:30 on Saturday and Sunday.

A letter to Possible Survivors: I have never spent a more significant hour in any theatre, and I do not believe that you can have anything to do in the near future so important as seeing "The War Game"—important not because it may change your life, but because it may change your death.

You well may be weary of the Bomb-Bogey, but that need not dissuade you, for you won't find a single mushroom cloud in the whole movie, nor any ground-zero grotesques. The genius of this film lies in its understatement. It is not about the cosmic forces which already have numbed our imaginations, but about the criminal stupidities that are all too painfully understandable. It does not formulate for us what we should think, but shows us what it will cost not to think.

We've all heard that the human kind cannot stand very much reality. Unfortunately this favorite observation of second-hand sages neglects to note that reality remains indifferent to our limitations and imposes upon us whether we can take it or not. If we understand this, we realize that willful evasion and ignorance of grim probabilities can be a form of suicide, a way of making certain what is now but an unthinkable possibility.

"The War Game" demonstrates that pattern and its consequences with such power, authenticity and restraint that finally it may shatter the "conspiracy of silence" about what WILL happen to those unlucky enough to survive the first hours of nuclear war. I do not believe this "conspiracy" is conscious, but that the subject is nearly impossible to discuss. Richard Wilbur has expressed the problem eloquently in his poem "Advice to a Prophet"—which begins:

"When you come, as you soon must, to the streets of our city, Wide-eyed from stating the obvious, Not proclaiming our fall but begging us

In God's name to have self-pity, Spare us all word of the weapons, Their force and range,

The long numbers that rocket the mind: Our slow, unreckoning hearts will be left behind,

Unable to fear what is too strange." The film begins with an awareness of our inability to fear what is too strange only because we will not confront the obvious long enough to believe it.

Kenneth Tynan believes this film may change the course of history. If it is to do so, it must accomplish this by changing our understanding which means it must first be seen. I urge everyone to see it, and be changed.

Advertising To Help WJC Secure Teletype

The prospects that WJC will have a teletype next year to provide a campus world news service are more than promising. The heated controversy of a week ago is being resolved.

Through the request of Student Government officials involved in the controversy, advance advertising contracts have been sought from local businesses to sponsor newscasts on the agreement that if enough spots were sold, the Student Government would dip into available resources to provide funds for the remainder of the sum necessary to lease the teletype.

Radio personnel have contacted area businesses and have procured signed advertising contracts amounting to the sum of $1,042. Fourteen hundred dollars is the rental fee for the AP machine.

The procurement of these contracts was announced at last Tuesday's Student Government meeting. Subsequently, it was agreed that the Student Government would supply whatever deficit existed when the teletype was to be officially had.

"After Six" To Play In Harrisburg, Sat.

Rapidly becoming one of the top Motown style bands in the area is the "After Six" group of JC students who will play this weekend at the "Raven" in Harrisburg with "Smoky Robinson and the Meracles."

Juniata's contribution to the Motown world will be looking for an offer to cut some records. It is not a new experience to play in this night spot. They have been showing their style about twice a month in Harrisburg and the students have picked up a sizeable chunk of their tuition.

Plans now call for a tour of the New Jersey coast resorts and clubs in the Philadelphia area during the summer. Much of the style can be caught any spring evening when the band is practicing on Moore Street near Fourteenth.

The only non-JC student is Bob Kraut, the vocalist who attended Juniata but is currently enrolled at York Junior College.

The others include Tom Maechler, a new sax player, George Zlupko, trumpet, Jay Phythyon, organ, Bill Foster, guitar, George Von Hacht, bass, and Joe Shull, drums.

24-hour shifts without substitution. During the daylight hours, both classes also used girls. Balls for both the football and softball marathons were donated by sporting goods companies. The girls chosen to act as "senior counselors" are: Barbara Berkeley, Mary Ellen Franck, Connie Glessner, Barb Hay, Anne Kent, Sue Parsons, Carole Peters, Linda Koning, Ann Sellenberger, Sue Stober, Mary Kay Stem, and Carole Williams.

As soon as the budget receives final approval a referendum will be sent to the students so that they can pick the two big-name entertainment groups they wish to see on campus.

Dorm-sponsored events have been co-ordinated to supplement the planned activities. Each dorm, which will have its own social chairman, will sponsor coed activities for one week. Quite a few casual activities have been suggested: snowball fights, fireplace activities with hot chocolate, bonfires with cider, touch football, hootenannies to which everyone brings a guitar, sledding parties, swimming parties, and picnics.

Another needed improvement involves changing the atmosphere of Women's Gym by adding new lighting and a stage. Dances are planned for Sherwood patio and Tussey-Terrace patio, where the Friday night dance on May Day weekend will be held.

If the committee does not receive the requested money it will devise other ways to finance its planned activities. One possibility would involve the changing of college policy to permit an admission charge for the big-name entertainment.

Linda explained, "I think that Juniata has a very vigorous academic program and her campus social life should be of equal caliber. We're working to give the students what they want—I think it's a sound program; it's designed to prevent the weekend exodus from campus."

The members of the committee are Candy Albrecht, secretary; Mary Ellen Davis and Betsy Wiest, publicity; Nat Mitchell and Wayne Knickel, big-name entertainment; Barb Sackett, treasurer; Bert Mazzuto, improvement of Women's Gym; Barb Sackett and Jim Rinier, movies; Jim Hysong and George von Hacht, bands.

Marathon

The first to recognize the many other students who have given dozens of hours toward the planning of these marathons, Dills in an unassuming manner is the organizer and idea man. And with these qualities, he has been a leader throughout his four years at Juniata. He recently completed a year as vice president of the student senate, has served on various senate committees, is a member of the chemistry club, is a triple and broad jumper on the Juniata varsity track team, and has been a main reason why this year's senior class has won the cheering contest and float competition on Homecoming and the Christmas decorations award. Keeping the students interested and involved in college activities has been today's goal. Dills has done it again.

Track Team Has Two On Road; Wallop St. Francis 120-25

JC's thinclads travel to Susquehanna next Wednesday and then visit Albright on Friday.

Last year Susquehanna's track team went winless. JC first met the Crusaders in track back in 1903. Since then the Indians have won 16 times while losing 4. Last year Juniata won 91-54.

Against Albright last year, Juniata won 67-64. Overall, the Tribe has a 5-8 record against the Lions.

With ten returning lettermen from a team that posted a 6-7 record, the Lions expected a strong team this year. As of April 24, their record was 6-3.

Three of the lettermen hold individual records for Albright. Carmon Cominale, who also runs the 100, 220, and 440, holds the record in the pole vault with 13'2 3/4". Mike Eckenroth, who runs the 220 hurdles and the 440, holds the record in the 220 hurdles with 24.3 seconds. Gary Francis, who runs the 100, 220, and 440, holds the record in the 100 with 9.8 seconds.

The other seven lettermen are: Thomas Davis, javelin; Jimmy Garibay, mile, 2-mile; Ernest Mancini, 100, 220, 440; Claude Mignon, high jump, pole vault; Herb Nauss, 440; John Scholl, high jump; and William Wolke, 880.

Scholl placed first in the high jump at 6'3" in last year's college division MAC championships.

A freshman, Dave Boyles, has been a consistent pointgetter for Albright this year. So far this year he has run the 120-high hurdles in 15.0 seconds for a new school record. In the high jump he has gone to 6-5, one inch short of the school record. And in the broad jump he has traveled 20 1/4'.

In action last week Juniata reached the .500 mark. In a tri-meet JC defeated Lebanon Valley while losing to PMC. PMC scored 97; CJ, 44; and LVC, 32. In a dual meet JC triumphed over St. Francis, 120-25.

In the tri-meet the Tribe took five firsts. Bill Weikly won the 440; Jim Nicolosi won the 120 HH; Ken Michaelson won the pole vault; and Bill Williams scored firsts in the high jump and triple jump.

Michaelson, a freshman, set a new all-time record at JC by going 12'6" in the pole vault. The old record set in 1938 by Dan Gieser was 11'6 3/4".

Other point getters for JC are: Rick Beard, mile (4th), 2-mile (3rd); Charley Davenport, 100 (4th), 220 (4th); Rick Becker, javelin (3rd); Bob Monti, shotput (3rd), discus (4th); Terry Burk, discus (3rd); and Bill Williams, broadjump (2nd).

JC's mile relay team composed of Davenport, Dick Paulhamis, Ken Mack and Weighley finished second to PMC.

Against St. Francis, Juniata took firsts in every event except for the discus.

Bill Weighley set a new school record by turning in a 50.7 time in the 440. This is the best time on College Field.

The summary of JC's scoring: Bill Williams, high jump (1st), triple jump (1st), broad jump (1st), 120 HH (2nd); Rick Beard, mile (1st), 2-mile (1st); Charley Davenport, 100 (1st), 220 (1st); Jim Nicolosi, 120 HH (1st); Dick Paulhamis, 880 (1st); Don Barrett, 440 IH (1st); Ken Michaelson, pole vault (1st); Mike Anker, javelin (1st); Bob Monti, shotput (1st); Aubrey Shenk, mile (2nd), 2-mile (2nd); John Stultz, 100 (2nd); George

At the start of the 220 it was all even, but JC took a first (Charley Davenport) and a third (Rich Barndollar) against St. Francis. JC Won 120-25.

Toby Dills takes off on the first leg of the triple jump. Dills gained a second place behind Juniata's Bill Williams.

Anderson, 880 (2nd); Rich Barndollar, 220 (3rd); Craig Hartman, pole vault (2nd); Ward Becker, pole vault (3rd); Bob Chandler, high jump (2nd); Bob Wood, high jump (3rd); Toby Dills, triple jump (2nd); Ed Herrick, javelin (2nd), broad jump (2nd), triple jump, (2nd); and Terry Burk, discus (2nd).

Netmen Shut-Out Crusaders; Look To MAC's

JC's netters meet Scranton tomorrow on the Indians home courts in their last contest before the MAC's at Drexel, May 5-6.

Last year was the first time Juniata met Scranton in tennis and the result was a 9-0 victory for JC.

Last Saturday's contest with E-town was cancelled because of weather and will not be rescheduled because JC meets E-town later this year.

In a home meet against Susquehanna last week JC walked off with their third shut-out of the year and their fourth victory with only one defeat.

In singles Larry Bieber defeated Bill Wrege (6-2, 6-1); John Solis-Cohen defeated Lance Larson, (7-5, 6-4); Tom McAulay defeated Roger Vanderoef, (7-5, 6-2); Dave Newcomer defeated Dean Ross, (6-2, 6-1); Al White defeated Dick Hough, (6-3, 6-3); and John Katonah defeated Barry Gehring, (6-2, 6-4).

In doubles competition Bieber and Newcomer defeated Larson and Vanderoef, (6-2, 6-2); Solis-Cohen and Jay Pate defeated Wrege and Ross, (4-6, 6-3, 6-1); and Bill Phillips and John Waite defeated Hough and Gehring, (7-5, 6-2).

Senior Captain Larry Bieber shows why he is half of JC's winningest doubles combination. The other half is Dave Newcomer (sophomore). Both have an 8-2 record in five meets. They are undefeated in doubles competition.

Baseball Team Meets Wilkes In Season's 1st Doubleheader

by Dennis Shank

Juniata's baseballers travel to Wildes College tomorrow for the first doubleheader of the season. The Indians lead Wilkes, 3-0, in a series of games that started in 1963; last year's contest with the Colonels yielded a 4-0 JC victory.

Next Wednesday Juniata faces the Blue Jays of Elizabethtown College in another away doubleheader. E-town has seven lettermen

Golfers To Host MAC Championships At Bedford Springs

Juniata will host the Middle Atlantic Conference golf championships next week (May 1) at the Bedford Springs golf course. The largest number of participants in this, the 17th annual tournament, are expected. The former Juniata College Invitational Golf Tournaments, conducted in the early 1950's, were the forerunners to the MAC's.

The championship 72-par course will be the scene of competition for golfers from 31 member colleges and universities, including top contenders Bucknell, Franklin and Marshall, St. Joseph's, Temple, Wagner, LaSalle, and Lehigh, the defending champion.

Competing for Juniata will be Russ MacIsaac, Rick Greg, Ken Stevens, Phil Thompson, Dan David, and Hank Hartman.

Then next Thursday the Indians meet St. Francis. In seven previous meetings JC has won five. The two schools did not compete against each other last year.

Last week the Tribe dropped a close match to Shippensburg, 9-10, but defeated Gettysburg, 12 1/2-5 1/2, and John Hopkins, 12-6, in a tri-meet at JH. Against E-town this past week Juniata won 15-3.

Judo Club Hosts Newark College

The Juniata College judoists will host the Newark College of Engineering in a return meet here Saturday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Gymnasium.

This will be the first regular home contest for Coach Bob Fisher's club. In December the Juniata judoists won the team trophy in the first Juniata Invitational Judo Competition here, with Princeton, Cornell, Columbia and Stoney Brook participating. In March the local club also took part in the eastern championships at West Point.

The judoists have been on the road for two meets: at Newark where they won 52-7 and at West Point where they were beaten 45-15. Saturday's meet will be a return match with NCE. Members of the Penn State club also may participate. The Juniata team also has performed in several area high schools.

Competing in the 10-man team for Juniata will be Paul Freeman, Pete Schaeffer, Chuck Locke, Bob Monti, Bob Butz, Ron Schilling, Steve Carroll, Joe Bergantz, George Durfee and Bob Phillips.

Brigadoon Lives On Oller Stage

Show business is always tense, serious business, and Bobbie Wayne sat on the edge of her seat while she watched rehearsal and answered questions about her work as scene designer for Brigadoon. "My parents were professional singers," she said, "but I have no idea what I want to do."

For someone who doesn't know what she wants to do, Miss Wayne is getting a lot of praise for her artistic ability. The stage crew will quickly tell you how important the attractive, petite blonde is to the creation of the village of Brigadoon. Miss Wayne is excited about the Scottish village even though, in creating a tree for the background, she got stuck on a hillside and had to be rescued by her coworkers.

Brigadoon is a production of the Juniata music department and is directed by Bruce A. Hirsch, assistant professor of music, and staged by his wife Marjorie, who studied opera at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. It will be performed this evening and tomorrow evening at 8:15 in Oller Hall.

A music major, Miss Wayne also sings the role of Bonnie Jean and will be featured Saturday evening. On Friday she will be one of the "towns-folk," and Jennifer Sweigart, a sophomore, will play the part of Bonnie Jean.

The first to give credit to others, Miss Wayne is working with senior Nancy Janusz, who is production manager, and Lillian M. Junas, director of sports information, who is the stage manager. Costume design has been coordinated by Emily Feddeler, make-up is supervised by Judy Tipton, and Wayne Knickel has handled publicity.

The busy stage crew includes sophomores Regis Beighley, Robert Rea, and William Skelly, and senior Gary Merritt. An electric saw shrieked as lumber was cut for the sets by Dave Knepper and Don Hoover. Spotlights went on and off, changing color and picking out singers or carpenters as Clayton Briggs, associate professor of speech and theatre, tested effects.

Scottish Theme Is '67 Motif

The enchantment of Scottish highlands and the springtime magic of Lerner and Loewe's Brigadoon will set the atmosphere for Juniata College's "Highland Holiday," the annual May Day festival, to be held this weekend.

Traditional activities will include the coronation of the May Day Queen and entertainment for her Court on the lawn of Oller Hall, tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. Miss Patricia Dove, a senior majoring in biology, was selected as the 1967 May Day Queen. Her escort, the Prince Charming of the Court, will be Gary Sheppard, a senior sociology major.

Other weekend activities will include reunions of six classes of Juniata alumni, with an Alumni Reunion Dinner in Oneida Dining Hall tomorrow night. Alumni reunions will be held for the following classes: 1942 (25th); 1945, 1947, 1948 (20th); 1957 (10th); and 1966 (1st).

The annual Brothers Campus Day will be observed all day tomorrow. Programs of discussions and various meetings are arranged for college-minded high school students, their parents, pastors, and youth counselors.

Juniata's "Highland Holiday" will begin tonight at 8:15 with the presentation of Lerner and Loewe's Brigadoon, directed by Bruce A. Hirsch, assistant professor of music, and staged by his wife Marjorie, with the Juniata Concert Choir and the assistance of the department of music. An All-College Mixer on Tussey Terrace Porch will follow the musical production.

Varied activities will take place throughout tomorrow, including the Alumni Golf Outing beginning at 8:30 a.m.; Open House in men's and women's residence halls from 1 to 5 p.m.; and a baseball game with Washington and Jefferson at 11 a.m.

A special morning feature will be a panel entitled "After College, What?" sponsored by the Juniata College Parents' Association. Dr. Charles W. Schoenherr, dean of student affairs; Dr. Edward Van Ormer, assistant dean of Pennsylvania State University Graduate School; Carl Anderson, personnel manager of Price Waterhouse Co.; and Robert A. Doyle, director of placement at Juniata, will be the members of the panel.

Afternoon events are highlighted by the May Queen Coronation, May Fete Dance and entertainment, followed by the All-College Reception on Totem Inn Lawn. At 3:30 p.m. the Alumni and Faculty will meet in a softball game. The second performance of Brigadoon will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Oller Hall.

The May Day Dance in Memorial Gym will conclude the Saturday festivities. The final event of the Highland Holiday celebration will be an organ recital Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Oller Hall, presented by students of Donald S. Johnson, professor of music.

Saturday's Classes

Interviews of May Court Personalities Reveal Interesting Individuals

The May Day queen and her court were formally announced at the May Day Breakfast, April 28. Pat Dove, senior biology major, is queen for the festivities. Upon graduation she hopes to become either an x-ray technician or an airline stewardess. Looking back upon her college career, she finds that her participation in the New Century Singers was a very valuable experience for her.

Prince Charming is Gary Sheppard, senior history and French major. He plans to enter the service or become a teacher and coach. He mentions his participation in athletics as his best experience at Juniata. Since comps provide the current topic under discussion, he added his opinion. He feels that they are overemphasized to the degree that they are not as difficult as some people say.

Maid of honor is Judy Hershey. A senior psychology major, she will attend Bryn Mawr College for graduate study in social work. From her many activities at Juniata she lists her Senate activities, living in the freshman dorm as a senior counselor, and working with the "Glass Menagerie" cast as her best ones. She feels that comps make the student tie all his knowledge together. The orals provide an outlet for discussion of all this material. She mentioned that she wished that she had felt more prepared for them.

Norma Jean Edgar, a home economics major, was chosen senior attendant. This summer she will assume the position as a home economist at the Baltimore Gas and Electric Company. She considers her General Activities responsibilities in connection with the Senate her most valuable college experience. She said that she had been dreading comps for four years only to discover that they weren't as bad as she expected. But she did add that she was glad they were over.

The other senior attendant is Kirsten Miller, a sociology major, who is currently undecided about her plans following graduation. Her college career has given her the experiences of meeting people and gaining stage presence with the New Century Singers for two years. She felt that her comps gave her the valuable opportunity of talking about what she had learned over the period of four years.

Sue Eshelman and Carolee Williams are junior attendants. Sue, who is majoring in home economics, hopes to attend graduate school to study textile advertising and testing or promotion of textiles. She has liked the opportunity to study courses in fields other than her major.

Carolee hopes to teach kindergarten. An elementary education major, she lists her freshman year in third Brumbaugh as her most valuable college experience.

Sophomore attendants are Bonnie Cave and Pam Haskell. Bonnie aspires to be a mathematics teacher. She enjoyed living in NJ House. Mice and cold evenings provided a lesson in living close to nature.

Pam, a French major, would like to become an international airline hostess. Next year she will be spending her junior year abroad at Strasbourg, France. The Children's Christmas Party is listed as her best experience at Juniata.

Barb Brogan and Mary Ellen Davis are freshmen attendants. Barb, an elementary education major, has enjoyed meeting people, participating in the Freshman Chorale, and working with groups in school activities.

A French major, Mary Ellen would like a career involving traveling. She said that she is enjoying her entire college career as a learning experience in realistic life after having studied in a boarding school.

Faculty Council Approves New 'Pass-Fail' System

Juniata College has joined the large number of liberal arts colleges who have established courses for their students on a pass-fail basis. At their regular monthly meeting the faculty voted to try the program on an experimental basis.

Dr. Donald M. Rockwell, acting dean of academic affairs, commented that "Juniata is always looking for ways to strengthen the liberal arts education it offers, and this pass-fail system allows the student to take courses in which he is interested without worrying about his grade averages."

The student must pass the course to get credit toward graduation. Dr. Rockwell pointed out, but he will be allowed only one pass-fail course in any term and none in his major once he has decided what his major is to be. With the new system it is hoped that students in the sciences will be encouraged to take courses in the humanities and that students in the humanities will likewise be encouraged to take courses in the sciences. "Our goal," Dr. Rockwell pointed out, "has always been to encourage general knowledge in the liberal arts tradition."

Developed by the Faculty Council, the experimental plan establishes the following conditions:

1. Once the student has declared his major he may not take a pass-fail course in that major. In case he changes his major the rule applies in the new major beyond any courses he has taken.

2. The student may register pass-fail for any other course to the limit of eight courses. He may take one each term.

3. Pass-fail grades will not be used in computing the student's cumulative record, but the course hours will count as credit toward graduation.

4. Summer students "on trial" will not be allowed to take courses on the pass-fail basis.

Letter From The Editor

This issue of The Juniata represents the final effort of the presently organized editorial staff, a final culmination of an effort that has bridged what has been a long and particularly significant year.

An outgoing editor has a tendency to suddenly become extremely sentimental and retrospective ("editors are human too") when faced with the realization that this is the last fling. So, resting a weary arm on the typewriter we contemplate. We've presented, analyzed, reflected upon a lot of news and many developments. We've thrown the usual darts at the administration, with varying degrees of force, flung bitter invectives at the student body, frequently questioning its existence as such. At times we made mistakes, were severely criticized, occasional praise offset that adequately. Sometimes we were too strong, sometimes not strong enough. We found out you certainly can't please everybody.

It has been, to say it tritely, for perhaps to say it at all is trite, rewarding and gratifying to watch a year of Juniata's history go by from this particular viewpoint. It has been a year of many forward steps with everything from women's hours revisions to, most recently, the institution of a pass-fail system. (See story, page one: we hope this will be broadened and continued on not just an experimental basis) Juniata changed this year, and it was a great spectacle.

I would like to take this personal opportunity to thank what has been a most interesting staff for staying with us. I thank and ask forgiveness of an understanding P.I. department for our heavy dependence upon them in our almost constant time of need. An extra special recognition is directed to Miss Lil Junas, our faculty advisor, for her journalistic knowledge and guidance: our mentor will not be with us next year.

Finally, to my successor, Richard D. Kensinger, I wish a cohesive staff, an infinite stream of hot issues, and more time than the day has available.

'Round Campus

Juniata's nationally famous marionette monopoly game will be moved outside again tomorrow after having been played for a week in Tote and the various men's dorms. Large crowds gathered last Saturday to see the huge dice drop from Student's fire escape, and then watch as an odd parade of a beer can, Snoopy, an outhouse, and a guillotine made their way around the sidewalk structured "board." It has been quite a contest thus far with neither the freshmen nor the combined efforts of the seniors and juniors, being able to shake the sophomore's lead. The safest place seems to be in jail. At least you don't have to pay rent there!

Today begins one of the biggest special weekends throughout the year on the campus of JC. With all the activities that will be taking place, it won't be hard to wear yourself out just getting from place to place. "Bridge-a-doon," a baseball game, the queen's coronation ceremony, and the formal dance are just a few events on the agenda. There is even going to be a new exhibition in Shoemaker Galleries entitled "The Mid-State Art Exhibit." It will be displayed until May 20.

In case you were passing through Tote around 11 a.m. on Wednesday and happened to notice a heated discussion in one corner, it pertained to the question of the relationship of perception to value judgements. The session ended with no definite conclusions, but one professor suggests checking Boulding's The Image for some good arguments.

Congratulations to all those lovely young ladies chosen to be a part of this year's May Day Court. Many girls frowned on the idea of having to get up so early, but the bright sunshine, the colorful decorations and flowers, a good breakfast, the great entertainment, and most of all, the handsome waiters, were enough to bring the young ladies out smiling and looking their best. Rumor has it that the fellows had a good time too!

Hatfield On The Draft

by Mark O. Hatfield
U.S. Senator (Rep. Oregon)

The time has come to end the military draft. That bald declaration will startle many. But when all the facts are in, and all the current and projected needs for military manpower have been taken into account, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that America does not need the draft. America can afford not to have the draft, and America's overdue in bringing to an end this drastic invasion of the lives and liberties of her young men.

Congress is now beginning to debate President Johnson's legislation to extend the draft another four years. In the past Congressional examination of this issue was perfunctory. This year things are different.

Thanks no doubt to the heightened awareness of America's young people, whose lives the drafts so seriously affects, many in Congress are now for the first time rethinking the premises upon which the draft is supposedly based. An increasing number of them are finding it sadly out of step with both our Nation's traditions and with its military manpower needs.

We must never allow ourselves to forget that however pressing the circumstances, the draft is involuntary servitude. It is legitimate and constitutional when Congress, exercising its power to raise and support armies, has no reasonable alternative. But conscription must always be the last desperate resort for meeting military manpower needs, not the cheap

Monopoly Business

To the Editor:

I am writing in respect to the imagination and accomplishment of the Juniata students for their recent Giant Monopoly Game. I feel that the GMG reflects an intelligent and vigorous side of the student body that is seldom seen, and leads one to speculate on what might be the ultimate result of it all.

For instance, one could postulate the formation of the Juniata Institute for High School Games on our campus. The JIHSG would be the focal point of the nation for information and the inspiration of high school students in need of new approaches and ideas for fun. JC students would become nationwide consultants, and would travel widely, disseminating the recent successes in fun and games. The JIHSG could have annual conferences, bringing together school leaders to discuss new games and camp activities.

The First Annual Conference might be dedicated to New Advances in Academic Games. The academic game has attracted attention recently, and is similar to the GMG which JC so spily handled. A group of students walks around a city block in response to the roll of master dice. If a student lands on a block entitled "Vietnam," he must respond to questions asked by fellow students and faculty about his position on the war, his defense of his position, and in 250 words or less must summarize the recent week's efforts toward peace. If he fails to respond, he must move back three squares. Other squares would be marked "The Property War", "Sex and the Abortion Laws", "Wire-tapping and Free Speech", "The Civil Rights of the Ghetto-man", "Scientific Warfare", and many others. The winner is the one who makes it all the way around the block!

I am certain that these types of academic games will eventually catch on, so Juniata would have to be at the forefront of their development due to the unique position of JIHSG. These are only speculations, but perhaps the Senate ought to consider what JIHSG would really mean to Juniata and the nation.

Charles H. Spink

A Clarification

To the Editor:

The article in the April 2 Juniatian concerning doctorates received by Juniata's graduates seemed to me to be unnecessarily ambiguous. The meaning of the study was, in fact, distorted. 161 JC graduates received their doctorates in the period 1920-61. Twenty of these 161, or 12.4 per cent were in the arts. However, 15.3 per cent of all doctorates received in this period by graduates of all colleges and universities in the U.S. were in the arts. 14.3, 24.8, 39.7, and 8.7 per cent of JC graduates received their doctorates in the social sciences, education, physical sciences, and biological sciences, respectively, in this same period. Compare this distribution with the national distribution of doctorates by field which shows 20.4, 15.4, 30.4, and 18.5 per cent being conferred in the social sciences, education, physical sciences, and biological sciences, respectively. While the above comparative distributions are interesting when one is considering the relative strengths of given areas of our academic program, other products of the report reflect a better overall picture of Juniata's academic stature.

Of all college and universities in the U.S. in 1961, Juniata ranked 692nd of 1,175 in enrollment, but 202nd of 1,175 in doctorates received by graduates of these institutions. We ranked 15th in doctorates received by graduates of institutions with enrollments under 1,000 (There were 579 institutions in this category).

Of all church-related colleges and universities in the U.S. in 1961, Juniata ranked 234th of 540 in enrollment, but 33rd in doctorates received by the graduates of these institutions. We ranked 3rd in doctorates received by graduates of institutions with enrollments under 1,000 (There were 367 institutions in this category).

Of all colleges and universities in Pennsylvania in 1961, Juniata ranked 62nd of 91 in enrollment, but 17th in doctorates received by the graduates of these institutions. We ranked 4th in doctorates received by graduates of institutions with enrollments under 1,000 (There were 41 institutions in this category). Incidentally, in this last classification, we were exceeded by Bryn Mawr, Swarthmore, and Haverford.

Liberal Arts Atmosphere Gives Satisfactory Teacher Preparation

by Dr. Howard H. Crouch
Associate Professor of Education
Chairman, Division II

In recent months several questions have arisen concerning the education department's professional semester and involving alternative ways by which a person can meet professional requirements. I believe the time is ripe to place some suggestions and ideas before the Juniata students.

First, may I remind you that if you plan to do your student teaching here at Juniata, it is necessary for you to counsel with someone during your sophomore year and to take senior integration either during your junior year or during the summer prior to your senior year. If you wish to take integration during your junior year you must have the permission of the Education Department to do so.

Next, may I suggest to persons wishing to prepare for high school teaching that they request their advisor to "spell out" clearly what program should be followed in the field of concentration and collateral.

Third, you should beware of the catch phrase often made that the best path to a certificate is to take eight academic semesters here and then take a fifth year at some other institution such as Temple. There are several things that you as students should know about such programs. First, it is not a fifth year, but anywhere from 1½ to 3 years, usually 2½ years for completion. Second, with the exception of the Temple program, where you may break even, these programs cost you money. What earnings you may have will not cover cost. You might well start here for an additional semester of work. Third, your degree will be in Teaching, not in your academic area and this in itself may have some serious consequences. These programs present Masters' Degrees based on work that is undergraduate professional work at most institutions. This causes the degree to be viewed as a "weak" degree by persons concerned about such matters. It is rather interesting to contemplate why persons who view such degrees as being of questionable value will at the same time suggest to undergraduates that they seek such degrees. In addition, such degrees do nothing to open the door to jobs in higher education if you should decide at some later date to seek such a job. There you will need the degree in your area of concentration. Also, it has come to my attention that some schools are not differentiating between types of Masters' Degrees on their salary scale, placing the Master's in one's field ahead of a Master's in Education or Teaching.

Fourth, there seems to be a feeling that if one takes the professional semester here at Juniata then they will not have received proper academic preparation for teaching in their chosen area. Our follow-up program does not support this. In general, we have an excellent reputation based on the quality of teachers that we prepare. With a few exceptions, our students compare extremely well in all areas of academic preparation with the needs of the public schools and with candidates from other institutions. (Witness the fact that we have upwards of 25 to 30 schools seeking opportunity to recruit on our campus—and more coming every year.) The idea that a student should subject himself to a second-rate master's degree program so that he might enroll in one or two more departmental courses here, and thus be better prepared to teach, does not appear sound.

It is my suggestion that your graduate program will be stronger and your degree more valuable (and this seems to be important) if you are prepared to teach at the end of four years at Juniata and if you then teach for a year or two. This approach will provide you with an opportunity to test yourself and thus plan better your graduate program. You will discover your strengths, weaknesses, and whether you wish to continue teaching prior to committing yourself to an advanced program. The commitment of your time and money in additional years of higher education before you have had some "productive" years seems wasteful.

The public schools of America need good teachers. Juniata College can and does produce good teachers. It need not abdicate this responsibility to any other institution. I suggest that the liberal arts atmosphere is a good environment for teacher preparation (professional semester and all) and that we leave additional work in the academic area to those years it takes to get a Master's in your field.

On the campus of a western college, students organized classes in civil-rights demonstration. Veteran protest-marchers, wearing signs that explained their various functions, stood before the seated uninitiated. One picket line of "pros" wore placards emblazoned with the word Demonstrators. Another group of pickets, portraying the lie-in school of protest was labeled Floor Models.

Profs Trade Classes For Conferences

The fact that not all of a college professor's time is spent giving lectures or grading exams was demonstrated recently by three Juniata profs who attended conferences and meetings concerning current areas of interest in science.

Dr. John R. Comerford, professor of biology and chairman of the biology department, attended the 51st annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, held in Chicago from April 16 to April 21.

While at the meeting, Dr. Comerford heard papers relating to many subjects, and visited some of the 650 industrial, scientific, and institutional exhibits which were also a part of the convention.

Highlighting the general session presentations were two discussions: Dr. Bentley Glass, academic vice-president of the State University of New York at Stony Brook, spoke about "Biology and the University: Teaching and Research"; and Orville L. Freeman, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, expounded upon "Agricultural Science in the Science Community."

In addition, Robert L. Fisher, assistant professor of biology, and Dr. William E. Russey, assistant professor of chemistry, attended the Conference on Graduate Studies in Environmental Science, held at Rutgers University from April 24 to April 26.

Sponsored by the U.S. Public Health Service, the conference was designed to stimulate colleges to interest students in the field of environmental science, and to acquaint scientists themselves with the need to work together in order to solve crucial environmental problems of the present and future.

Dr. Russey commented, "Solution of big problems such as water pollution, air pollution, or increased urbanization of the population, involve an interplay of a large number of disciplines: these problems are not capable of being solved by just one particular type of scientist."

SCORE To Offer Cantata In Illumination and Mime

Rehearsals are underway in Huntingdon, Mount Union, and McConnellsburg for the musical production, "The Insurance Company," a cantata in illumination and mime, to be presented by the Student Committee on Racial Equality (SCORE) with the participation of residents from the Huntingdon area, on Sunday, May 14, at 8:15 p.m. in Oller Hall.

A cantata for contemporary audiences, "The Insurance Company" is not simply a musical satire. It presents the images, colors, and sounds, as well as the people of American society, and lets them speak for themselves, in their harmony and disharmony.

"The Insurance Company" is the story of cooperation, of conflict, of the unpredictable, of the inevitable events in our lives. The audience enters into the electronic, computer-calculated atmosphere of the present day. The unusual sound and lighting and visual effects, as well as the full chorus and orchestra, make the "Insurance Company" an extraordinary eye and ear-opening experience.

"The Insurance Company" was written and composed by Donald C. Hope, chairman of the Department of English, Bradford Junior College, Andover, Mass., and former member of Juniata's English faculty, and by Elmer H. Maas, assistant professor of philosophy here. The production has been two years in the making, with the final composition and cast including a 25-member chorus of Mount Union and McConnellsburg residents and a 10-piece orchestra.

SCORE's "Insurance Company" has been called "Juniata's answer to MacBird" and "a not-so-simple social satire in song." Others say it is "just a very exciting musical, important to see." SCORE members of HOPE from Mount Union, and McConnellsburg residents agree with all these comments. They have made the "Insurance Company" into something they want people to see.

Tickets will soon be available from members of the cast and chorus, as well as at the door the night of the production. Admission is by $1.50 donation.

Chess Team Participates In Tournament

The weekend of April 22-23 the Juniata College Chess team competed in the Eastern Individual Team Tournament held at Penn State. The tournament was won by the host team.

The JC team made a good showing against highly ranked competition. The team finished ahead of one other team even though the other drew three byes to gain 1½ points.

Scoring for Juniata were Allan Burkett with two points and Paul Shaffer and Darwin Kenepf with one and a half points each.

Congratulations to all the team members who have won honors and aided the team this year and especially to the two seniors members of the team; Allan Burkett and Paul Shaffer.

Dills And Cohorts Shoot For Record In Monopoly

Supah-dice thrown from atop Students' Hall fire escape opened the outside portion of the monopoly game. The marathon has been such a smashing success, it could hardly be called "Dills' Pickle."

College students can be tycoons, at least they can play at it.

A sunny afternoon that was made to order for sidewalk monopoly was provided the right atmosphere as the 1967 marathon, organized by Toby Dills, senior chem major, got underway.

Ingeniously using an entire block of whitewashed campus sidewalks for the monopoly board, the game began outside at 1 p.m. last Saturday.

Distinctive tokens bigger and better than life and moved by representatives of the respective classes, advanced as huge styrofoam dice were rolled-dropped from Student's Hall fire escape. A sign below read, "Beware Of Falling Dice."

Distinctive live continuous coverage and it was not unusual to hear such reports as "The juniors are in jail" along with dice calls, "Seniors eight; advance to Kentucky Avenue," issue from the radio.

Organizer Dills and his cohorts seemed to be everywhere supervising all aspects of the game, delivering deeds, chance cards and money (all made, of course, on a large scale) by bicycle. Communication from Student Hall to the rest of the board was also accomplished by means of megaphone and walkie-talkie.

Three feet houses and hotels stood on Tote lawn ready for tycoons, truly on a large scale.

After playing all day outside on Saturday the game was removed to dorms, and has been going strong in Tote during every day of the past week.

The marathon has made big-time news, as photographers and newsmen from television, radio and the press covered the event. A feature ran in the New York World Journal Tribune and many other news agencies picked up the story.

An attempt is being made to continue to break the record for the longest and largest game. At this point, all are waiting anxiously to see the end results.

Only time will tell if monopoly gets too monotonous.

PSU Jazz Quintet To Give Oller Concert

The PSU "Jazz Spokesmen" as they will appear in concert in Oller Hall next Friday. They are particularly interested in experimental music and avant-garde jazz.

The Jazz spokesmen, a well known Penn State quintet, will present a concert in Oller Hall, May 12, at 8:15 p.m.

The quintet has appeared twice at the Villanova Jazz festival and once at the Notre Dame festival. In the Penn State area, the group has appeared numerous times in featured concerts on their campus and regular fraternity work.

The Spokesmen play a wide variety of jazz with the type depending upon the audience. Their interest lies particularly in the realm of experimental music and avant-garde jazz.

Four years ago, the group began as a quartet under the leadership of Stephen Gorn, a graduate student in music who plays saxophone and flute and writes original material for the group. Jim Emminger, a grad student in business, plays alto saxophone. Bass player is Doug Smith, an undergrad in business. Vitra, phonist Don Krebs, a photographer for the university and drummer Ken Kuhn, an instructor of fine arts and a professional painter complete the quintet.

Alfarata Features Supplement; New Staff Appointed

As the conclusion of another academic year at Juniata draws nigh, the thoughts of seniors and undergraduates alike, when not dominated by dreams of summer vacation, are filled with great expectations regarding the 1966-67 issue of the Alfarata. A close look at the yearbook's state of affairs finds things in the stage of transition typical of most campus organizations at this point.

Outgoing editor-in-chief Dick Mohler has slated distribution of this year's annual for May 20, and is making preparations for a summer supplement—an innovation unprecedented in the history of the Alfarata. The 16-page sequel, including coverage of sports and other activities since March, will be mailed to seniors and will be made available to the remainder of the student body (excluding incoming freshmen) in the fall. This yearbook proper will conveniently accompany the summer supplement with a portion of the binder specially designed for its insertion.

Meanwhile, the newly-appointed 1967-68 Alfarata staff has been getting acquainted with the basic procedures in yearbook production. Accompanied by their faculty advisor, Lillian M. Juras, five members of next year's staff attended a yearbook workshop sponsored by the Intercollegiate Press Association in Altoona, April 28. Those in attendance were Anne Kent, editor-in-chief; Judy Heberling, copy editor; Judy Saylor, photography editor; Bob Wise, classes committee head; and Linnie Townsend, committeewoman. Other members of the new staff include Janie Lukens, layout editor; Walt Sinnamen, business manager; Sharon Cheeseman, clubs committee head; Jim Kinier, sports committee head; and Lee Hustler, activities committee head.

New procedures which Miss Kent hopes to employ next year take the form of a pre-school planning session and the institution of monthly deadlines. She emphasizes the fact that committees are now being formed and "we can use lots of help." Those interested in lending a helping hand to the production of the 1967-68 Alfarata may contact her or any of the committee heads.

... on Senate News

"The Student Government will consider requests for financial aid by clubs and campus organizations only when these funds are to be used for projects from which all students may directly benefit or for programs of which all students may avail themselves."

This policy, formed to eliminate problems concerning the Student Government's subsidizing of club activities, met with stiff opposition from both the legislators and representatives of various clubs at last night's meeting. Strictly interpreted, the proposed policy would deny funds to any campus group for activities restricted only to their organization and would necessitate securing all funds through concessions or from the members.

The opposition to the policy expressed by many of the legislators was heartening. Despite arguments that the Student Government would have to make value judgments concerning various clubs and whether some clubs have to travel while other clubs don't, it seems that the policy touches a more basic question. Although some type of policy is needed to restrict grants, the Student Government must be careful not to lose its function as an organ of and for the students. Student Government support has been the basis for the beginning and continuation of many clubs on campus. I feel that such a severe restriction as the above policy advocates would not only inhibit the growth of many clubs and prevent the creation of any new ones, but would also undermine the faith of the students in the Student Government's role of support and representation of student affairs. The proposal is scheduled for further consideration. Reminders: There will be a meeting of the Totem Inn Commission, Thurs., May 11. Any questions or problems should be sent to Mike Eisenhower or Linda Ronning. Also, any one interested in the position of assistant treasurer of the Student Government should contact Jim Reber, Box 404.

Exhibit Features College Artists Barbash, Taylor

The works of two Juniata artists, Steven A. Barbash, assistant professor of art, and Bernard C. Taylor, director of public information, will be included in the sixth annual traveling exhibition of the Mid-State Artists which will open at Shoemaker Gallery tomorrow and run until May 23.

Organized by Taylor and two Bucknell University artists, Neil Anderson and Blanchard Gummo, in order to establish lines of communication between professional artists in central Pennsylvania and the Finger Lake area of New York and the art conscious public, the Mid-State Artists group is a non-profit organization relying completely on the voluntary help of its members and the sponsoring schools. During the last five years and prior to his coming to Juniata, Taylor has organized and co-ordinated the traveling exhibition.

Barbash's oil painting, "The Red Read," from the College collection, and an oil painting by Taylor entitled "Ulysses" will be included in the exhibit.

Most of the 24 exhibitors who will participate in the show are professors of art in area colleges and universities. The artists include Neil Anderson, Donn Moulton and Marvin Lowe, Bucknell University; Emlin Edwards and Helen Lee Jones, Wilson College; Stuart Frost, Bruce Skobaken, George Zoretich, Pennsylvania State University; George Bucher and Hilda Karniol, Susquehanna University; Edwin Zoller, Tyrone; Robert Magee and John Runyon, Corning Community College, Corning, New York; John W. McClurg, Lycoming College; Carmine W. DeVivi, Hill School; Kenneth T. Wilson, Bloomsburg State College; Nancy Hebard, Shawnee-on-Delaware; Constance Preston and Peter Gialder, Williamsport; and Fredrick Keller and James J. Kelly, Kutztown State College.

The paintings and art works will be open to the public Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 5 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.

Women who sleep seven hours or less a night, according to the May Reader's Digest, have five times the amount of tension, seven times the nagging fatigue and 12 times the apprehension of those who sleep eight hours or more.

Incoming Frosh To Attend Five Summer Sessions

Juniata's annual summer orientation program, arranged for incoming freshmen and their parents, will be held during five different sessions in June, according to Richard E. Kimney, director of admissions.

Initiated six years ago, the summer orientation program introduces students and parents to Juniata's program of education and provides time for the administration of various placement tests. Foreign language and mathematics tests will be used to determine each student's placement in the fall registration and to permit more effective academic counseling.

The two-day orientation will include meetings for both students and parents with the Dean of Student Affairs, Dean of Men, Dean of Women, and personnel from the Business Office, Financial Aid Office, and Parents' Association.

Dates for the five orientation sessions are Sunday and Monday, June 11 and 12; Wednesday and Thursday, June 14 and 15; Wednesday and Thursday, June 21 and 22; Sunday and Monday, June 25 and 26; and Thursday and Friday, June 29 and 30.

Senate Accepts Ribicoff's Tuition Tax Credit Plan

The United States Senate has approved by a 53-26 vote a plan to provide a federal income tax credit of up to $325 for tuition, books and fees paid by students in colleges, universities and other post-high school institutions. Final enactment of the plan probably will depend on the decisions made by a Senate-House Of Representatives conference committee.

The tax credit plan was offered April 14, 1967, by Senator Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., as an amendment to a House-passed bill which would restore the investment tax credit to businessmen.

Under the amendment offered by Ribicoff and accepted by the Senate, the tuition and fee credit is 75 per cent of the first $200 paid, 25 per cent of the next $300 and 10 per cent of the next $1,000. The credit is subtracted from the income tax owed the government.

The credit is available to any person who pays the tuition. Thus, it would be available to working students and wives as well as to parents and other relatives. Parents with more than one child in college or graduate school may get a separate credit for each.

Over two-thirds of the benefits of this amendment would go to families earning less than $10,000 a year," Ribicoff said. A formula reduces the amount of the credit available to high bracket taxpayers.

Capitol observers said an important part in the final decision on the tuition tax credit plan will be played by Congressman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. So far, he has taken no public stand on the measure which long has been opposed by the national Administration.

Lack of Enforcement Eases 'Archaic' Coed Regulations

(ACP) — Regulations governing women in residence at universities across the nation have long been criticized as archaic and dictatorial, comments the Daily Reveille, student newspaper at Louisiana State University.

Lack of enforcement, however, sometimes makes those rules somewhat less than dictatorial. This fact is illustrated by Nicholas von Hoffman's report of life at the University of Illinois in his new book, The Multiversity.

The Daily Reveille described his account.

Closing hours at the university are 10:30 p.m. on week nights, 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights, and 11 p.m. on Sundays. And according to the "Code on Undergraduate Student Affairs," a coed late more than 10 minutes during a semester is subject to disciplinary action. In practice, however, a coed is less likely to get in trouble if she stays out all night than if she is 15 minutes late.

Bed checks are not made, so no one knows if a student is out overnight unless there is a fire drill. But, as one coed told Hoffman, "They always tell beforehand when they're going to have a fire drill and they never have them on weekends."

Of even greater significance is Hoffman's account of activities in the lobby of one of the dormitories. "Some of the young people, in twos and fours, sat and chatted; but only three or four feet away were lovers, in close to horizontal positions on pieces of furniture that were never designed for their present usage."

The housemothers, unlike those at LSU, remain unseen. Each dorm is closed by five girls called "closers," who draw the drapes and pry loose the cleaving couples. At closing hour, they douse the lights and stand at the door to take the names of latecomers, unless, of course, the latecomers happen to be friends.

When asked why the university did not take steps to enforce regulations, the dean of women said, "It would be an insult to a young woman." We notice she said woman and not lady.

Three Festivals To Provide Best Of Shakespeare

Another season of the best of Shakespeare is promised this summer by the major Shakespeare Festivals on the East Coast.

The American Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Connecticut, will open June 17 with "The Merchant of Venice," "Macbeth," "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and Jean Anouilh's "Antigone" in repertory. Directors are John Houseman, Michael Kahn, Cyril Richard and Jerome Kilty. The American Shakespeare Festival runs through September 10.

The New Jersey Shakespeare Festival, located in the popular seaside resort of Cape May, New Jersey, will play its fifth season this summer. During July and August, the New Jersey Festival will present "Julius Caesar," "Much Ado About Nothing," and "Peter Weiss' 'Marat/Sade,'" in repertory. Paul Barry is producer-director.

Joseph Papp, producer of the New York Shakespeare Festival, will direct "King John," which will run in New York City's Central Park, July 5-29. Gerald Freedman will direct "A Comedy of Errors" June 7-July 1, and "Titus Andronicus" August 2-26. The New York Festival also presents mobile tours of Ben Jonson's "Volpone," playing alternate performances in English and Spanish.

All three Festivals are based in popular tourist areas, and all offer special discounts to students: the American Shakespeare Festival offers discounts to student groups of twenty or more; the New Jersey Shakespeare Festival offers a flat student price of $1.00; and the New York Shakespeare Festival features free admission, although the purchase of a membership for $10.00 guarantees seating for all 3 plays.

JC Field School To Join Penn State At Sheep Rock

The famous pre-historic Sheep Rock Shelter on the Raystown Branch of the Juniata River will again provide a 10,000 year old classroom for students of archaeology, but this year the first Juniata College field team will join the Penn State Field School at the site.

Confirming the announcement from the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission of a $5,000 grant to Penn State for the project, Professor Paul M. Heberling, supervisor of the Juniata team, said that the College may eventually take over responsibility for the excavations in the Raystown River basin. The program this summer, he believes, will be especially important for the training of future staff members.

One of the few pre-historic sites in the world where researchers can hope to trace a pattern of life from pre-historic man right up to the time of recorded history, the Sheep Rock excavation is expected to be inundated by the waters of a massive new flood control dam.

"We want to salvage the significant evidence of human aboriginal habitation before it is destroyed," Heberling declared.

Formerly dean of men and now associate professor of sociology, Heberling is delighted that Juniata students will have an opportunity to work as a team under the direction of Dr. Joseph W. Michels from Penn State Department of Anthropology. Last year, 24 Penn State students worked 10 weeks at the "diggings," taking 7,000 artifacts from the site for evaluation and analysis.

The new Juniata Field School is part of the expanded Summer Session under the direction of Dr. Earl C. Kaylor, Jr., Sociology 403, Special Topics, as the new course is called in the summer catalog, will offer six credits at the new summer rate of $30 per credit hour. Classes will begin June 26 and end August 28.

"We have no pre-requisite other than interest and dedication," Heberling explained, "and students from all academic backgrounds are welcome. The course should interest those who intend to go on professionally as well as amateur archaeologists."

Although he will function as one of seven members of Dr. Michel's staff, Heberling will be responsible for the supervision and evaluation of the work performed by Juniata students.

The class work will not be confined to Sheep Rock, Heberling said, and explained that there are at least 35 other sites where excavations can be made.

"This entire area has important potential for archaeological research, and, helped by State and Federal funds, Juniata hopes to continue the Field School as a salvage and instructional program."

Heberling went on to explain that funds to support the 1967 summer excavations are coming from, in addition to the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, the United States National Park Service, Penn State and Juniata College.

Philosophical in his approach, Heberling noted that "though anthropology is predicated upon a meticulous scientific methodology, one of its primary contributions is the applications of data from the past to the understanding of our present cultures."

Through the research at Sheep Rock and other sites, the Juniata professor hopes to help students "use the material remains of ancestral peoples to interpret those developmental struggles which have had an impact upon human behaviour patterns."

He said that in this way, man can better adjust to present problems and predict future ones.

All the students at Sheep Rock this summer, both from Juniata and Penn State, will use the Brumbaugh Science Center at Juniata for their evaluation and analysis. Both teams will be housed on the Juniata campus. They will be supervised in their studies by graduate assistants from Penn State.

Pitt To Restrict Library School For Two Terms

Mr. Russell Walker, Director of the Altoona Public Library, announced today that the University of Pittsburgh Graduate Library Extension School will not offer any courses for the spring or summer term due to faculty vacations at the University of Pittsburgh.

However, Mr. Walker has received word from Dean Harold Lancoir of the Graduate Library School that a fall course is a distinct possibility. Under consideration are courses pertaining to library materials for children, book selection procedures and reference.

In regard to the Library Technician program, which is separate and distinct from the graduate program, no word has been received as yet in regard to the continuance of this program which is under the jurisdiction of Dean Viers Adams of the Division of General Studies at the University of Pittsburgh. It is, however, sincerely hoped that this program will also continue as it is providing very valuable library instruction for non-professional library employees.

JC Golfers Face Crusaders; MAC Runnerups

JC's golfers travel to Susquehanna next Thursday. Last year JC won 13½-4½. Over all the Tribe is 2-3 against Susquehanna teams.

This year the Crusaders should offer some stiff competition having just finished second in the Middle Atlantic Championships. Last year they were 7-2 and in three years they have a 22-4 record.

From last year SU has five returning lettermen: Doug MacQuish, senior; Joe Runyan, sophomore; John Strade, sophomore; Tom Rutishauser, senior; and John Paterson, junior.

This past weekend Juniata hosted the MAC golf championships at Bedford Springs.

Bucknell University topped a 29-team field to regain the title they won two years ago. Lehigh, defending champions slipped to sixth.

Frank Engle of Haverford College captured medalist honors with a 157 total. Four players, including defending medalist Steve Hopper of Dickinson, tied for second place with 158's.

Juniata's four man team finished in a tie for 15th place with LaSalle. Phil Thompson was low for the Indians with a total 166 score. Rick Geig had a 169; Russ MacIsaac had a 172 and Ken Stevens a 179 total.

The team standings were: 1, Bucknell; 2, Susquehanna; 3, Delaware; 4, Temple; 5, Haverford; 6, Lehigh; 7, West Chester; 8, F&M; 9, Dickinson; 10, Gettysburg; 11, St. Joseph's; 12, Drexel and Wilkes; 14, Swarthmore; 15, Juniata and LaSalle; 17, Upsale; 18, Lycoming; 19, Lafayette; 20, Rider; 21, American; 22, Hofstra; 23, Moravian; 24, Muhlenberg and PMC; 26 Albright; 27, Lebanon Valley; Delaware Valley; 29, E-town.

Judokans Down PSU And Newark College To End Season, 7-2

The Juniata judokans came out on top of an evening's action against Penn State and Newark College of Engineering, the East Coast champions, last Saturday night in Memorial Gymnasium in the team's final competition of the season.

In the featured match, Coach Bob Fisher's club trounced Newark by a score of 47-10. Earlier in the evening, both Juniata and Newark defeated Penn State by scores of 45-0 and 50-0, respectively.

The individual scoring for the event ran as follows: Paul Freeman, win by decision and a tie; Chuck Locke, win by a choke and win by immobilization; Pete Schaeffer, win by immobilization and a tie; Bob Monti, win by a throw and win by immobilization; Bob Butz, win by immobilization and win by a throw; Ron Schilling, tie; Steve Carroll, loss by a throw; George Durfee, win by a throw; and Joe Bergantz, win by a half point.

The wins bring the judo team's record to an impressive, 7-2, finale.

May Day Crowd To See JC Meet W&J For 1st Time On Diamond

by Dennis Shank

On May Day the Indians will entertain Washington and Jefferson. The game on Saturday starting at 11:00 a.m. will signify the first meeting between the Presidents and Juniata on the baseball diamond.

The following Tuesday, May 9, the Indians will travel to Lock Haven State College to meet the Bald Eagles in a game starting at 2:00.

Coach Karl Herrmann, of Lock Haven, hopes to better the teams 5-11 record of last year. Coach Herrmann, who is in his first season as baseball coach, has ten lettermen returning, including two-season letter winning pitcher, Jeff Ward. Pitching is one of Lock Haven's strongest attributes, with Ward returning along with James Young, another starter from last year. Four of the five games that Lock Haven won last year were by shutouts.

The series between Lock Haven and Juniata started in 1952, with the Indians ahead 10-7. Last year's game was won by Juniata 11-10.

Last Saturday JC split a double-header with Wilkes College. Senior Jim Sutton handled the pitching assignment for coach Russ Trimmer in the first game, gaining the victory. Sophomore Randy Rolston cracked a two run homer in the early stages of the game for JC. At the end of the seventh inning the score was tied two all. In the last of the eight a squeeze bunt scored the Indian runner from third, giving Juniata the win, 3-2. The victory was characteristic of the running, aggressive type of play that is instilled by coach Trimmer.

In the second game of the twin bill, freshman Gene Galbraith turned in a good pitching performance, but took the loss for Juniata, 4-2.

The victory over Wilkes, brought JC ahead in the series of games between the two schools 4-1. Last year the Indians won a single game against the Colonials 4-0.

JC Considered A Top Contender At MAC Tennis' Championship

JC's tennis team takes a 5-1 record to the Middle Atlantic Conference championships at Drexel. The Tribe will be a strong contender this year. Competition started today and will end tomorrow.

The netmen shut out Scranton, 9-0, last Saturday for their fourth whitewash or the season. They blanked Indiana, Shippensburg, and Susquehanna. Their other win was over Dickinson (5-4) and the Indians' lone loss was to Gettysburg (4-5).

In singles competition over Scranton Tom McAulay defeated Ron Dorf (6-4, 6-0); John Solis-Cohen defeated Jim Zrebroc (6-2, 6-1); Dave Newcomer defeated John Ludgate (6-2, 6-2); Al White defeated Rich Mahan (6-4, 6-1); John Katenah defeated Tom Catlaw (6-0, 6-1); and John Waite defeated Ken Borer (6-3, 6-4).

In doubles Newcomer and Jay Patete defeated Ludgate and Mahan (6-0, 6-0); Bill Phillips and Bill Shoaf defeated Zrebroc and Catlan (6-2, 6-1) and Paul Baker and Ken Dick defeated Dorf and Farrell (6-3, 6-3).

Freshman McAulay still heads the team with eight wins and one loss. Newcomer is 10-2; Patete, 5-0; Larry Bieber, 8-2; White, 7-2; Katonah, 4-1; and Solis-Cohen, 7-3.

Elizabethtown visits JC next Wednesday. Since 1929, Juniata has won 31 while losing 19. The Indians have won the last six meets, including 9-0 and 6-3 victories last year.

Thinclads Travel To Lycoming For Last Meet Before MAC's

Lycoming College hosts Bucknell and Juniata in a tri-meet next Tuesday.

Last year Lycoming finished with a 5-7 record, but placed fourth in the Middle Atlantic Conference college division championship meet.

Back from that team are five lettermen. Bill Neff, who set a MAC record in the pole vault last year, has added two more events, the high jump and broad jump. Monte Whitney competes in the 440 and broad jump. Allen Spencer throws the discus and finished second in the MAC's last year. Ray Warena finished third in the shotput at MAC's last season. Dan Bythewood runs the 100 and 220. According to pre-season forecasts, Lycoming had many promising freshmen.

Against both Lycoming and Bucknell, JC is 5-5 losing to both last year in a tri-meet. The scores were: Bucknell, 92; Lycoming, 49; and JC, 40.

Bucknell finished last year 8-3 and has five returning lettermen: William Allardice, senior; Robert Charles, senior; Richard Crane, senior; Edward Hoffman, junior; and John Royer, senior. Allardice holds the school record in the javelin and Royer the school record in the 440 yard IH.

Next Friday and Saturday JC will field a team in the MAC's being held at Hofstra this year.

Commencement To Conclude Seniors' Years at Juniata

For members of Juniata's Class of 1967 who have survived everything from freshman regulations to comprehensive examinations during their four years on College Hill, the College's 91st annual Commencement Weekend, June 2-4, represents the long-awaited fulfillment of their undergraduate endeavors.

The beginning of the end, ceremonially speaking, was marked by this morning's Senior Convocation in Oller Hall. Seniors as well as faculty members were present in full academic regalia to hear an address by Rev. Robert E. Faus, minister to students, followed by announcements of senior awards, prizes, and other honors by Dr. Donald M. Rockwell, acting dean of academic affairs.

Stanley L. Davis Jr., an ordained Church of the Brethren minister and member of Juniata's Class of 1959, will be the featured speaker at the alumni dinner for seniors tomorrow evening at 6:30 in Leshner dining hall. A native of Lansdale, Rev. Davis presently works with youth gangs on Chicago's far west side as a "detached worker" related to the YMCA and supported by the Church of the Brethren and the United Church of Christ. He first came into contact with the needs of the area when, as a student at Bethany Theological Seminary, he received a field assignment to the youth ministry at a local church.

A Senior Class picnic at Trough Creek State Park scheduled for the afternoon and evening of Friday, June 2, will provide the kickoff for the activities of Commencement Weekend proper. Toby Dills, Juniata's foremost gamester, will coordinate the sporting side of the outing, and the College Food Service will provide the evening meal.

At 9 a.m., Saturday, June 3, the seniors will assemble on the Oller Hall steps for the taking of their Class photograph, following which will be rehearsal for the Baccalaureate and Commencement exercises as well as for the Candle-lighting and Mantle ceremonies. President and Mrs. Calvert N. Ellis will hold a reception at their home for seniors and their parents from 2:30-5 that afternoon; and the College Concert Choir will present Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury" in Oller Hall at 8:15 p.m., before the traditional Candle-lighting and Mantle ceremonies take place at 8:45 p.m.

Kensinger Announces Staff Proposed For '67-'68 Year

As of Tuesday, April 18, 1967, with the official Student Government approval of the Junas/Baer/Aston-Reece decision upon The Juniatian editorship, Richard D. Kensinger began assuming the responsibilities of his appointed position.

The first measure taken by Kensinger was to organize and reorganize staff positions and duties and to slate The Juniatian's working procedure and purpose. Employing the knowledge and experience gained from two years' work on The Juniatian, Kensinger has created three new editorial positions which he hopes will correct the paper's structural problems. One of the new editorial positions is the Photography Editor, whose duties will include the assigning, receiving, and editing of all the paper's photos. Another of the new positions is that of Copy and Proof Editor, which was created in order to polish The Juniatian's physical make-up. The third position, Assistant Sports Editor, will help lessen the load of the Sports Editor who previously has handled the entire sports news, features, photos, and layout by himself.

Another reason for creating these new positions and reinstating old ones, for instance Layout Editor, was to lessen the load of the individual staff member so that he or she can contribute to and better the content of the paper.

The selected staff for the up-coming school year will be made up of upperclassmen with the exception of three sophomores. The tentative staff members and their respective positions are Richard D. Kensinger, Editor-in-Chief; Janie Beeghly, News and Feature Editor; Tom Linch, Photography Editor; Paul Keely, Copy and Proof Editor; Pat Reber, Layout Editor; Rick Beard, Sports Editor; Dennis Shank, Assistant Sports Editor; Joel Schantz, Business Manager; Don Laine, Advertising Manager; Bill Bard, Circulation Manager; Prue Engle, SG Columnist; and Mark Faulkner, Feature Columnist.

With his experienced staff personnel and their capable management, Kensinger promises that The Juniatian will be the best it has as yet been.

JUNIATIAN Advisor Lillian Junas Resigns To Accept Ball State Asst. Professorship

by Richard D. Kensinger

On June 23 of this year the college will suffer a loss of dedication, determination, and diligence which was offered to Juniata in the person of Miss Lillian M. Junas. Miss Junas has resigned from her positions here on the staffs of the administration and faculty to assume the positions of Assistant Professor of Photo Journalism and Advisor to the Student Yearbook at Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana.

Among the many official duties which Lillian carried as part of her college positions has been the Advisorship of The Juniatian. As Advisor to The Juniatian Lil has given each member of the staffs the professional and personal guidance which her sincerity and education in the fields of journalism, photography, and sports warranted as well as the friendship and support her personality included.

In the fall of 1964 Miss Junas, officially began the responsibilities her positions in the college demanded. She is Assistant Director of Public Information, Sports Information Director, College Photographer, Coordinator of Audio-Visual Aids, Assistant Professor teaching journalism, and Advisor of The Juniatian, The Alfarata, the Camera Club, the Outing Club, and the local chapter of Alpha Phi Gamma (a National Honorary Journalism Fraternity).

As the Sports Information Director Lil Junas was the first woman to hold such a position in any college in the Middle Atlantic Conference and the only woman known to hold such in the country.

As a result of and in conjunction with her journalistic and photographic knowledge during the past several years Miss Junas has published several articles and pictures in national and professional magazines on publications photography. She has also spoken on publications photography at state and national scholastic press associations' annual conferences. During the past five summers Miss Junas has been a visiting lecturer as part of the publications institute at South Dakota State University. Because of these journalistic and photographic accomplishments Miss Junas was recently named to the Who's Who in College and University Publications.

The background and education which has made Lil Junas's professional success possible includes a Bachelor's Degree in Journalism from the Pennsylvania State University, Reporter and Photographer for the Hazleton Standard-Sentinel, a Master's Degree in Photo Journalism from the Pennsylvania State University, Assistant Professor and Advisor to Publications at Lock Haven State

JC Students Participate In Bio. Research Conference

A chance to present the results of individual research projects and exchange thoughts and problems with other budding scientists was given 10 members of Juniata's introduction to research in biology course when they attended the 21st annual Eastern Colleges Science Conference, held at Fordham University of New York recently.

The students were accompanied by their instructors, Dr. John R. Comerford, professor of biology and chairman of the biology department, and Dr. Robert P. Zimmerer, assistant professor of biology.

Along with 500 young scientists from 75 colleges and universities, the Juniata students attended the presentation of research papers and heard addresses by eminent figures in the sciences.

The major speakers at the meeting included Astronaut Joseph H. Engle, who discussed "Manned Space Flight"; Dr. William F. Hoffman of the Goddard Institute for Space Studies, who spoke on "Invisible Astronomy"; and Dr. Detlev Bronk, president of the Rockefeller University of New York.

Among the 182 research papers presented were 10 by Juniata students: "The Zone of Thermal Neutrality in Meriones unguiculatus" — Larry Bieber; "The Effects of Estradiol Benzoate and Testosterone Propionate on a Methylation System Obtained From Agrobacterium tumefaciens" — Thomas Bryan; "Vaginal Hydrogen-Ion

B.C.A. Program Continues Increase As Students Spend Junior Year Abroad

The number of Juniata students who study abroad during their junior year has been steadily growing since the inception of the Brethren Colleges Abroad program. This summer and next year several Juniatians will also be studying in Canada, France and Spain under other programs.

Under the B.C.A. program students have the opportunity to study in the European university system, to travel and to take advantage of recreational and cultural advantages offered in the area of the University of Strasbourg in France and the University of Marburg in Germany.

There is no restriction as to a student's major when he applies to the program. He must, however, have good academic records and the backing of recommendations of professors and administrators at Juniata. In addition the applicants must write an essay including reasons for wanting to go as well as an assessment of their own qualifications.

Most of the students who go abroad are majoring in the language of the country in which they will be studying. However, there are exceptions.

Janie Kelly, an English major; Barb Rowe, a history major; Bobbie Wayne, a music major, and John Brinker, a geology major, will all be studying in France under the B.C.A. program. The remaining students are French majors: Tom Barry, Nancy Colfesh, Janine Everhart, Sandy Harrison, Pam Haskell, Debbie Knoll, Judy Miller, Pat Miller, Beth Shaffer and Diana Weaver.

Two girls will be studying in Marburg, Germany, during their junior year: Betsy Suplicki, a German major, and Judy Walck, an economics major.

Marylise Suffern, a history major, has been accepted by the University of Laval in Canada to study French there, while John Batchelor and Peggy McCordle, both majoring in French, are planning to study in France under still another program.

A group of six Spanish majors will be traveling to the University of Valencia in Spain to study there next year. They are Brian Conley, Kai Burtner, Rietta Klair, Libby Hildebrand, Jeff Pooler and Jo Ann Brelsford.

Sophomore Nancy Furrer and freshman Miriam Trosman, both Spanish majors, are planning to go to Valencia for study this summer and return to campus in the fall.

Prue's Views

. . . on SG New

Lots of time, questions, thought, and discussion have gone into the last two Student Government meetings of the 1966-67 school year.

One major item of discussion was the budget and the recurring question seems to be, "Where has all the money gone?" At last week's meeting Wayne Knickel, president of the Masque, requested funds from the Student Government for next year. Apparently Masque had been financed through the Department of Speech and Theatre, but because of the re-grouping of clubs by the Student Activities Committee, Masque has now been placed under the Student Government.

Amid some embarrassment and a great deal of astonishment, the legislator's admitted that they had no money to offer the Masque, and were afraid that the budget they had submitted would be reduced. During the past week, Masque has submitted a budget to the Student Government and there is a chance that a grant can be made.

The final report from Mr. Fike's office was given by Treasurer Jim Reber. The proposed Student Government budget has been cut by $1,000. Adjustments in the budget were made by reducing funds for the cheerleaders, class and clubs, Kvasir, the social committee, the Student Government contingency fund, Men's Government, Camera Club, and the Alfara and Juniatian.

At last night's meeting, Toby Dills, chairman of the SCOPE sub-committee on a student judiciary, presented his committee's proposal for a new Disciplinary Committee. There was a great deal of discussion concerning the precise functions of the committee, and questions dealing with clarification and several attempts to either fication of many points. After much bring the issue to a quick vote or else table discussion till next fall, a motion was carried by a slight majority to accept the proposal with a few changes. With this initial acceptance by the Student Government, the proposal now goes to the Student Activities Committee for consideration.

Jeff Pooler, this year's chairman of the Coffee House gave a report on the problems facing "Salut." The greatest problem this year has been the difficulty of obtaining entertainment. Pooler said a system of exchanging Coffee House groups with Penn State is being worked out to provide more and varied entertainment. A check with treasurer Bill Williams showed the Coffee House is now breaking even in finances. At last night's meeting Chris Moore was appointed chairman of the Coffee House for next year.

A motion was passed for the Totem Inn Commission to purchase a counter-to-ceiling partition to be installed at the snack bar in Tote. With the snack area thus closed off, it is hoped that Tote can remain open later in the evenings and on Sunday afternoon. The committee hopes to install this partition before the opening of summer school.

In a report from JWSF it was announced that a foreign student from Korea will begin a four year study at Juniata next year and that a disadvantaged student will be supported for the coming summer and fall terms.

Further appointments for the coming school year included Margie Hemmerly, chairman of JWSF, and Prue Engle, editor of Kvasir.

'Round Campus

While watching the doubles at last week's tennis match with Elizabethtown, the spectators all had to laugh when a Juniata woman student innocently inquired as to what the score was. She pulled around the corner, saw the match, stopped her car, and asked the closest person on the street who was winning. He stammered for a moment and then muttered that Juniata was leading. (Actually they had already won since the score was 6-0 at the time). The funny thing was that, of all the people standing around, she had chosen to ask E-town's coach. She just smiled, said, "Oh, great," and drove off.

held in the Stone Church of the Brethren Sunday, June 4, at 8:30 a.m. Later that morning, President Ellis will preach the sermon at the Baccalaureate service in Oiler Hall at 10:45. Seniors, their parents, and the faculty will be guests of the College at luncheon in Oneida and Leshner dining halls from noon until 1:15 p.m.

The culmination of the weekend activities will be the Commencement exercises Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in Oiler Hall. The College will award two honorary degrees during the course of the Commencement proceedings: a doctor of laws degree will be conferred upon the Commencement speaker, Dr. Vera Michels Dean, professor of international development at New York University's school of public administration; and a master of arts degree will be awarded to Albert M. Rung, a columnist for the Huntingdon Daily News and the leading authority on the history of Huntingdon.

Born in St. Petersburg (Leningrad), Russia, where her father represented American firms, Dr. Dean came to this country in 1919. She earned an A.B. at Radcliffe College, procured an M.A. at Yale University, and returned to Radcliffe for a Ph.D. in international law and international relations. The author of many books on foreign affairs, Dr. Dean has spent considerable time in India and the Near East as an accredited correspondent to the United Nations for the India News and Feature Alliance. From 1954 until 1962, Dr. Dean was director of the non-Western civilizations program which she organized at the University of Rochester.

Rung was born in Tyroun in 1889 and was educated in the Huntingdon public schools. In 1957 he retired from his 50-year position as a conductor with the Pennsylvania Railroad. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Huntingdon County Historical Society and a former director of the Dauphin County Historical Society. "In this biennial year of the Borough of Huntingdon," President Ellis remarked, "we think it highly appropriate to honor the man who has become the authority on local history and whose writing has done so much to illuminate our past."

If the old saying about rain bringing flowers is true, then there ought to be flowers galore when the sun finally comes out (if it ever does). Also the animal life has been driven into shelter—especially that group of "chicks" that made a habit of being broiled on Oneida sun roof. Have faith girls: just about the time exams start, the sun will probably be shining brightly.

Speaking of exams, it's just about that time again as eager students make ready for the big occasion. Professors have started assigning those nice little extras that have to be finished in time for the final—like two or three chapters in one book and 150 pages in another. At least no one will be hurtin' for things to do.

The end of the Spring 1967 term will also mark the end of Mrs. Mary Horoschak's career as a housemother at Juniata. Mrs. Horoschak has served for 10 years and welcomes the opportunity to be able to have some rest and relaxation. I'm sure her girls and many JC men would like to commend her for a job well done and to thank her for the patience in dealing with many of their antics.

For some after dinner excitement, which the food often necessitates, stroll over to Cloister lawn next to the gym to watch or take part in an exciting whiffle ball game. What could be more fun than watching the pros play or taking part in such a strenuous sport? Cloister men recommend it.

Ed Conner Selected For Summer Research

Ed Conner, a sophomore majoring in biology, has been chosen along with 14 other students from western Pennsylvania colleges and universities to take part in a summer medical science research program at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School.

The annual program is sponsored by the Smith, Kline and French Foundation of Philadelphia. Students receive stipends of $250 per month for three months, and an additional sum is provided to the medical school for research and incidental costs. Each student is paired with a staff doctor. In Conner's case it is Dr. Daniel Emerson.

Interested in science at Juniata, Conner has been a student staff writer for the Public Information Office and is responsible for all the news of the departments in the Norman Brumbaugh Science Center.

Dr. A. E. Axelrod, director of the medical student research training program at Pitt, said that the purpose of the summer project is to orient able students toward a medical career, with laboratory and clinical experience.

Penn State Invites JC To Spring Carnival

The undergraduate student government at The Pennsylvania State University has extended "a cordial invitation" to the Juniata student body to attend its annual Spring Week Carnival this Saturday, May 20, from 2-5 in the afternoon and 7:30-12 in the evening.

The carnival, the purpose of which is to raise money for undergraduate scholarships, is the climax to a week-long series of activities including such events as a gymkhana, a Fun Olympics, and the Miss Penn State contest.

The theme of this year's Spring Week is "A Tribute to Walt Disney." Using this theme, the various participating organizations will present short skits, with trophies being awarded in several categories. As a special attraction, Miss Dominion of Canada will be present at the carnival.

Baseballers Sweep Crusaders, 5-4, 4-3

by Dennis Shank

Upsala will travel to Juniata for a twinbill on Saturday, May 20, to round out the baseball season for both teams.

The Vikings have ten returning lettermen, but there may be too many "ifs" to predict a banner season. Upsala will need strong pitching, consistent hitting, and the development of new infield talent to turn 1967 into a winning campaign.

The Indians played Lycoming this afternoon at Lycoming.

On Wednesday, May 3, the Indians met Elizabethtown in a doubleheader on Langdon Field. JC won the first game 5-4, behind the pitching of senior Jim Sutton. Juniata pulled the game out of the fire in the bottom half of the seventh when catcher Denny Cover led off with a triple and after a walk, Dave Shimp drove him home with a single.

In the second game, freshman pitcher Gene Galbraith pitched a fine three hitter but took the loss, 2-1. E-town scored two runs in the second inning, which proved to be enough for the victory. The Indians scored their only run on an over-throw to the catcher in the fifth inning.

On May Day the game with Washington and Jefferson was called off because of rain and was not rescheduled.

The single game scheduled for May 9 at Lock Haven was also postponed because of rain.

The Indians won their first doubleheader of the year last Saturday, 5-4 and 4-3, over the Crusaders of Susquehanna.

Jim Sutton hurled the first five innings for JC to receive the victory. Junior John Good came on to pitch the last two innings in relief. Team hitting for the first game was .231.

In the second game, Gene Galbraith went the full seven innings to gain the victory for himself and JC. He gave up three runs on five hits to bring his earned run average to 2.57.

With the conclusion of the Susquehanna twinbill the Indian team batting average is .229. Juniata is also now 4-5 in the Middle Atlantic Conference.

Netmen Beat Lions 7 1-2 - 11-2; Face SF

The Frankies of St. Francis College visit JC this Friday for the seventh meeting between the two schools. Juniata has yet to lose a match to SF, winning last year 8-1.

In action last week the Tribe's match with Elizabethtown was cancelled and the Indians emerged victorious over Albright, 7-5-1/2, for their sixth victory against one defeat.

In singles competition Larry Bieber defeated Ken Rappaport, (6-4, 6-0); Tom McAulay lost to Kural Wadhwa, (7-9, 7-5, 4-6); John Solis-Cohen beat Fred Ullrich, (6-1, 6-0); Dave Newcomer beat Mike Marveles, (6-4, 6-4); Al White beat Bob Levin, (3-6, 6-3, 9-7); and Jay Patete beat Gary Wasserman, (6-3, 6-3).

In doubles competition Bieber and Newcomer defeated Ullrich and Marveles, (6-1, 6-2); Solis-Cohen and Patete beat Rappaport and Wasserman, (6-3, 6-2); and Ken Dick and John Waite split the first two sets with Levin and Don Grayson, (1-6, 6-4). Because of a pressing engagement that evening for Albright, the last doubles match was not finished and was called a draw.

This afternoon Juniata faced Lycoming at Lycoming.

Randy Rolston awaits the throw from Denny Cowher to stop an attempted steal by a Wilkes runner. Gary Sheppard moves over to back up the play.

Bieber And Sheppard Given Top Awards At Sports Banquet

"A tribute to senior athletes" seemed to be the theme of Monday night's All Sports Banquet. All nineteen senior athletes representing all eight varsity sports were recognized by everyone present.

The nineteen seniors were Mario Berlanda, football (4), track (2); Larry Bieber, tennis (4), football (2); Paul Cass, football (1), baseball manager (2); Dennis Cowher, baseball (3); Tom Creighton, cross country (3); Dan David, golf (3); William Dills, track (1); James Doyle, basketball (2), football manager (2); Richard Fiegles, football (3), wrestling (3); Hank Hartman, golf (2); John Katonah, tennis (3); Robert Kuhns, cross country (1); Ernie Moyer, baseball (4); Robert Pascale, football (3), basketball (3), baseball (2); Terry Reed, baseball (4); Ronald Shaw, football (4); Gary Sheppard, football (4), baseball (4); David Shimp, baseball (3); James Sutton, football (3), baseball (2), golf (1).

Eleven awards went to ten student athletes, while one award went to a coach. The seven senior football players represented by Gary Sheppard gave Coach Fred Prender a beer mug with the comment that it was symbolic of nothing more than their appreciation to Prender for his leadership and friendship to them.

First Row: Bo Berlanda, Jeff Power, Rick Beard. Second Row: Clair Kenyon, Chris Sherk, Dennis Cowher, Russ MacIsaac, Larry Bieber. Missing: Bill Williams.

Golfers Finish At Lycoming

JC's golf team dumped St. Francis, 15½-2½, last week. A meet at Susquehanna was cancelled.

The win over SF gave the Tribe a 7-3 record (with a meet against Lycoming yesterday afternoon not included).

Against SF, junior captain Russ MacIsaac shot a 68 for JC's lowest score this year. MacIsaac defeated Dick Jones, 3-0.

In the other pairs Phil Thompson lost to Mike Barresi, 1-2; Rick Geig beat Art Springsteer, 2½-½; Ken Stevens beat Phil Trimarco, 3-0; Dan David beat Bob Ott, 3-0; and Bob Vanyo beat Tom Suhliuter, 3-0.

Track Team Finishes Season 4-6; Williams Scores At MAC's

The Juniata thinclads closed out their season with a 4 and 6 record after defeating Susquehanna and losing successive meets to Albright and Lycoming and Bucknell.

Against Susquehanna, the big scorers for JC were co-captain Bill Williams, who dominated the three jumping events, and John Stultz, who swept the 100 and 200.

At Albright, the superior depth of the host school proved too much for the Indians. Firsts for JC were recorded by Bill Williams in the triple jump, Bob Monti in the shot, the mile relay team, and Rick Beard in the mile and two mile.

A triangular meet at Lycoming with the host and Bucknell found Juniata on the bottom of the heap as only Bill Williams in the high jump and Rick Beard in the two mile could garner first places.

Bill Williams was the only trackman to meet any success at MAC's as he took a fourth place in the high

With the season ended it is of interest to note several interesting points. Two records were established as sophomore Bob Monti threw the shotput 43' 10" against Albright and frosh Ken Michaelson pole vaulted 12' 6" against PMC and LVC. Bill Williams scored 128 points to far outdistance any other team member in point production. Of final importance is the fact that only triple-jumper Toby Dills will be lost via graduation, so next year should see the maturation of a young team with much talent and, until now, little fulfillment.

Ken Mack and Dick Paulhamus pass the baton in the 440 relay.

Bill Weighley handles the baton in his leg of the mile relay.
